FBI Agents To Tell Of Lynch Probe

Grand Jury Will Hear Evidence In Poplarville Case

COLUMBIA, Miss. (UPI) — A Mississippi district attorney said Saturday evidence in the Poplarville lynching case will be presented to a grand jury through testimony of FBI agents.

Dist. Atty. Vernon Broome said contents of the FBI report turned over to him by Gov. J. P. Coleman would be unfolded by the testimony of the FBI men who compiled it. He described the report itself as "hearsay evidence."

Broome, who received the report Wednesday, said he has started preparing a case and emphasized it would be presented to the Pearl River County grand jury Nov. 4. He said FBI agents would be asked to testify and other witnesses would be called if the grand jury then asks to hear them. "Then it will be up to the jurors to decide what disposition to make," he said.

FBI PLEDGES AID

In New Orleans, R. W. Bachman, FBI agent-in-charge of the month - long investigation of the lynching of Negro Mack Charles Parker last May, promised the agents would testify.

"We will render every possible assistance if requested and will make agents available to testify if requested," he said.

Broome called the 370-page FBI report "e n t i r e l y hearsay evidence" and said it would not be read to the grand jury.

The typewritten document is believed to name at least seven white men as members in the hooded and gloved mob that dragged the 23-year-old Negro from the Pearl River County jail last April 25. Parker was waiting trial on charges of raping Mrs. June Walters, a Petal, Miss., white woman Feb. 24.

Parker's bullet - pierced body was found in the Pearl River May 4.

Gov. Coleman Wednesday sent the report and instructions to Broome and his fellow prosecutor, County Atty. Bill Stewart. Coleman told them to keep the contents of the report confidential, Broome said.

Circuit Judge Sebe Dale, an ardent political foe of Coleman who would preside if the lynchers were brought to trial, commented Saturday he wouldn't want to "violate Coleman's holy writ."

But Dale said there was a possibility that if the contents of the report were not made known to other authorities some of those mentioned in the document would be called for duty on the grand jury.

Dale has said the grand jury

Butler Calls For Junking Bonus Votes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman Paul M. Butler of the Democratic National Committee, proposed Saturday that his party junk its practice of awarding "loyalty" bonuses and set up a "common sense" system of allocating votes at the national nominating convention next year.

Under the plan 28 states and four territories would get more votes than in 1956, 15 would lose some, and seven would maintain the status quo. The total vote would be increased from 1,372 to 1.475.

The party began in 1944 to give bonus votes to states whose electoral votes in the last preceding election were cast for the Demo-

Miss Mississippi Wins In Pageant

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (UPI)— Dark-horse Lynda Lee Mead, of Natchez, gave Mississippi its second consecutive Miss America crown Saturday night by proving that she could think faster on her feet than other finalists in the annual beauty pageant.

Lynda, 20 --year - old brunette with a classic Grecian profile, is five feet seven inches tall, weighs 120 pounds and measures 36-24-36.

She defeated candidates from Arizona, California, the state of Washington and Wisconsin in the final round of the week - long pageant in which 54 girls competed for a crown that will bring the winner up to $100,000 during her year-long reign.

SECOND STRAIGHT

Lynda followed Mary Ann Mobley, of Brandon, as the second straight Miss Mississippi to capture the crown. Not since Pennsylvania had two consecutive victories in 1935 and 1936 has one state had this honor.

Klan Leader Fatally Shot In Alabama

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — A young restaurant owner who received Ku Klux Klan threats because he hired Negro waiters killed a local Klan leader with a shotgun early Saturday, police reported.

William C. Horton, 38, the victim, was gunned down in a rain-swept parking lot of a suburban shopping center while police were investigating reports of trouble between the restaurant man, James B. Peek Jr. 22, and Klan members.

Peck filed complaints with police earlier this week that he had received threats on three occasions from the Klan. Sources said Horton, a supervisor for Alabama Power Co. and father of two children, was a local Klansman and white supremacy advocate.

FACES CHARGES

Detectives said Peek surrendered and admitted the slaying. He was charged with murder.

The shooting occurred while two detectives, G.L. Anrette and E. L. Wright, were investigating a vicious quarrel between the two men.

The officers quoted Peek as saying he shot Horton when the victim pulled a gun on him.

Peek had complained to police that Klan stickers were pasted on the front door of his restaurant. "The KKK is watching you," the stickers said.

Later 40 to 50 Klansmen came to the restaurant, occupied all the chairs and stools, drank coffee and departed without saying a word.

Peek said he also received a letter from the organization ordering him to fire his Negro waiters or take down Confederate flags displayed in the restaurant. He said the Klan accused him of

Senate Gets Bill For U. S. Registrars

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R-NY) introduced a bill Saturday to carry out a recommendation of the Civil Rights Commission for establishment of a system of federal voting registrars.

The registrars would be appointed by the President to serve where necessary to assure Negroes and other minority groups the right to vote for federal officials without discrimination.

Javits said he would offer his bill as an amendment to any civil rights legislation brought before the Senate.

The commission recommended the registrars system in a report to Congress earlier this week. The only member of the commission to dissent was former Gov. John S. Battle of Virginia.

Southern senators have denounced the proposal as a violation of the constitutional right of the states to determine the qualifications of voters.

Alert Is Issued On New Storm

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A new weather disturbance was reported developing at the mouth of the Mississippi River Saturday, just a few hours after Hurricane Flora was dismissed as a threat to the Atlantic Seaboard.

The new storm, part of a cold front now covering the Delta area, was causing winds of 25 miles an hour and seas were reported rough along the Mid-Gulf Coast.

A special bulletin issued by the New Orleans Weather Bureau said pressure is below normal over most of the Gulf of Mexico. "Conditions," it said, "will be watched closely for possible development in the next day or two."

The Miami Weather Bureau officially dismissed Flora as a threat to the mainland in its Noon (EDT) advisory.

Source Here Says Long To File Tuesday

A source close to Gov. Earl K Long said here Saturday that Long will resign and qualify for governor Tuesday at 2 p.m.

"He's decided the people and the c o u r t s should determine whether he will be the next governor of Louisiana," according to his spokesman. "He will resume a vigorous campaign in which he will go directly to the people."

"The governor and his entire ticket will conduct rallies Monday afternoon at Farmerville and Bastrop," it was declared.

SCHEDULED

The governor scheduled a rally on the court house square in Farmerville at 5:30 p.m. Monday and another on the court house square in Bastrop at 7:45 p.m. He also will speak at a noon luncheon in Monroe.

Supporters of the governor said the chief executive underwent rigorous medical tests last week in New Orleans and "the news was very good."

Governor Long's doctors said in New Orleans that "he is showing remarkable improvement."

The governor's medical examination was described as "very comprehensive — they put him through all the tests, blood pressure, X-rays, everything."

Confident that Long's physical condition will be no handicap in the campaign, his supporters predicted that he would return to the stump Monday and open an all-out effort for a fourth term.

Long is scheduled to arrive in Monroe Sunday and be an overnight guest of J. M. (Pete) Menefee, chairman of the Louisiana Racing Commission. Monday at noon he is scheduled to address the Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce before conducting the Farmerville and Bastrop rallies.

After he winds up the Bastrop rally, Gov. Long will return to Monroe and board a plane Monday night for Baton Rouge where he is expected to resign and qualify.

Senate Goes Overtime On Civil Rights

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate, caught up in an adjournment-delaying battle over civil rights, recessed early Sunday after a 15-hour session.

Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) called a halt to a session that had extended into the Sabbath after the civil rights debate had little more than started. The Monday session will start at 9 a. m. (EDT.)

Earlier the Senate had given all but final approval to a $3,218,813,000 foreign aid money bill after the Democratic and Republican leadership combined forces to prevent their heavier cuts in President Eisenhower's requests.

A move to attach to the appropriations bill a rider to extend the life of the Civil Rights Commission for two years launched the Senate on a new scrap late Saturday night.

Expert Says Vehicle May Miss Target

MOSCOW (AP) — A pennant - flying Soviet rocket hurtled on into space Sunday, aiming to put the hammer and sickle on the moon.

After the rocket was launched Saturday, Soviet scientists said they expected its course would put it on the moon at 12:05 a.m. Moscow time Monday.

That would be 4:05 p.m. EST Sunday and less than 48 hours before Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev is due to arrive in the United States for his momentous meeting with President Eisenhower.

STLL IN DOUBT

Shortly before midnight Saturday, however, a dispatch by the science editor of the official Soviet news agency Tass said: "It is difficult to forecast at present whether it will touch the surface of the moon, become a satellite of the moon or become a new planet."

Tass quoted that assessment by Yevgeny Bogoyavlensky, who also said the Soviet scientists might have used a new type of rocket fuel to send the moon projectile aloft.

It said: "The latest Soviet cosmic rocket has been launched in a direction considerably different from that of the first Soviet cosmic rocket. It is to approach the moon in the last quarter of the lunar month, when the moon is passing near the earth's orbit behind the earth.

"The rocket is rushing at cosmic speed to intersect the moon's orbit. It is difficult to forecast at present whether it will touch the surface of the moon, become a satellite of the moon, or become a new planet."

'Con' Serves As Marshal, Postmaster

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP)—A man who escaped from prison while serving a life term for murder says he was both a town marshal and a postmaster in Oregon during his 24 years of freedom.

Taken into custody after eluding authorities since 1935, Glenn Landis, 64, told a reporter that following his escape from the Ohio State Prison farm he worked his way west doing odd jobs. He said for years he had a variety of occupations — cabinetmaker, logger, laborer, handyman.

At one point, he said, he served briefly as the town marshal at Juntura, a little town in eastern Oregon, and as postmaster at tiny Crane, Ore.

For the past 15 years he has lived here, and for much of that time was a part-time employe of the city park department.

It was poor health that led to the discovery of his real identity, said Landis, who had lived here under another name.

Earlier this year, Landis said, he suffered a heart attack, and applied to both the Veterans Administration and the Jackon Coun-

FBI Agents To Tell Of Lynch Probe

Grand Jury Will Hear Evidence In Poplarville Case

COLUMBIA, Miss. (UPI) — A Mississippi district attorney said Saturday evidence in the Poplarville lynching case will be presented to a grand jury through testimony of FBI agents.

EVERYONE DESOLATE

Couple's Wedding Day Plans Go Awry

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—What a day this was to have been for June Hamilton and John Roche.

They were to have been married, in the Church of the Most Blessed Sacrament, in the presence of 200 or more guests.

But there was no bridal bouquet for the 19-year-old June, no satin gown with lace on top.

Instead she lay in a plain white nightgown on a hospital bed, apologizing for "all the trouble I've caused." Flowers perfumed the room, but they had nothing to do with a wedding.

It all started late Friday. June was admiring dozens of wedding presents in her home. Suddenly she was stabbed by acute pain. The pain persisted. A doctor came. Four hours later June was in an operating room at Misericordia Hospital. Her appendix had burst.

John, as might be expected of any 22-year-old frustrated groom in agony over his beloved's health, was desolate.

The elders—the Hamiltons and the Roches—had to act quickly.

The wedding was set for 9 a.m. Flowers had been ordered. The maids of honor and bridesmaids were trying on their gowns. Formal clothes for the best man and the ushers had been delivered. A catered breakfast at the bride's home had been laid on. A 35-pound wedding cake was practically on the way. A hall had been hired for an afternoon-long reception.

The Hamiltons and the Roches were on the phone for hours, late into the night. They canceled all they could—but the job could not be completed.

Twelve guests showed up at the church Saturday. The Hamiltons,

Senate Goes Overtime On Civil Rights

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate, caught up in an adjournment-delaying battle over civil rights, recessed early Sunday after a 15-hour session.

Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) called a halt to a session that had extended into the Sabbath after the civil rights debate had little more than started. The Monday session will start at 9 a. m. (EDT.)

Earlier the Senate had given all but final approval to a $3,218,813,-000 foreign aid money bill after the Democratic and Republican leadership combined forces to prevent their heavier cuts in President Eisenhower's requests.

A move to attach to the appropriations bill a rider to extend the life of the Civil Rights Commission for two years launched the Senate on a new scrap late Saturday night.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin (D-NC) led off a series of Southern Democratic speeches against a move to extend the life of the Civil Rights Commission.

The final hours of debate on the

The "Better Meals Build Better Families Recipe Section," due to appear in today's big Sunday Monroe Morning World has been postponed until Sunday September 20 because the large number of recipes received during the last days of the contest, which ended August 31, did not give us enough time to process them and did not give the Home Economists of the Louisiana Power & Light Co., enough time to judge all of them.

Football Ratings Provide Answers

Another great football season is on its way. Soon 700 college teams will be swinging into action. Then the big question will be:

Who is best?

How do they compare?

Who ought to win?

Do you want to know?

Dick Dunkel's College Football Ratings help to give you the answers at a glance. They present a capsule news story about each team — summarizing its past performance compared to all others.

Called the Power Index Weekly rankings and pre-game comparisons, this informative rating system makes you the expert on football.

The Power Index is essentially a ranking, not a forecasting, system.

Te first of these ratings will appear in The Monroe Morning World Tuesday, following by another on, Wednesday. They will be carried in the

Expert Says Vehicle May Miss Target

MOSCOW (AP) — A pennant - flying Soviet rocket hurtled on into space Sunday, aiming to put the hammer and sickle on the moon.

After the rocket was launched Saturday, Soviet scientists said they expected its course would put it on the moon at 12:05 a.m. Moscow time Monday.

That would be 4:05 p.m. EST Sunday and less than 48 hours before Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev is due to arrive in the United States for his momentous meeting with President Eisenhower.

STLL IN DOUBT

Shortly before midnight Saturday, however, a dispatch by the science editor of the official Soviet news agency Tass said: "It is difficult to forecast at present whether it will touch the surface of the moon, become a satellite of the moon or become a new planet."

Tass quoted that assessment by Yevgeny Bogoyavlensky, who also said the Soviet scientists might have used a new type of rocket fuel to send the moon projectile aloft.

It said: "The latest Soviet cosmic rocket has been launched in a direction considerably different from that of the first Soviet cosmic rocket. It is to approach the moon in the last quarter of the lunar month, when the moon is passing near the earth's orbit behind the earth.

"The rocket is rushing at cosmic speed to intersect the moon's orbit. It is difficult to forecast at present whether it will touch the surface of the moon, become a satellite of the moon, or become a new planet."

In Britain, scientists at Jodrell Bank—home of the world's most powerful radio telescope — said

'Con' Serves As Marshal, Postmaster

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP)—A man who escaped from prison while serving a life term for murder says he was both a town marshal and a postmaster in Oregon during his 24 years of freedom.

Taken into custody after eluding authorities since 1935, Glenn Landis, 64, told a reporter that following his escape from the Ohio State Prison farm he worked his way west doing odd jobs. He said for years he had a variety of occupations — cabinetmaker, logger, laborer, handyman.

At one point, he said, he served briefly as the town marshal at Juntura, a little town in eastern Oregon, and as postmaster at tiny Crane, Ore.

For the past 15 years he has lived here, and for much of that time was a part-time employe of the city park department.

It was poor health that led to the discovery of his real identity, said Landis, who had lived here under another name.

Earlier this year, Landis said, he suffered a heart attack, and applied to both the Veterans Administration and the Jackon Coun-

U.N. Security Group Leaves

Laos says its northern neighbor, North Viet Nam, is aiding Communist-led rebels inside Laos with troops and supplies.

ON EUROPEAN TOUR

Visitor Impressed By Russian People

SIMMS McCLINTOCK

CROSSETT, Ark. (Special) — A Crossett school teacher, just returned from three months of visiting ten European countries. Was most impressed by the people of Russia — the ordianry, every-day people who came up to him on the streets, in the parks, and on the conducted tours and said. "You're an American? I want to talk to you!"

Those people wanted to know about him as an American. They wanted to know about his job, his home, the music of America, how much his clothes cost, if he owned a car, what the schools in America are like, and what Americans are thinking and doing. Sand Simms McClintock, history teacher of Crossett High School, rejoiced in telling them — and in smuggling to them as many as possible books which they reached for with eager hands.

Those books were paper-back editions of the United States Constitution — how it came into being, and how it works, books on our economics, about our schools, and even one on American jazz.

MANY PLACES

McClintock, whose trip included stops of varying length in Ireland, England, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany — and 23 days in Russia, went prepared to take as long and deep a look behind the Iron Curtain as possible.

As he passed by train from Helsinki to Leningrad, he saw that the term, "Iron Curtain," was no figure of Winston Churchill's imagination, but that it is very real and quite visible. His train passed through the double line of high steel fences bristling with rows and rows of barbed wire, and punctuated at frequent intervals by guard towers with powerful flashlights and armed men. The Iron Curtain has teeth and claws, and eyes that pierce the darkness of night, lest anyone try to slip through it in either direction.

It was in Leningrad that he first noticed that there were almost no churches — none which still hold services. Russia is preserving, and even restoring, her great cathedrals and churches while have historical or artistic merit. However, they are being preserved as museums, and not as places for worship.

Other less distinguished churches are being used as warehouses, businesses, and McClintock saw one being used as a storage house for tomatoes. He asked his guide in St. Isaacs Cathedral in Leningrad about the church attendance — or rather lack of it — and she replied, "Smart people in Russia don't go to church," adding quietly, "There are too many ears around for me to say any more."

Other people he questioned on the subject told him that if one went to church he would lose his job. Although McClintock attended two services in Russia, he saw mostly old women and crippled men there.

TO LENINGRAD

The Crossett teacher flew from Leningrad by Russian jet the approximate 700 miles south to Kiev, the capitol of the Ukranian Socialist Republic. Kiev is a very ancient city, dating back to soon after the birth of Christ. Most interesting there were the Catacombs.

The labyrinthine tunnels were originally natural caves where the ancient people lived. However, they later became places of burial for distinguished monks, and a little monastery was built on the side of the hill over the growing tunnels. A third period in the Christian history of Russia is represented by a huge monastery of more recent vintage built higher on the mountainside. This one was mostly destroyed during World War II by the Germans.

From Kiev, McClintock traveled by train south over 300 miles to the great Black Sea port of Odessa. There he was interested in noting in their war museums that Russia allegedly won the World wars almost single-handed. America was rarely mentioned at all, and then only in very fine print and as playing a minor role in any of the conflict. This version of the Wars was, of course, not in complete agreement with history teacher, Simms McClintock's, studies.

More Black Sea sailing took him to Yalta, where he saw that the Czars' palace in which the famous Yalta Conference took place has been converted to a sanitarium. Then on by boat to Sochi, at the eastern end of the Black Sea, which he found to be a very beautiful semi-tropical resort, with palm trees and other vegetation and climate much like that of New Orleans.

On his return back north toward Moscow he visited Tbilisi, capitol of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic, and Stalin's home town. A long flight to Karkov was made noteworthy by the skill of the Russian pilot, "who missed every cow in the pasture we came down in" (to pick up a passenger). Simms noted that his seat belt in the old plane had been broken and sewed back together with a needle and thread. While they waited in the pasture for the pilot to pick up his passenger one of the crew got out with a big file and filed away at a propellar for some reason not explained to the passengers. In Karkov, with its temperature of 104 degrees Fahrenheit, he noted that he had found no air conditioning in his entire trip over Russia. It utrned up later in the tomb of Lenin and Stalin.

TO PROVIDE BETTER JOBS

Business Firms Plan Expansion

By WALTER BREEDE JR.
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Higher taxes, higher interest rates and higher prices loomed for many Americans this week. Also ahead was the pleasanter prospect of more and better paying jobs.

The promise of bigger opportunities and fatter paychecks came from two sources: the almost sure-fire certainty of a spurt in industrial production after settlement of the long steel strike, and the ambitious expansion plans of many blue chip business firms.

Business spending on new plant and equipment this year is expected to total over 33¼ billion dollars. That's how government economists see the picture now. The figure is 700 million dollars more than they estimated three months ago. If the steel strike is settled soon the total should go even higher.

A good chunk of this year's business spending will go into laboratories and testing plants where new processes and new products will be developed. Six hundred big companies polled by the American Management Assn. plan to boost their 1959 outlays for research and development by an average of 12 per cent over 1958.

Stock sales for the latest week totaled 11,138,515 shares compared with 11,576,180 shares in the week before and 15,730,680 in the same 1958 week. Bond sales in the latest week had a par value of $27,286,500 against $26,998,000 in the previous week and $24,749,000 in the same week last year.

Looking into 1960 and beyond, the Aluminum Co. of America announced plans for a multi-million-dollar research and development center to be built on a sprawling 2,400-acre tract near Pittsburgh.

General Dynamics Corp. — builder of jet bombers and atomic powered submarines — arranged for a 20-year, 5½ per cent loan of 20 million dollars. Frank Pace Jr., chairman, said the extra cash will put the company in better shape to grasp "new opportunities for business indicated by scientific research."

Other favorable economic signposts:

Despite the steel strike, employment totaled 67,241,000 last month —highest for any August on record. Unemployment, the estimated number of Americans out of a job and looking for work, declined 3118,000 to 3,426,000.

Department store sales in the week ended Sept. 5 showed a 20 per cent gain over last year. Retailers had the beneifit of an extra shopping day (in 1958 Labor Day fell on Sept. 1 vs. Sept. 7 this year). Back-to-school buying—off to a late but vigorous start—also contributed to the upturn.

Merchants say the high school crowd is more clothes-conscious this year—"sloppy Joe" attire is going out. What's more, the teenagers have lots of cash and the like to spend it.

You'll spend more for a gallon of gasoline in the months ahead. Starting Oct. 1, the federal tax on gasoline goes up to four cents a gallon from the three cents you're paying now. In most states this will boost the combined federal and state tax to at least 10 cents a gallon, or about one-third the total price.

Economy in gasoline consumption was the keynote this week as the auto industry unveiled two more of its lightweight, compact models. General Motors' Chevrolet division gave newsmen a peek at its Corvair whose rear-mounted engine will squeeze 25 to 30 miles out of a gallon of gas. The lowest-priced Corvair lists at $1,810 plus taxes and dealer handling charges.

Will Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell eat his hat?

Last spring, Mitchell made a bet that the month of October would find unemployment down below three million. Otherwise, he said, he'd eat his hat on the steps of the Labor Department Building.

This week the labor secretary's hat-munching seemed to hinge on an early and successful end of steel strike negotiations which have been getting nowhere fast.

Unemployment totals do not include the 500,000 striking steel workers but they do include 145,000 in other industries made idle by the shutdown. If the strike lasts through Oct. 15 the number could swell to 200,000.

Briefly over the business scene: The upward trend in interest rates was confirmed this week when most of the nation's federal reserve banks raised their discount rate to 4 per cent, highest in 29 years. This is the interest paid by commercial banks on the funds they borrow from the central banking system. . . . The steel strike held freight car loadings in the week ended Sept. 5 down to 544,089 cars—about 165,000 below normal. . . . A drought which has dried up the clear, cold streams of Scotland is drying up supplies of Scotch whisky. Distillers use the brook water for their product.

Heart Council Holds Meet In Franklin

WINNSBORO (Special) — A parish wide meeting of the Heart Council was held here Thursday night with Pat Mitchell, of Monroe, area director of 19 parishes attending.

Films were shown of the work in research that is being done through the money donated to the Heart Council.

The past year Franklin parish was near the bottom of the list in fulfilling its obligation to make an effort to eradicate the number one killer, heart disease.

The next meeting will be held October 13 at the Franklin Parish Library. Other films will be shown. The meeting will be open to the public.

The Heart Drive takes place in February. Part of the money donated at this time is used to aid the people with heart disease in Franklin parish.

ON ANCIENT MYSTERIES

Soviet Moon Shot May Provide Data

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Reporter

NEW YORK (AP) — Russia's moon shot could do far more than score another prestige victory for the Soviet in this space age. It could answer some ancient mysteries about the moon.

Scientists want to know whether the moon has a magnetic field and whether it wears a halo of radiation as the earth does.

The 850-pound Soviet lunar prove presumably carries instruments to answer such questions. These would include instruments to test radiation near the moon, and a magnetometer to detect magnetic fields.

If the probe strikes the moon, it might be rigged to create an explosion which if visible could show whether the moon surface is covered deep with moondust, or whether it has a very rocky crust.

Many scientists lean to the theory that the moon is coated with rocks pulverized by the great extremes of heat and cold which the moon undergoes as it turns its face toward and away from the sun.

The confident announcement that the probe is expected to strike the moon means the Russians are quite sure of its course or their ability to control it.

By custom, the Soviets never claim more than they deliver. To do this, they never announce space shots in advance, and never announce any failures.

With its weight, their probe easily could carry small rockets to control their aim for the moon, or even could make a gentle landing.

Retro or backward firing rockets could slow the probe's speed as it nears the moon in order to assure the rendezvous. Radio signals would fire rockets.

U.S. scientists reportedly will shoot for the moon early in October when the moon is nearest.

This rocket, weighing about 350 pounds, will be equipped with retro rockets. If the probe were traveling too fast its speed could be braked down so it could better intercept the moon or be more influenced by the moon's tug of gravity when it came near.

There are outside hopes this October probe might even fall into orbit around the moon.

Last spring, Mitchell made a bet that the month of October would find unemployment down below three million. Otherwise, he said, he'd eat his hat on the steps of the Labor Department Building.

This week the labor secretary's hat-munching seemed to hinge on an early and successful end of steel strike negotiations which have been getting nowhere fast.

Unemployment totals do not include the 500,000 striking steel workers but they do include 145,000 in other industries made idle by the shutdown. If the strike lasts through Oct. 15 the number could swell to 200,000.

Briefly over the business scene: The upward trend in interest rates was confirmed this week when most of the nation's federal reserve banks raised their discount rate to 4 per cent, highest in 29 years. This is the interest paid by commercial banks on the funds they borrow from the central banking system. . . . The steel strike held freight car loadings in the week ended Sept. 5 down to 544,089 cars—about 165,000 below normal. . . . A drought which has dried up the clear, cold streams of Scotland is drying up supplies of Scotch whisky. Distillers use the brook water for their product.

ON ANCIENT MYSTERIES

Soviet Moon Shot May Provide Data

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Reporter

NEW YORK (AP) — Russia's moon shot could do far more than score another prestige victory for the Soviet in this space age. It could answer some ancient mysteries about the moon.

Scientists want to know whether the moon has a magnetic field and whether it wears a halo of radiation as the earth does.

The 850-pound Soviet lunar prove presumably carries instruments to answer such questions. These would include instruments to test radiation near the moon, and a magnetometer to detect magnetic fields.

If the probe strikes the moon, it might be rigged to create an explosion which if visible could show whether the moon surface is covered deep with moondust, or whether it has a very rocky crust.

Many scientists lean to the theory that the moon is coated with rocks pulverized by the great extremes of heat and cold which the moon undergoes as it turns its face toward and away from the sun.

The confident announcement that the probe is expected to strike the moon means the Russians are quite sure of its course or their ability to control it.

By custom, the Soviets never claim more than they deliver. To do this, they never announce space shots in advance, and never announce any failures.

With its weight, their probe easily could carry small rockets to control their aim for the moon, or even could make a gentle landing.

Retro or backward firing rockets could slow the probe's speed as it nears the moon in order to assure the rendezvous. Radio signals would fire rockets.

U.S. scientists reportedly will shoot for the moon early in October when the moon is nearest.

This rocket, weighing about 350 pounds, will be equipped with retro rockets. If the probe were traveling too fast its speed could be braked down so it could better intercept the moon or be more influenced by the moon's tug of gravity when it came near.

There are outside hopes this October probe might even fall into orbit around the moon.

B. R. Patton Enters Race For Senate

FARMERVILLE (Special) — B. R. Patton yesterday announced his candidacy for re-election to the state senate from the 28th Senatorial District.

Sen. Patton represents the parishes of Lincoln and Union in the state senate.

Sen. Patton's statement said in part:

STATEMENT

"I take this means to announce my candidacy for re-election to the State Senate from this, the twenty-eighth Senatorial District, which is composed of Union and Lincoln Parishes. I am an independent candidate connected with no group or faction, but if re-elected I will cooperate, as I have in the past, with any other officials whom the voters see fit to elect.

"I am a lifelong resident of this district, having been born and reared at Hico in Lincoln Parish. I am thirty-nine years old, married and the father of three children. I am a ten point veteran of World War II with four battle stars and the Presidential Citation. I spent almost four years in the army, with two years of combat duty. I am a member of the First Baptist Church of Farmerville, a 32nd Degree Mason, a Shriner, a member of the American Legion, and a Woodman of the World; and was graduated from the St. Louis College of Mortuary Science.

"I am a member of the following Legislative Committees: Commerce and Industry, Education, Health and Welfare, Institutions and Segregation. All of these are very important committees, especially the Segregation Committee, better known as the Rainach "Watchdog" Committee. We have helped draft and place on the books practically all the laws which we have to help protect us from integration in our schools. You can see from the stand that I have taken, that I are 100 per cent for segregation and our Southern Way of Life.

"During the past term which I have served as your senator, I have worked diligently, honestly and to the best of my ability for the betterment of this district. I do not wish to take all the credit for the improvements in this district, but have worked hard with the other officials to bring to this district some of the things it needed so badly. Since my time in office, which has been just over three years, you have received more than twice the amount of new black-topped roads that you received in the previous four year period, and this does not include the overlaying of Highway 167 from Junction City, Arkansas to the Jackson Parish line, or the Dubach-Homer road to the Claiborne Parish line. This is just one improvement which is a public record which you may check for your own satisfaction.

"I have also worked hard to promote the D'Arbonne Lake project, for which we were able to get a million dollars and the contract will be let on the project soon....."

U.S. Denies Red Newsmen Visas To Cover Khrush

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has decided that newsmen from East Germany, Red China, North Korea and North Viet Nam will be denied visas to come here to cover the visit of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

State Department sources said that only three East German reporters had sought the visas. Their applications were made to U.S. consular offices, chiefly in Berlin and turned down after review.

The department's disclosure followed announcement in Berlin that Communist East Germany has sent a letter of protest to the United States.

Steel Strike Talks Recess Until Monday

NEW YORK (UPI)— Wage negotiators, responding to President Eisenhower's plea for a speed-up in bargaining, met for the first time on a Saturday since the 60-day steel strike began.

After the two-hour session, Deputy federal mediator Robert H. Moore summed it up by saying "nothing new."

The talks were recessed until 10 a.m. Monday.

The lack of announced progress apparently meant the negotiations still were stalemated over the central wage issue. The 12 major steel companies have offered a "status quo" contract extension as an anti-inflation measure, while the United Steelworkers Union has demanded a 15-cent package increase.

David J. McDonald, president of the union, and R. Conrad Cooper, chief industry negotiator, had no comment to make on the status of the strike after the session.

The two top-levelt eams headed by them have sought to find some way of settling the wage issue without avail.

While those two teams met, 12 subcommittees held separate sessions to discuss local work problems on a company-by - company basis.

Moore said that the "primary activity is still in the subcommittee area" at this stage of the negotiations.

The subcommittees, he said, "are not losing any ground, but it is hard to assess the improvements."

McDonald said he planned to stay here over the weekend. Cooper is going to Pittsburgh, while chief federal mediator Joseph F. Finnegan planned to go to Washington and return to New York Sunday night.

The explosion left the building a brick shell with the floors buckled, roof caved in and furnishings twisted.

The new hospital was a parish project ready to be opened in two weeks. Sheriff Wooton, chairman of the fund rising committee, said "We were just waiting for the access roads to be completed."

Jesse H. Holmes, one of nine workers on the job at the time, said he was about 20 feet from the boiler room when the blast knocked him several feet.

He said there was one loud blast in the boiler room and then flames shot up.

Sheriff Wooton expressed the view that the explosion was accidental.

If nine such complaints are filed from the same registration district within one year, the President would refer them to the Civil Rights Commission for investigation.

If the commission upheld the allegations, the President would designate a federal officer or employe in the area to serve as a temporary federal registrar.

The registrar would enroll all qualified individuals seeking to vote in federal elections until such time as the President determines that no citizens in the district are being denied the right to vote solely because of race, religion, color, or national origin.

Peek said he dismissed his white waitresses because they were under 21 and could not work in an establishment that served beer. He refused to take down the flags.

Arnette and Wright said peek and Horton had argued at the steak house before the shooting.

The officers quoted Peek as saying someone who identified himself as Horton called him after the argument and told him "they would settle this" if he would meet him at Normandale, a large shopping suburb.

The detectives said Peek contacted his father, James B. Peek Sr., and the latter telephoned police. The officer said they met the father and son at the shopping center and were headed toward the father's house when the younger Peek apparentty returned to the parking lot and shot Horton.

Similar telegrams were sent to Broome and Gov. Coleman. They urged Coleman to "use the full authority of your office to assure the safety and rights of all citizens in Mississippi and take all possible steps to get court action in the case of Mack Charles Parker's murder."

Butler Calls For Junking Bonus Votes

cratic presidential candidate. "Bonuses on top of bonuses" have been added since.

"The bonus system is not fair or equitable," Butler told committee members. "It invariably results in inequities for the medium and larger states."

He asked the committee to drop the bonus system completely and allocate votes on this formula:

Increase the number of votes for each U.S. senator from two to three.

Increase the number of votes for each House member from two to two and a half.

Make members of the National Committee ex-officio delegates to the convention, with a half-vote each, in addition to the states' basic number of votes.

"I know that no formula which can be devised would be considered to be fair and equitable for all states," Butler said. "It is regrettable that any state should suffer a reduction of the number of its delegates and alternates, but existing inequities should be eliminated."

The southern states, whose leaders have been conducting a running feud with Butler, would fare rather well under such a change. Of the Deep South states, only Arkansas, Florida and Tennessee would lose votes. Some border states would lose several.

But none of the so-called "states rights" states which bolted the presidential ticket in 1948 in protest against a civil rights plank would be penalized under Butler's proposal. These were South Carolina, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama. All but Mississippi would pick up votes. Mississippi would keep what it has.

Butler's current troubles with the South hinges on his determination to impose a party "loyalty" rule on all convention delegates requiring them to support whatever presidential ticket is chosen. Use of the rule caused a party split in 1952 but party leaders believe the present dispute will be settled amicably.

Fulbright Says Khrushchev To Meet Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark) said Saturday that Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev has accepted an invitation to meet with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday.

Fulbright, chairman of the committee, extended the invitation through the State Department. The Soviet leader was invited to meet with the committee and Senate leaders, in the committee room at the Capitol.

Word that Khrushchev could fit the informal meeting into his schedule has reached committee officials.

Fulbright told a reporter the meeting, over coffee cups, would give members of the committee and other invited senators, including leaders of both parties, a chance to question Khrushchev on Soviet-American differences.

He said a luncheon such as was given for Dep. Premier's Anastas Mikoyan and Frol Koslov on their recent visits was ruled out by Khrushchev's acceptance of an invitation to address a National Press Club luncheon.

17 Are Arrested For Narcotics Peddling In N.O.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With the use of undercover work police here have arrested 17 alleged narcotics peddlers, some of whom had prison records and were out on bond.

For 14 months a brave young undercover officer penetrated the dark corners of the dope world and made purchases while pretending to be under the influence of narcotics.

At one stage of the game suspicions were aroused and to offset the suspicion the policeman's superiors had him arrested and charged. The officer was taken to prison for two weeks and then released on bond.

Miss Mississippi Wins In Pageant

Washington State, Sharon J. Vaughn, 21, of Seattle, and first runner-up was Miss Wisconsin, Mary Fox, 20, of Sheboygan.

Miss Mississippi captured the crown without having won a single preliminary event in the contest.

After she was crowned, she walked the 110-foot length of the ramp into Atlanta City's Convention Hall to the cheers of a capacity crowd of 18,000 persons.

She was biting her lip and fighting back the tears as she took the long walk.

Lynda is a junior at the University of Mississippi. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert William Mean, Natchez. Her father manages a Ford automobile agency.

Not only was Lynda following Mary Ann Mobley as Miss America, but she also is a sorority sister of Miss Mobley in Chi Omega.

Before winning the contest she wanted to be Miss America "because I think it is the pinnacle of achievement for any American girl and it would allow me to further my education and to meet some of the great people in the United States that I wouldn't meet otherwise."

After going through evening gown, swim suit and talent competition Saturday night, the five top girls were required to answer questions to test their ability to think fast.

The first questions asked by the master of ceremonies of Lynda was: "You are proficient at Tennis or golf. You know you can beat your date. Would you or should you?"

Lynda's answer was, "I wouldn't and I shouldn't, because I'd never see him again if I did. I've had that experience before."

She added, that it happened once on a tennis date. She beat the boy she was playing with, and it was only the second time she had played.

The second question asked of Lynda was: "If you have a daughter, what guidance and advice will you give her to prepare her for life today?"

"I would tell her," Lynda said, "to endeavor to understand herself and to realize the things she needs to make herself happy, because so many of us don't know what we need to be happy, and I would tell her to trust in herself and trust in God."

Lynda was "Miss University," "Colonel's Lady and Parade of Favorites" winner at the University of Mississippi. Her brother, Herbert Mead Jr., was king of the month-long historic pilgrimage in Natchez in 1956.

The green-eyed beauty carried as a good luck charm in the contest a bracelet given to her by an aunt. It has her name on one side and a four-leaf clover on the other.

Lynda's parents were brought on the stage and introduced to the audience. Her mother, a small grey-haired woman said she had not expected her daughter to win.

Her father was asked what he did for a living. He announced in a loud voice that he sold Ford automobiles. This brought a big laugh from the audience, because one of the sponsors of the pageant is Oldsmobile.

In her talent competition, Lynda did an original dramtic reading entitled "Schizophrenia," in which she declared she did not know who she really was. With various props, she ran the gamut from Cleopatra to a "Kooky" or "beatnik."

In the final bathing suit competition she wore a white swim suit as she paraded before the television cameras which carried the final round of the contest.

She also wore white in the evening gown competition.

Miss America and the four runners-up were chosen from a final field of 10 that survived the gurelling competition.

The other five were Illinois' Suzanne Johnson, of Chicago: Canada's Rosemary Keenan, of Fredericton, N. B.; New York State's Bonnie Jo Marquis, of Huntington; Pennsylvania's Lois Piercy, of Springfield, and Tennessee's Marion Wayland, of Knoxville.

The judges also announced the winners of $1,000 sholarships to girls who did not make the finals. These were awarded as follows:

Most Talented Dancer, Miss Texas, Marilyn Turner of Fort Worth.

Most Talented Musician, Miss Vermont, Brenda Naatz, of St. Johnsonsbury, and Miss Oklahoma, Mary Hazelton of Tulsa.

Most Talented Actress, Miss Alabama, Betty Jane Lindstrom of Birmingham, and Miss Kansas, Sharon O'Neil of Kansas City.

Most talented in all other fields, Miss Virginia, Alice Williams of Richmond, who displayed her skill in dress-making.

Earlier the contenders themselves picked "Miss Congeniality." They chose Hawaii's perky little Gordean Leilehua Lee, who is working her way through college dancing the hula.

Couple's Wedding Day Plans Go Awry

the Roches and a forlorn John were there to tell them why there would be no wedding as scheduled.

The nuns at Misericordia are usually strict about visiting hours. Saturday, however, they were indulgent toward those who came at odd times to see June.

When June had a moment alone with John, she said: "If it's okay with you — and the doctor — let's make it the 26th. And hope nothing else happens."

"Sure, Sept. 26 it is," John agreed.

Still bemused, John went home. Absently, he picked up the mail and went in. His attention eventually was drawn to an official-looking letter.

It was from Uncle Sam, telling him to report for his draft board physical in five days.

Tragedy Strikes Twice In Short Time For Man

At 12:25 p.m., his son, Carl O. Veith, co-owner of a Chester auto repair shop, was shot to death while eating lunch in his home.

Some 45 minutes later, the elder Veith was notified his wife, Susanna, 71, collapsed and died of a heart attack while visiting friends in Asbury Park, N.J. She was not aware of her son's death.

Shortly after learning of his wife's death, the father went to the Chester Police Station to attend the hearing in which his son's wife, Hazel, 21, was held without bail for court, charged with her husband's murder.

The brief hearing was over when Veith arrived. His daughter-in-law, who is expecting her third child, ran crying into his arms. Veith embraced her and said:

"I don't hold anything against you."

Mrs. Veith told police her husband was unfaithful. She said, however, she didn't mean to shoot him, "only frighten him."

Senate Goes Overtime On Civil Rights

foreign aid appropriations was marked by such a sharp exchange between Sens. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark) and Thomas J. Dodd (D-Conn) that the Senate voted to expunge their remarks from the record.

The flareup occurred just before Sen. Styles Bridges (R-NH) chairman of the Senate GOP Policy Committee, won adoption of an amendment earmarking 50 million dollars of defense economic support funds for Spain.

He did so over the opposition of Fulbright, Foreign Relations Committee chairman, by a roll call vote of 49 to 38. Dodd called it odd that Fulbright had raised a point of order against a provision to aid this ally against communism.

Fulbright retorted by asking Dodd if he (Dodd) was retained by Guatemala when he offered an amendment as a member of the House to earmark five million dollars for that country in another bill.

Dodd, who was a registered representative of the Guatemala government after he left the House, hotly replied in the negative. Both later agreed to having their remajks removed from the record and a motion to that effect was passed on a voice vote.

But the big battle started on civil rights. The extension measure was offered as an amendment to the same foreign aid money bill and ran into a point of order by Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga).

When it was sustained Chairman Carl Hayden (D-Ariz) of the Senate Appropriations Committee moved to suspend the rules on which a vote may come Monday. It would require the votes of two-thirds of the senators present and voting.

The leadership hoped to get a final vote in time to permit an adjournment Monday.

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating (-NY) began a speech in support of the move about eight minutes before midnight Saturday. He said it would take him about an hour to deliver it if he had no interruptions.

Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore), who has been doing his best to slow down the congressional adjournment drive, asked Johnson if he would consider adjourning at that point until Monday.

Morse said he questioned the advisability of Keating's starting a speech with so few senators present.

Johnson made no immediate reply, and when Morse asked if he had heard him, he said he had but did not wish to make any reply.

Morse, settling back into his chair, said he would be willing to listen to the introduction of Keing's speech before suggesting the absence of quorum. Only about a dozen senators were in the cham at the time.

Soon after Keating began his speech, Johnson got up and moved that the Senate adjourn until 9 a.m. (EDT) Monday.

The House had met briefly in the wan hope that this might be getaway day of a session which has lasted more than eight months. It sent to the White House a compromise bill permitting an increase in interest rates on government savings bonds.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex) got House passage of a resolution to adjourn Monday. But Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas was not at all sure the Senate could dispose of the civil rights matter by then.

Morse was reported to have told leaders of both parties, however, that he would not throw up new roadblocks against a Monday adjournment—if the Dixie senators finished their token but highly vocal resistance then against continuing the existence of the Civil Rights Commission.

Firemen Report Light Activity

Monroe firemen reported a relatively quiet day yesterday, with two alarms in the city. Neither was serious, they reported.

No fires during the day were reported by West Monroe firemen.

Expert Says Vehicle May Miss Target

the lunar rocket was beeping out signals right along after midnight. They said it was more than 100,000 miles from the earth.

Discussing the rocket power, Bogoyavlensky said: "There is every reason to suppose that such outstanding results have been achieved owing to the successes of Soviet science in developing new rocket fuels. Apparently the United States still has no such fuel since it has not attempted to launch a rocket this year after four failures between August and December 1958."

The giant Soviet rocket blasted off Saturday, carrying the Soviet banner and a mass of intricate equipment. Soviet scientists said it was on course and sending back information in a steady stream.

A consultant at the Moscow planetarium said that with the rocket's present course, "it must hit the moon." A scientific spokesman for the planetarium added: "As I read the official announcement the rocket is expected to hit the moon at five minutes after midnight Monday morning" that would be 4:05 p.m. Eastern Standard Time Sunday.

This language appeared to fix more definitely the idea that the rocket is heading straight for the moon and not intended to go around it.

Even if the rocket does not make a direct hit and goes into a lunar orbit, it would be the first man-made object to do so. If it whizzes by the moon's gravitational field, it will join another Soviet rocket — Mechta — and America's Pioneer IV now orbiting around the sun.

Should Khrushchev arrive in the United States as leader of the first country to put a standard on the moon it seemed here he would be surrounded with spectacular new prestige.

Diplomats felt such an accomplishment could hardly fail to add weight to his opinion in the Washington talks, with President Eisenhower and boost his international position elsewhere.

The final stage of the rocket carried an inscription saying "September 1959," to mark the date. Scientists here expressed no doubt the rocket would reach its goal.

Aleksandr Topchiyev, vice president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, said it was following the scheduled trajectory. Moscow radio reported all scientific and telemetric and radio transmission instruments functioning normally.

Throughout the Soviet Union, millions listened to the radio broadcasting evenly spaced signals from the rocket as it soared through space. Across Red Square from the Kremlin, the aisles of the GUM department store were jammed as the tone came over loudspeakers.

In the diplomatic field, Khrushchev conferred with Indian Ambassador K. P. S. Menon on means of quieting tension on the India-China border. He also conferred with Walter Ulbricht, Red boss of East Germany, and Maurice Thorez, French Communist chief.

Russians took the rocket news enthusiastically. Their enthusiasm for Khrushchev's trip continued high.

The news broke dramatically at 2:35 p.m. Moscow time. Some seven or eight minutes previously, the radio had interrupted a program of popular music. There was about five minutes of silence, which usually heralds important news here. People flocked around loudspeakers.

Then there was a two-minute repetition of the first bars of the "Internationale," played on chimes.

Suddenly, a male voice began in calm and measured tones:

"Tass statement on launching of rocket to the moon . . ."

Tass said the scientific capsule separated from the final stage of the rocket at 3 p.m. local time. The announcement referred to the last stage of the rocket as "guided"—terminology not fully explained here.

One Soviet science writer said it appeared both the rocket and the container would land on the moon. He explained the theory was for the last-stage rocket to eject the instrument capsule and have both continue onward toward the moon.

(Some scientists in Washington said that from a strictly technical point of view, the Soviets had gambled on a less favorable date for their new moon shot. From a propaganda standpoint, however, the shot would be well timed to coincide with Khrushchev's trip.

(U.S. scientists were reported waiting until October to make their next shot at the moon, a 375-pound space capsule. Scientists in Washington said this time of the month is least favorable because the moon is farther away from the earth. The moon and the earth will be at their closest, 220,000 miles, for three days starting Oct. 2.)

The newest Soviet rocket precedes Khrushchev's trip just as the first announced Soviet moon shot came shortly before the January U.S. visit by Anastas Mikoyan, first deputy premier and one of Khrushchev's right-hand men.

Thus the Soviet Union has been building up a publicity backlog of scientific achievements. Morning papers here dwelt heavily on the fact the new atomic icebreaker Lenin was to be moved during the day into Leningrad's Neva River for cruising trials.

Apparently confident of success, the Soviets distributed a bulletin on the rocket's progress only hours after its launching.

The first announcement put it at 78,500 kilometers—about 43,670 miles—above the surface of the earth. Several hours later it was reported 101,000 kilometers—68,200 miles—above the earth.

"It is expected that the Cosmic rocket will reach the moon on Sept. 14 at 12:05 a.m. Moscow time—4:05 p.m., Eastern Standard Time, Sunday," the announcement said.

Authorities Assert Mob Story False

WOODVILLE, Miss. (UPI) — Wilkinson County authorities Saturday called untrue a Negro minister's charges he was chased out of Mississippi by a lynch mob.

Authorities also denied charges by the Rev. Harrison Dupre that a Negro undertaker was slain because he was involved in a National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People movement.

They indicated no investigation of the charges was planned.

Dupre said he was forced to flee Fort Adams, Miss., a community about 100 miles west of Poplarville where Negro Mack Charles Parker was lynched April 25. He told the all-Negro National Baptist Convention in San Francisco a white mob came to his home to get him, apparently because of a mistaken idea that he was soliciting funds for the NAACP. He said the incident, which occurred Aug. 27, followed the fatal shooting last month of Sam O'Quince, for similar reasons.

"I know that there hasn't been any mob," said Sheriff J. T. Falkenheimer. "There hasn't been any report to me about it and I'd be the first to know. I don't think there is anything to any of it."

But the sheriff said, "I don't doubt that somebody went and talked to him."

Asked if he would investigate Dupre's charges, the sheriff said, "nobody has made any complaint to me yet."

Falkenheimer said he was still investigating the O'Quince slaying but "so far we haven't come up with anything." He repeated his belief that the ambush shooting of the Negro undertaker had nothing to do with racial tension.

Falkenhimer said he believed O'Quince, who also owned a cafe here and was described as "prominent," was killed by another Negro.

O'Quince was shot late at night as he got from his car to open the gate of his farm about 10 miles south of here. His wife was in the car and said "somebody behind a bush" fired the fatal shot.

Morrison Plans Industry Drive If He Wins Race

KROTZ SPRINGS, La. (AP)—Mayor deLesseps Morrison of New Orleans Saturday promised new industries for small towns if elected governor.

"What I did for New Orleans I can do for Louisiana" and Krotz Springs, Opelousas, Lafayette and all the towns in the state, Morrison said.

He said in the 14 years he has been mayor, "industries worth many hundreds of millions of dollars have moved into the New Orleans area."

Morrison said these industries had to be sold on coming to New Orleans "and I'm one of the men who did the selling job."

He added he would have a full-time, 24-hour-a-day industrial commission to bring new industry to the state.

Morrison also spoke at Ville Platte, Opelousas, Sunset and on television in Lafayette.

If nine such complaints are filed from the same registration district within one year, the President would refer them to the Civil Rights Commission for investigation.

If the commission upheld the allegations, the President would designate a federal officer or employe in the area to serve as a temporary federal registrar.

Peek said he dismissed his white waitresses because they were under 21 and could not work in an establishment that served beer. He refused to take down the flags.

Arnette and Wright said peek and Horton had argued at the steak house before the shooting.

The officers quoted Peek as saying someone who identified himself as Horton called him after the argument and told him "they would settle this" if he would meet him at Normandale, a large shopping suburb.

The detectives said Peek contacted his father, James B. Peek Sr., and the latter telephond police. The officer said they met the father and son at the shopping center and were headed toward the father's house when the younger Peek apparently reached to the parking lot and shot Horton.

Butler Calls For Junking Bonus Votes

cratic presidential candidate. "Bonuses on top of bonuses" have been added since.

"The bonus system is not fair or equitable," Butler told committee members. "It invariably results in inequities for the medium and larger states."

He asked the committee to drop the bonus system completely and allocate votes on this formula:

Increase the number of votes for each U.S. senator from two to three.

Increase the number of votes for each House member from two to two and a half.

Make members of the National Committee ex-officio delegates to the convention, with a half - vote each, not charged to the states' basic number of votes.

"I know that no formula which can be devised would be considered to be fair and equitable for all states," Butler said. "It is regrettable that any state should suffer a reduction of the number of its delegates and alternates, but existing inequities should be eliminated."

The southern states, whose leaders have been conducting a running feud with Butler, would fare rather well under such a change. Of the Deep South states, only Arkansas, Florida and Tennessee would lose votes. Some border states would lose several.

But none of the so - called "states rights" states which bolted the presidential ticket in 1948 in protest against a civil rights plank would be penalized under Butler's proposal. These were South Carolina, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama. All but Mississippi would pick up votes. Mississippi would keep what it has.

Butler's current troubles with the South hinges on his determination to impose a party "loyalty" rule on all convention delegates requiring them to support whatever presidential ticket is chosen. Use of the rule caused a party split in 1952 but party leaders believe the present dispute will be settled amicably.

Not only was Lynda following Mary Ann Mobley as Miss America, but she also is a sorority sister of Miss Mobley in Chi Omega.

Before winning the contest she wanted to be Miss America "because I think it is the pinnacle of achievement for any American girl and it would allow me to further my education and I hope, to meet some of the great people in the United States that I wouldn't meet otherwise."

After going through evening gown, swim suit and talent competition Saturday night, the five top girls were required to answer questions to test their ability to think fast.

The first questions asked by the master of ceremonies of Lynda was: "You are proficient at Tennis or golf. You know you can beat your date. Would you or should you?"

Lynda's answer was, "I wouldn't and I shouldn't, because I'd never see him again if I did. I've had that experience before."

She added, that it happened once on a tennis date. He beat the boy she was playing with, and it was only the second time she had played.

The second question asked of Lynda was: "If you have a daughter, what guidance and advice will you give her to prepare her for life today?"

"I would tell her," Lynda said, "to endeavor to understand herself and to realize the things she needs to make herself happy, because so many of us don't know what we need to be happy, and I would tell her to trust in herself and trust in God."

Lynda was "Miss University," "Colonel's Lady and Parade of Favorites" winner at the University of Mississippi. Her brother, Herbert Meed Jr., was king of the month-long historic pilgrimage in Natchez in 1956.

The green-eyed beauty carried as a good luck charm in the contest a bracelet given to her by an aunt. It has her name on one side and a four-leaf clover on the other.

Lynda's parents were brought on the stage and introduced to the audience. Her mother, a small grey - haired woman said she had not expected her daughter to win.

Her father was asked what he did for a living. He announced in a loud voice that he sold Ford automobiles. This brought a big laugh from the audience, because one of the sponsors of the pageant is Oldsmobile.

In her talent competition, Lynda did an original dramatic reading entitled "Schizophrenia," in which she declared she did not know who she really was. With various props, she ran the gamut from Cleopatra to a "Kooky" or "beatnik."

In the final bathing suit competition she wore a white swim suit as she paraded before the television cameras which carried the final hour of the contest.

She also wore white in the evening gown competition.

Miss America and the four runners-up were chosen from a final field of 10 that survived the gureling competition.

The other five were Illinois' Suzanne Johnson, of Chicago; Canada's Rosemary Keenan, of Fredericton, N.B.; New York State's Bonnie Jo Marquis, of Huntington; Pennsylvania's Lois Piercy, of Springfield, and Tennessee's Marion Wayland, of Knoxville.

The judges also announced the winners of $1,000 sholarships to girls who did not make the finals. These were awarded as follows:

Most Talented Dancer, Miss Texas, Marilyn Turner of Fort Worth.

Most Talented Musician, Miss Vermont, Brenda Naatz, of St. Johnsbury, and Miss Oklahoma, Mary Hazelton of Tulsa.

Most Talented Actress, Miss Alabama, Betty Jane Lindstrom of Birmingham, and Miss Kansas, Sharon O'Neil of Kansas City.

Most talented in all other fields, Miss Virginia, Alice Williams of Richmond, who displayed her skill in dress-making.

Earlier the contenders themselves picked "Miss Congeniality." They chose Hawaii's perky little Gordean Leilehua Lee, who is working her way through college dancing the hula.

the Roches and a forlorn John were there to tell them why there would be no wedding as scheduled.

The nuns at Misericordia are usually strict about visiting hours. Saturday, however, they were indulgent toward those who came at odd times to see June.

When June had a moment alone with John, she said: "If it's okay with you — and the doctor — let's make it the 26th. And hope nothing else happens."

"Sure, Sept. 26 it is," John agreed.

Still bemused, John went home. Absently, he picked up the mail and went in. His attention eventually was drawn to an official-looking letter.

It was from Uncle Sam, telling him to report for his draft board physical in five days.

Tragedy Strikes Twice In Short Time For Man

At 12:25 p.m., his son, Carl O. Veith, co-owner of a Chester auto repair shop, was shot to death while eating lunch in his shop.

Some 45 minutes later, the elder Veith was notified his wife, Susanna, 71, collapsed and died of a heart attack while visiting friends in Asbury Park, N.J. She was not aware of her son's death.

Shortly after learning of his wife's death, the father went to the Chester Police Station to attend the hearing in which his son's wife, Hazel, 21, was held without bail for court, charged with her husband's murder.

The brief hearing was over when Veith arrived. His daughter-in-law, who is expecting her third child, ran crying into his arms. Veith embraced her and said:

"I don't hold anything against you."

Mrs. Veith told police her husband was unfaithful. She said, however, she didn't mean to shoot him, "only frighten him."

Expert Says Vehicle May Miss Target

the lunar rocket was beeping out signals right along after midnight. They said it was more than 100,000 miles from the earth.

Discussing the rocket power, Bogoyavlensky said: "There is every reason to suppose that such outstanding results have been achieved owing to the successes of Soviet science in developing new rocket fuels. Apparently the United States still has no such fuel since it has not attempted to launch a rocket this year after four failures between August and December 1958."

The giant Soviet rocket blasted off Saturday, carrying the Soviet banner and a mass of intricate equipment. Soviet scientists said it was on course and sending back information in a steady stream.

A consultant at the Moscow planetarium said that with the rocket's present course, "it must hit the moon." A scientific spokesman for the planetarium added: "As I read the official announcement the rocket is expected to hit the moon at five minutes after midnight Monday morning" that is 4:05 p.m. Eastern Standard Time Sunday.

This language appeared to fix more definitely the idea that the rocket is heading straight for the moon and not intended to go around it.

Even if the rocket does not make a direct hit and goes into a lunar orbit, it would be the first man-made object to do so. If it whizzes by the moon's gravitational field, it will join another Soviet rocket — Mechta — and America's Pioneer IV now orbiting around the sun.

Should Khrushchev arrive in the United States as leader of the first country to put a standard on the moon it seemed here he would be surrounded with spectacular new prestige.

Diplomats felt such an accomplishment could hardly fail to add weight to his opinion in the Washington talks, with President Eisenhower and boost his international position elsewhere.

The final stage of the rocket carried an inscription saying "September 1959," to mark the date. Scientists here expressed no doubt the rocket would reach its goal.

Aleksandr Topchiyev, vice president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, said it was following the scheduled trajectory. Moscow radio reported all scientific and telemetric and radio transmission instruments functioning normally.

Throughout the Soviet Union, millions listened to the radio broadcasting evenly spaced signals from the rocket as it soared through space. Across Red Square from the Kremlin, the aisles of the GUM department store were jammed as the tone came over loudspeakers.

In the diplomatic field, Khrushchev conferred with Indian Ambassador K. P. S. Menon on means of quieting tension on the India-China border. He also conferred with Walter Ulbricht, Red boss of East Germany, and Maurice Thorez, French communist chief.

Russians took the rocket news enthusiastically. Their enthusiasm for Khrushchev's trip continued high.

The news broke dramatically at 2:35 p.m. Moscow time. Some seven or eight minutes previously, the radio had interrupted a program of popular music. There was about five minutes of silence, which usually heralds important news here. People flocked around loudspeakers.

Then there was a two-minute repetition of the first bars of the "Internationale," played on chimes.

Suddenly, a male voice began in calm and measured tones:

"Tass statement on launching of rocket to the moon . . . ."

Tass said the scientific capsule separated from the final stage of the rocket at 2 p.m. local time. The announcement referred to the last stage of the rocket as "guided"—terminology not fully explained here.

One Soviet science writer said it appeared both the rocket and the container would land on the moon. He explained the theory was for the last-stage rocket to eject the instrument capsule and then both continue onward toward the moon.

(Some scientists in Washington said that from a strictly technical point of view, the Soviets had gambled on a less favorable date for their new moon shot. From a propaganda standpoint, however, the shot may well be timed to coincide with Khrushchev's trip.

(U.S. scientists were reported waiting until October to make their next shot at the moon, a 375-pound space capsule. Scientists in Washington said this time of the month is least favorable because the moon is farther away from the earth. The moon and the earth will be at their closest, 220,000 miles, for three days starting Oct. 2.)

The newest Soviet rocket precedes Khrushchev's trip just as the first unannounced Soviet moon shot came shortly before the January U.S. visit by Anastas Mikoyan, first deputy premier and one of Khrushchev's top aides.

Thus the Soviet Union has been building up a publicity backlog of scientific achievements. Morning papers here dwelt heavily on the fact the new atomic icebreaker Lenin was to be moved during the day into Leningrad's Neva River for cruising trials.

The first announcement put it at 78,500 kilometers—about 43,670 miles—above the surface of the earth. Several hours later it was reported 101,000 kilometers—68,200 miles—above the earth.

"It is expected that the Cosmic rocket will reach the moon on Sept. 14 at 12:05 a.m. Moscow time—4:05 p.m., Eastern Standard Time, Sunday," the announcement said.

Senate Goes Overtime On Civil Rights

foreign aid appropriations was marked by such a sharp exchange between Sens. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark) and Thomas J. Dodd (D-Conn) that the Senate voted to expunge their remarks from the record.

The flareup occurred just before Sen. Styles Bridges (R-NH) chairman of the Senate GOP Policy Committee, won adoption of an amendment earmarking 50 million dollars of defense economic support funds for Spain.

He did so over the opposition of Fulbright, Foreign Relations Committee chairman, by a roll call vote of 49 to 38. Dodd called it odd that Fulbright had raised a point of order against a provision to aid this ally against communism.

Fulbright retorted by asking Dodd if he (Dodd) wasn't retained by Guatemala when he offered an amendment as a member of the House to earmark five million dollars for that country in another bill.

Dodd, who was a registered representative of the Guatemala government after he left the House, hotly replied in the negative. Both later agreed to having their remarks removed from the record and a motion to that effect was passed on a voice vote.

But the big battle started on civil rights. The extension measure was offered as an amendment to the same foreign aid money bill and ran into a point of order by Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga).

When it was sustained Chairman Carl Hayden (D-Ariz) of the Senate Appropriations Committee moved to suspend the rules on which a vote may come Monday. This would require the votes of two-thirds of the senators present and voting.

The leadership hoped to get a final vote in time to permit an adjournment Monday.

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating (R-NY) then began a speech in support of the move and at about eight minutes before midnight Saturday. He said it would take him about an hour to deliver it if he had no interruptions.

Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore), who has been doing his best to slow down congressional adjournment drive, asked Johnson if he would consider adjourning at that point until Monday.

Morse said he questioned the advisability of Keating's starting a speech with so few senators present.

Johnson made no immediate reply, and when Morse asked if he had heard him, he said he had but did not wish to make any reply.

Morse, settling back into his chair, said he would be willing to listen to the introduction of Keating's speech before suggesting the absence of quorum. Only about a dozen senators were in the cham at the time.

Soon after Keating began his speech, Johnson got up and moved that the Senate adjourn until 9 a.m. (EDT) Monday.

The House had met briefly in the wan hope that this might be getaway day of a session which has lasted more than eight months. It sent to the White House a compromise bill permitting an increase in interest rates on government savings bonds.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex) got House passage of a resolution to adjourn Monday. But Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas was not at all sure the Senate could dispose of the civil rights matter by then.

Morse was reported to have told leaders of both parties, however, that he would not throw up new roadblocks against a Monday adjournment—if the Dixie senators finished their token but highly vocal resistance than against continuing the existence of the Civil Rights Commission.

Authorities Assert Mob Story False

WOODVILLE, Miss. (UPI) — Wilkinson County authorities Saturday called untrue a Negro minister's charges he was chased out of Mississippi by a lynch mob.

Authorities also denied charges by the Rev. Harrison Dupre that a Negro undertaker was involved in a National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People movement.

They indicated no investigation of the charges was planned.

Dupre said he was forced to flee Fort Adams, Miss., a community about 100 miles west of Poplarville where Negro Mack Charles Parker was lynched April 25. He told the all-Negro National Baptist Convention in San Francisco a white mob came to his home to get him, apparently because of a mistaken idea that he was soliciting funds for the NAACP. He said the incident, which occurred Aug. 27, followed the fatal shooting last month of Sam O'Quince, for similar reasons.

"I know that there hasn't been any mob," said Sheriff J. T. Falkenheimer. "There hasn't been any report to me about it and I'd be the first to know. I don't think there is anything to any of it."

But the sheriff said, "I don't doubt that somebody went and talked to him."

Asked if he would investigate Dupre's charges, the sheriff said, "No, I don't have any complaint to me yet."

Falkenheimer said he is still investigating the O'Quince slaying but "so far we haven't come up with anything." He repeated his belief that the ambush shooting of the Negro undertaker had nothing to do with racial tension.

Falkenhimer said O'Quince, who also owned a cafe here and was described as "prominent," was killed by another Negro.

O'Quince was shot late at night as he got from his car to open the gate of his farm about 10 miles south of here. His wife was in the car and said "somebody behind a bush" fired the fatal shot.

"What I did for New Orleans I can do for Louisiana" and Krotz Springs, Opelousas, Lafayette and all the towns in the state, Morrison said.

He said in the 14 years he has been mayor, "industries worth many millions of dollars have moved into the New Orleans area."

Morrison said these industries "had to be sold on coming to New Orleans and I'm going to do that same job for Louisiana. I'm the one who can do the selling job."

He added he would bring a fulltime, 24 - hour - a - day industrial commission to bring new industries to the state.

Morrison also spoke at Ville Platte, Opelousas, Sunset and on television in Lafayette.

Police Chief Ends Probe Of GI Case

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — The police chief at the international airport at Keflavik Saturday completed investigation of the incident there involving American sentries and two Icelandic officials.

Iceland says two U.S. military policemen force two Icelandic air control officials and two American pilots of a German plane to lie on the airfield at gunpoint for 10 minutes. Earlier accounts had identified the two pilots as German.

The guards intercepted the four men when they approached a hangar where the German plane was being repaired.

Airfield Police Chief Bjorn Ingvarsson said the American guards told him they had not recognized the uniforms of the Iceland Air Control Service. Ingvarsson declined to disclose the names of the two American pilots involved.

There are 5,000 U.S. troops in Iceland manning the North Atlantic Treaty Organization base at Keflavik, 20 miles west of Reykjavik. Iceland is a member of NATO.

Iceland's premier, Emil Jonsson, denied reports that because of the incident he is going to ask for a change in status of the Keflavik base.

He also declined to discuss the case further. Foreign Ministry sources said, however, that the government is quite concerned.

Iceland's ambassador to Washington, Thor Thors, protested to the State Department Friday and got assurances action would be taken to prevent such incidents happening again.

The Communist organ, Thjodviljinn, said the best way to prevent further incidents is to get U.S. forces out of the country.

Right-wing newspapers also protested the incident and called for new and clearer regulations concerning U.S. forces.

Laos Seeks Evidence To Present U.N.

VIENTIANE, Laos UPI) — Royal Laotian army officers were dispatched today to northern Laos to scour the jungles for evidence that will convince the United Nations of Communist North Viet Nam "aggression."

A spokesman said that the army had captured no Vietnamese soldiers but that it believes the officers will be able to produce weapons, documents and equipment that will prove the government charge that Communist troops from North Viet Nam had invaded Laos.

Loyal government forces have recaptured most of the territory in northern Samneur province that was lost the Reds in the offensive which Laos charged was launched from Communist Viet Nam on Aug. 30. But Communist Pathet Laos rebels still hold some villages along the Namwa River, military sources said.

Laos charged that regular Communist Viet Namese troops joined Laotian Communist rebels in the assault. It appealed to the United Nations and the Security Council created a fact-finding team to make an on-the-spot investigation.

The team is expected to arrive early next week.

Police Chief Ends Probe Of GI Case

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — The police chief at the international airport at Keflavik Saturday completed investigation of the incident there involving American sentries and two Icelandic officials.

Iceland says two U.S. military policemen force two Icelandic air control officials and two American pilots of a German plane to lie on the airfield at gunpoint for 10 minutes. Earlier accounts had identified the two pilots as German.

The guards intercepted the four men when they approached a hangar where the German plane was being repaired.

Airfield Police Chief Bjorn Ingvarsson said the American guards told him they had not recognized the uniforms of the Iceland Air Control Service. Ingvarsson declined to disclose the names of the two American pilots involved.

There are 5,000 U.S. troops in Iceland manning the North Atlantic Treaty Organization base at Keflavik, 20 miles west of Reykjavik. Iceland is a member of NATO.

Iceland's premier, Emil Jonsson, denied reports that because of the incident he is going to ask for a change in status of the Keflavik base.

He also declined to discuss the case further. Foreign Ministry sources said, however, that the government is quite concerned.

Iceland's ambassador to Washington, Thor Thors, protested to the State Department Friday and got assurances action would be taken to prevent such incidents happening again.

The Communist organ, Thjodviljinn, said the best way to prevent further incidents is to get U.S. forces out of the country.

Right-wing newspapers also protested the incident and called for new and clearer regulations concerning U.S. forces.

Laos Seeks Evidence To Present U.N.

VIENTIANE, Laos UPI) — Royal Laotian army officers were dispatched today to northern Laos to scour the jungles for evidence that will convince the United Nations of Communist North Viet Nam "aggression."

A spokesman said that the army had captured no Vietnamese soldiers but that it believes the officers will be able to produce weapons, documents and equipment that will prove the government charge that Communist troops from North Viet Nam had invaded Laos.

Loyal government forces have recaptured most of the territory in northern Samneur province that was lost the Reds in the offensive which Laos charged was launched from Communist Viet Nam on Aug. 30. But Communist Pathet Laos rebels still hold some villages along the Namwa River, military sources said.

Laos charged that regular Communist Viet Namese troops joined Laotian Communist rebels in the assault. It appealed to the United Nations and the Security Council created a fact-finding team to make an on-the-spot investigation.

The team is expected to arrive early next week.

Family Ousted From Club

The Edwin C. Chapin family (above) challenge the motives of the directors of the Lake Club, a non-profit community recreation club in Wilton, Conn., in revoking the family's club membership. Mr. and Mrs. Chapin say the board acted because the family brought a Negro guest to the club pool. But the club officials maintain the Negro in no way figured in the action. They say Mrs. Chapin "conducted herself in such a way as to attract conspicuous attention." Left to right: Douglas, 9, Mrs. Chapin, Brian, 4, Chapin, Merilee, 12. (AP Wirephoto)

Body Found Of Man Who Killed Wife

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP)—The decomposed body of a man who killed his wife and wounded their two daughters with a shotgun Aug. 16 was found near a lonely road in the fashionable suburb of Ladue late Saturday. The shotgun lay nearby.

The body lay about 75 feet away from the car in which 42-year-old Gilbert Moeller, a former mental patient, fled after shooting his wife, Helen, 43, and their daughters, Shharon, 19, and Judy, 14, with a 410-gauge shotgun.

Police identified Moeller by the car license plates and papers found on the body.

The car was found by James F. Comfort of suburban Webster Groves who was walking in the area. He notified St. Louis police who with police from Ladue and St. Louis County investigated and discovered the body.

The car was completely hidden by tall weeds.

Authorities had theorized Moeller killed himself when a search by Illinois and Missouri police after the slaying did not locate him.

Moeller had been a patient in City Hospital last year for about four weeks after trying to hang himself.

Moeller shot his wife as she slept in a bedroom in their St. Louis home and then shot the girls in the street outside as they fled.

Both girls recovered from their wounds.

FPC Ethics Code Is Now Under Study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Power Commission may decide soon whether it should operate under a tightened code of ethics, a move certain to win it new friends in and out of Congress.

Or it may shelve the whole project.

The proposed rules would bar congressmen and other outsiders from trying to sway FPC decisions and also put commission workers under closer wraps.

Chairman Jerome K. Kuykendall and his colleagues conceived the self-policing idea last spring after "influence" scandals in two other federal regulatory agencies cast shadows over those with unblemished records.

Before going ahead it was decided to solicit the views of the two big industries FPC watches over—natural gas and electric power. These off-record replies are now being analyzed. The commission also has been marking time to see what Congress does about influence curbs.

The urrent outlook is that nothing will be done before next year.

Chairman Oren Harris (D-Ark.) of the House Subcommittee on Legislative Oversight, had intended pushing his drastic anti-influence bill. But panel discussions with officials of all the regulatory agencies turned up legal problems which confused rather than clarified what the legislation should embrace.

As a consequence, Harris will hold formal legislative hearings either this fall or early next year before putting his measure in final form. As now drafted it would make it a criminal offense to conceal any communication—written or oral—touching on any contested case before a regulatory agency.

The proposed FPC rules would follow that line to some extent. The commission fixed next Tuesday—Sept. 15—as the deadline for submission of industry views. A spokesman said many suggestions had been received.

A feature of the Harris subommittee panel discussions was a clash among subcommittee members over the ethics of a legislator trying to influence a regulatory agency.

Kuykendall observed drily from the witness stand that congressmen's appeals "don't have much weight with us" although the law makers have a right to appear before the commission.

IKE-KHRUSHCHEV

At Cross-Purpose

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev will begin their momentous talks here Tuesday at cross-purposes. They seem certain to wind up the same way.

Beyond speaking against war and for peace they find themselves in disagreement on almost every aspect of world affairs. Even when they talk about peace they evidently do not mean the same thing.

Yet in some quarters of this government and in many other world capitals there is a buoyant hope that somehow the exchange of visits between the leaders of the great antagonistic power blocs will prove to be a happy turning point in history.

If the meetings in Washington and later in Moscow are to lead eventually to any such result they will have to produce changes in U. S. and Soviet foreign policies which are not now indicated. On the contrary, every piece of known information on the intentions of Eisenhower and Khrushchev shows that neither will give way on any issue of importance.

What they may achieve in general terms, however, may be substantially more than what they can do with the half a dozen tough specific issues due to dominate their conversations.

They can agree in general terms that atomic war except in self-defense is unthinkable, that disarmament is highly desirable and that while they disagree on many problems they can avoid sharpening their disputes and can hope that time and changing circumstances will make possible solutions not now in sight.

Eisenhower himself has told associates he was moved to initiate the exchange of visits with Khrushchev primarily for one purpose. The world, as he sees it, has a choice of two roads before it. One is the present road of the nuclear arms and missiles race which can lead only to one of two results—bankruptcy or war.

The other is the road of international cooperation, disarmament and eventually peace. The President has not ruled out the possibility that Khrushchev might be willing sooner or later to enter into agreements which would put the world on this route. This is the central possibility he wants to explore.

Khrushchev for his part has come up with the familiar Soviet formula of peaceful coexistence as his central proposal for agreement with Eisenhower. In an article two weeks ago in the American quarterly, Foreign Affairs, he defined this as meaning "repudiation of the use of force in any form" and an agreement to settle disputes peacefully.

The Eisenhower approach and the Khrushchev formula thus have one important element in common—that the powers should turn their backs on war and dedicate themselves to the peaceful rather than the forcible settlement of their disputes.

Eisenhower has no intention of accepting Khrushchev's peaceful coexistence formula, his advisers say. This piece of Communist doctrine which has been a cliche in Moscow propaganda for many years has no appeal to the United States as a safe or practical formula for peace.

How the President will summarize his own formula to Khrushchev is not clear. But what he wants is a general understanding that would lead into workable and enforceable disarmament measures.

In his view it would be the eventual steps for disarmament rather than the immediate renunciation of war as an instrument of policy which would be a real contribution to peace. Both the Soviet Union and the United States have long since renounced aggressive war and pledged themselves to peaceful settlement of disputes, in the United Nations Charter.

But it is precisely at the point where practical steps are to be taken in fulfillment of glowing declarations that negotiations with the U.S.S.R. have so often broken down in the past.

This kind of experience has made American leaders extremely suspicious of agreements with the Soviet Union which are not self-enforcing. That is the reason for the unvarying emphasis in Washington—and other Western capitals—on the need for an inspection system to police a nuclear test suspension or any other disarmament measures.

Another characteristic of Soviet behavior of primary concern to U.S. leaders since the cold war began is its constant pressure for Communist expansion. There is reason to believe that Eisenhower intends to challenge Khrushchev directly on this point, asking what he means in view of all his talk about peace while at the same time pouring arms into the Middle East and by such actions as supporting Red China's massive bombombardment of the Chinese Nationalist islands of Quemoy and Matsu a year ago.

Problems which are due for discussion in the Eisenhower-Khrushchev talks include:

1. BERLIN — Khrushchev has made clear in several public statements about his American visit that he intends to press once again for withdrawal of U.S., British and French forces from West Berlin. The West rejected this demand during 10 weeks of negotiations among the Big Four foreign ministers at Geneva this summer. Eisenhower told Allied leaders in Europe some days ago that he intends to stand absolutely firm on the West Berlin issue.

2. GERMANY — Khrushchev wrote recently that the West must accept that Germany will remain divided for a long time and the Western powers must reckon with the existence of Communist East Germany as well as the West German government. He can be expected to press once more for a peace treaty made with the two separate German regimes. Eisenhower is equally adamant in saying the United States will not make such a treaty.

3. DISARMAMENT — The Western powers have already made a concession on this problem, agreeing to revive the long-stalled negotiations in a 10-nation committee divided equally between Communist and Allied counties. This gives the Soviet Union the parity of membership it had demanded. But the central issue of disarmament—an adequate inspection system which would work inside the U.S.S.R. as well as other countries—is as far from solution as ever.

4. TRADE — Khrushchev has indicated he will raise this topic, but Eisenhower may do so first. Months ago Khrushchev wrote the President that the Soviets would buy billions of dollars worth of materials in the United States if the United States would lift its control on trade with Communist countries and provide financing. Eisenhower replied that a hugh volume of trade could be developed outside the controls—if the Soviet Union wanted consumer goods instead of heavy, war-potential machinery. The bid for a great American loan was brushed aside.

5. RED CHINA — The President wants Khrushchev to use his influence to curb Red China's periodic military thrusts which in the past have threatened Formosa and Southeast Asia and once involved Korea in a costly war. Perhaps even more important Eisenhower wants to explore as much as he can the relationship between the Soviet Union and Red China. He is convinced that Khrushchev finds the truculent Chinese troublesome partners.

6. LAOS — Eisenhower is expected to tell Khrushchv bluntly that the United States has been deeply concerned over what it considers Communist aggression in the tiny Southeast Asian countries.

7. FOREIGN BASES — Khrushchev is expected to tell the President that encirclement of the Soviet Union by American bases is a source of constant worry to his government and people and that any general agreements ending the cold war should lead to dismantling these bases. Eisenhower is known to have no intention of liquidating the structure which was built in response to Soviet threats and is still considered a vital arm of the Western defense system.

The contradictory aims shown in the Soviet and American differences over these issues make it apparent that Khrushchev and Eisenhower are working for two different kinds of peace.

Eisenhower wants a peace which would progressively break down the barriers between the Communist and free worlds, permit the growth of national freedom within the Communist bloc and put an end to Red expansion by any means involving force, threat or subversion.

Khrushchev wants a peace that would bring Western recogntiion of Communist rule wherever it now exists, eliminate West Berlin as a showwindow of Western freedom, and shelter the Communist bloc while it undergoes a further period of economic growth pending the future expansion he confidently expects.

One maneuver for which Eisenhower is known to be prepared is for Khrushchev to imply publicly that he and Eisenhower have entered into a deal affecting the interests of other Allied countries. If this happens, the President has told associates he will issue an immediate denial. He promised Allied chiefs in Europe there would be no deals behind their backs and they would be kept fully informed of all discussions.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three new federal judgships in the Louisiana-Mississippi area would be provided in a bill authorizing 25 additional judges approved Friday by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

One additional judge is provided for the Eastern District of Louisiana and another for the Southern Mississippi District.

The bill also would provide new district judgships in Northern Texas and Western Tennessee.

Shelby Jackson May Jump Into Governor's Race

BATON ROUGE (AP) — State Education Supt. Shelby Jackson will announce by Monday his candidacy for governor in the Dec. 5 Democratic primary, the State-Times said Saturday.

The newspaper said Jackson's running mate will be Rep. Ben Holt of Rapides Parish, known to have widespread support among Louisiana school teachers.

Jackson's choice to succeed him as education superintendent, the newspaper said, will be Dr. John A. Hunter, head of the student services at Louisiana State University and former dean of the junior division at the university.

The newspaper quoted a reliable source in publishing the story.

But the source cautioned "Things look pretty set today—they might change by Sunday or Monday."

Nothing was expected to change the Jackson-Holt combination.

The report was that Jackson, Holt and Hunter would make up a three-man ticket and Jackson probably would not endorse any other candidates in the primary and not add other members to his ticket.

22 Get Calls To Testify In Firing Case

BATON ROUGE (AP) — State troopers Saturday began handing out subpoenas to 22 persons to appear at a hearing that could see unfolded again details of Gov. Earl K. Long's temporary commitment to a Texas mental ward.

W. W. McDougall, state director of civil service, said he turned over to state police the subpoenaes for serving on witnesses for dismissed state police Sgt. William Abadie.

The state Civil Service Commission, unless it agrees to a delay, is scheduled to hear the Abadie appeal case Wednesday at 9 a.m. The commission will meet at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday to act on a state police request for a delay.

Abadie has appealed his firing, which came after he stirred Gov. Long's wrath apparently by failing to stop his confinement.

McDougall denied an administrative delay in the case last week because counsel for Abadie said such a delay would imperil his rights to reinstatement on the police force. McDougall's move threw the question in the commission's lap for settlement.

McDougall said Long's estranged wife, Blanche Revere Long; Dr. Arthur Long, the governor's cousin; dismissed state police Supt. John Nick Brown, and a half-dozen state troopers also were subpoenaed.

All were involved in the early summer incident that saw Long's relatives remove him to John Sealy Hospital in Galveston, Tex., for treatment.

Long, whose rough conduct in a session of the Legislature later in Louisiana, has said in recent weeks he would appear at the Abadie hearing if needed.

McDougall said court clerk Perry Johnson of Baton Rouge also has been subpoenaed to identify records involved in the case.

IKE-KHRUSHCHEV

At Cross-Purpose

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev will begin their momentous talks here Tuesday at cross-purposes. They seem certain to wind up the same way.

Beyond speaking against war and for peace they find themselves in disagreement on almost every aspect of world affairs. Even when they talk about peace they evidently do not mean the same thing.

Yet in some quarters of this government and in many other world capitals there is a buoyant hope that somehow the exchange of visits between the leaders of the great antagonistic power blocs will prove to be a happy turning point in history.

If the meetings in Washington and later in Moscow are to lead eventually to any such result they will have to produce changes in U. S. and Soviet foreign policies which are not now indicated. On the contrary, every piece of known information on the intentions of Eisenhower and Khrushchev shows that neither will give way on any issue of importance.

What they may achieve in general terms, however, may be substantially more than what they can do with the half a dozen tough specific issues due to dominate their conversations.

They can agree in general terms that atomic war except in self-defense is unthinkable, that disarmament is highly desirable and that while they disagree on many problems they can avoid sharpening their disputes and can hope that time and changing circumstances will make possible solutions not now in sight.

Eisenhower himself has told associates he was moved to initiate the exchange of visits with Khrushchev primarily for one purpose. The world, as he sees it, has a choice of two roads before it. One is the present road of the nuclear arms and missiles race which can lead only to one of two results—bankruptcy or war.

The other is the road of international cooperation, disarmament and eventually peace. The President has not ruled out the possibility that Khrushchev might be willing sooner or later to enter into agreements which would put the world on this route. This is the central possibility he wants to explore.

Khrushchev for his part has come up with the familiar Soviet formula of peaceful coexistence as his central proposal for agreement with Eisenhower. In an article two weeks ago in the American quarterly, Foreign Affairs, he defined this as meaning "repudiation of the use of force in any form" and an agreement to settle disputes peacefully.

The Eisenhower approach and the Khrushchev formula thus have one important element in common—that the powers should turn their backs on war and dedicate themselves to the peaceful rather than the forcible settlement of their disputes.

Eisenhower has no intention of accepting Khrushchev's peaceful coexistence formula, his advisers say. This piece of Communist doctrine which has been a cliche in Moscow propaganda for many years has no appeal to the United States as a safe or practical formula for peace.

How the President will summarize his own formula to Khrushchev is not clear. But what he wants is a general understanding that would lead into workable and enforceable disarmament measures.

In his view it would be the eventual steps for disarmament rather than the immediate renunciation of war as an instrument of policy which would be a real contribution to peace. Both the Soviet Union and the United States have long since renounced aggressive war and pledged themselves to peaceful settlement of disputes, in the United Nations Charter.

But it is precisely at the point where practical steps are to be taken in fulfillment of glowing declarations that negotiations with the U.S.S.R. have so often broken down in the past.

This kind of experience has made American leaders extremely suspicious of agreements with the Soviet Union which are not self-enforcing. That is the reason for the unvarying emphasis in Washington—and other Western capitals—on the need for an inspection system to police a nuclear test suspension or any other disarmament measures.

Another characteristic of Soviet behavior of primary concern to U.S. leaders since the cold war began is its constant pressure for Communist expansion. There is reason to believe that Eisenhower intends to challenge Khrushchev directly on this point, asking what he means in view of all his talk about peace while at the same time pouring arms into the Middle East and by such actions as supporting Red China's massive bombombardment of the Chinese Nationalist islands of Quemoy and Matsu a year ago.

Problems which are due for discussion in the Eisenhower-Khrushchev talks include:

1. BERLIN — Khrushchev has made clear in several public statements about his American visit that he intends to press once again for withdrawal of U.S., British and French forces from West Berlin. The West rejected this demand during 10 weeks of negotiations among the Big Four foreign ministers at Geneva this summer. Eisenhower told Allied leaders in Europe some days ago that he intends to stand absolutely firm on the West Berlin issue.

2. GERMANY — Khrushchev wrote recently that the West must accept that Germany will remain divided for a long time and the Western powers must reckon with the existence of Communist East Germany as well as the West German government. He can be expected to press once more for a peace treaty made with the two separate German regimes. Eisenhower is equally adamant in sayin the United States will not make such a treaty.

3. DISARMAMENT — The Western powers have already made a concession on this problem, agreeing to revive the long-stalled negotiations in a 10-nation committee divided equally between Communist and Allied counties. This gives the Soviet Union the parity of membership it had demanded. But the central issue of disarmament—an adequate inspection system which would work inside the U.S.S.R. as well as other countries—is as far from solution as ever.

4. TRADE — Khrushchev has indicated he will raise this topic, but Eisenhower may do so first. Months ago Khrushchev wrote the President that the Soviets would buy billions of dollars worth of materials in the United States if the United States would lift its control on trade with Communist countries and provide financing. Eisenhower replied that a hugh volume of trade could be developed outside the controls—if the Soviet Union wanted consumer goods instead of heavy, war-potential machinery. The bid for a great American loan was brushed aside.

5. RED CHINA — The President wants Khrushchev to use his influence to curb Red China's periodic military thrusts which in the past have threatened Formosa and Southeast Asia and once involved Korea in a costly war. Perhaps even more important Eisenhower wants to explore as much as he can the relationship between the Soviet Union and Red China. He is convinced that Khrushchev finds the truculent Chinese troublesome partners.

6. LAOS — Eisenhower is expected to tell Khrushchv bluntly that the United States has been deeply concerned over what it considers Communist aggression in the tiny Southeast Asian countries.

7. FOREIGN BASES — Khrushchev is expected to tell the President that encirclement of the Soviet Union by American bases is a source of constant worry to his government and people and that any general agreements ending the cold war should lead to dismantling these bases. Eisenhower is known to have no intention of liquidating the structure which was built in response to Soviet threats and is still considered a vital arm of the Western defense system.

The contradictory aims shown in the Soviet and American differences over these issues make it apparent that Khrushchev and Eisenhower are working for two different kinds of peace.

Eisenhower wants a peace which would progressively break down the barriers between the Communist and free worlds, permit the growth of national freedom within the Communist bloc and put an end to Red expansion by any means involving force, threat or subversion.

Khrushchev wants a peace that would bring Western recogntiion of Communist rule wherever it now exists, eliminate West Berlin as a showwindow of Western freedom, and shelter the Communist bloc while it undergoes a further period of economic growth pending the future expansion he confidently expects.

One maneuver for which Eisenhower is known to be prepared is for Khrushchev to imply publicly that he and Eisenhower have entered into a deal affecting the interests of other Allied countries. If this happens, the President has told associates he will issue an immediate denial. He promised Allied chiefs in Europe there would be no deals behind their backs and they would be kept fully informed of all discussions.

AS MISS AMERICA

Mary Ann Mobley Sad Reign Is Over

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (UPI) —The new Miss America has a glamorous title, but actually it means a solid year of hard work.

Miss America of 1960 will reap profits of up to $100,000 during her 365-reign. But judging from what past holders of the title say, she will earn every penny of it.

Being Miss America means traveling 150,000 miles during the year, with perhaps four or five days off to spend Christmas with the family. It means appearing in nearly every state and hundreds of cities, getting up at 4 a.m. to catch airplanes, giving up to 10 speeches a day, and answering bundles of fan mail.

It means packing, unpacking, washing and ironing and doing her own hair.

But the Miss America who surrendered her crown to her successor Saturday night wouldn't trade one minute of it for a life of ease at home.

Mary Ann Mobley, of Brandon, Miss., who won the title here last September, wouldn't mind doing it all over again, she says.

"I'm a little sad that it's over," she said, in an interview. "This has been a wonderful experience.

"I've met governors, attended banquets and met people I never would have known. I've been on national television, travelled 150,000 miles in 44 states, Mexico and Canada and visited 500 cities.

"It has been a responsibility. People look to Miss America as the representative of all American girls.

"There has been a lifetime of living in one year. You go places and see things you would have no opportunity to do in any other year. But, I'm afraid, all good things must end."

Miss Mobley, 22, said she was on the go almost constantly during her term as Miss America. For two weeks, she averaged 30 hours of sleep a week, just a little over 4 hours a night.

"One day we had a 22 - hour stretch without sleep," she said. "We flew from Boston to Ogalala, Neb., landing at 4 p.m. I went to a banquet and then changed to a formal gown for the Nebraska state pageant, at which I spoke and sang. I got to bed at midnight, and was up at 5:30 the next morning."

Miss Mobley was paid for each of her personal appearances, most of them in behalf of the sponsors of the Miss America Pageant (Oldsmobile, Toni Home Permanents, Everglaze Fabrics, Philco and Pepsi Cola). She sang, danced and spoke at community chest fund drive functions, conventions and theaters. She did television commercials and went on a month-long modeling tour.

Throughout the year, Miss Mobley was closely chaperoned — so closely, in fact, that she had not a single date, except during her four days at home.

That's one thing she did not particularly miss, she said, for she has no favorite boy friend.

She had one unscheduled break in her routine. While serving as mistress of ceremonies at a cherry blossom festival in Washington, D. C., she was soaked in a rainstorm and developed pneumonia, which kept her in bed two weeks.

"My southern blood was just too thin," she said.

March Of Science

By RALPH DIGHTON

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Thinking has become a profession.

Some are busy with practical matters, such as keeping a man alive on a journey to the moon and back. Others are urged to be impractical, to challenge the impossible — electro-magnetic barriers which no missile can penetrate, for instance, or space ships driven by miniature suns in continuous explosion.

There's the idea of "growing" things as complicated as a TV set.

"Nature uses chemistry to build things stronger and better than we can," says Graham. "We are learning to adapt this process in growing crystals for transistors.

"It is foreseeable today that we may be able to chance molecular structures through electronics and chemistry and literally 'grow' anything—even robots in the shape of man—because all matter is just a combination of molecules."

From Graham also comes the thought of submarine cities.

"Are we sure we really want to be in space?" he asks. "Man is more vulnerable in space than anywhere else in the universe. There he has no natural protection, only what he can take with him. The explosion of atomic bombs 300 miles in the air last year showed how fast and dangerous radiation can be in space.

"The blanket of our atmosphere shields us from much of the radiation in space. Water would be an even better blanket. We could live under great plastic bubbles, or in huge submarines, and never see the sun except on a TV screen."

Dr. Montgomery Johnson, director of the Office of Advanced Research of Aeronutronic Systems, Inc., says "Our next great advances will come in the biological sciences."

"Before long we will learn how to tap the universe's sources of energy and thus remove two historic limitations on population—lack of food and lack of power. Then we can begin improving on man himself, eliminating disease and senility.

"Our genes, the hereditary mechanism for determining what our offspring will be, can be altered by radiation. If we can learn to control this radiation precisely, to alter genes at will, we should be able to tailor our bodies to any specifications.

"Because of the peculiar arrangement of his genes, a lizard is equipped to grow a new tail when he needs one. With a suitable arrangement of genes, humans could grow new organs to replace old or ailing ones and thus live forever."

This obviously could place quite a load of humanity on Mother Earth. Dr. Albert Hibbs suggests that we modify the climates of Mars and Venus.

Hibbs, research analysis chief at California Institute of Technology's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, says light rays from Venus indicate its atmosphere is poisonously loaded with carbon dioxide.

When we breathe, we take in oxygen and exhale carbon dioxide. Plants use carbon dioxide and give off oxygen. Hibbs would take earth plants to Venus hoping they might purify its atmosphere by replacing its carbon dioxide with the oxygen man needs.

Mars and the moon, which have little or no atmosphere, could be made habitable by extracting oxygen and water from their rocks, Hibbs believes.

Dr. Ernest Martinelli, Rand Corp. theoretical physicist, says: "We are very close to the secret of life. In the next 25 years we probably will be able to artificially create living matter."

"An understanding of the life process will help us whip cancer and virus diseases."

Dr. Martinei, a specialist in nuclear physics, believes our greatest unsolved mystery concerns the force which olds matter —both living and inanimate—together.

"If we can learn what holds atoms together, we may have a clue to what holds solar systems together in perfect balance, perhaps even a clue to gravity itself."

Much closer at hand is the problem of getting around faster in today's world.

Dr. Robert Cornog, senior staff member in charge of engineering at Thompson - Ramo - Wooldridge Corp., believes that personal flying machines will be powered by jets of air and guided by radar-assisted computers in the near future. Recent advances, he says, indicate we can make efficient computers the size of a car radio or even smaller.

"The problems of weather, pilot skill, machine reliability and traffic jams will all be solved by computers. You will simply step into your vehicle, press a set of buttons to program your trip, and the machine will fly there and land automatically."

Space Test Of Capsule Big Success

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government space agency said Friday the first test flight of the capsule designed to carry a man into space in 1961 accomplished all of its primary objectives.

The unmanned capsule, dubbed "Big Joe," was launched Wednesday by an Atlas rocket from the Cape Canaveral, Fla., missile test center. The rocket failed to reach maximum velocity, but still powered the capsule almost to its panned height and speed.

The capsule fell into the sea several hundred miles short of its goal. But a Navy destroyer picked it up intact within two hours.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) said the capsule was in excellent condition when recovered. Scientists hailed this feature of the test as proving the durability of "Big Joe."

Robert R. Gilruth, director of the "Project Mercury" program on manned space flight, said data telemetered back from the capsule indicated that the temperature inside the capsule would have been completely safe for any occupant.

Despite an outside temperature of more than 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit, he said, the reading inside the instrument compartment never went above 100 degrees.

NASA observers said the capsule was more brilliant than the brightest star as it flashed across the horizon at a height of nearly 100 miles and a speed of 15,000 miles an hour.

The capsule will be taken to Project Mercury headquarters at Langley Research Center, Langley, Va., where it will be taken apart and examined.

Among other things, the test proved effectiveness of the capsule's heat shield and its flight dynamic characteristics. It also showed that scientists were on the right track with their system for recovering the capsule.

AS MISS AMERICA

Mary Ann Mobley Sad Reign Is Over

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (UPI) —The new Miss America has a glamorous title, but actually it means a solid year of hard work.

Miss America of 1960 will reap profits of up to $100,000 during her 365-reign. But judging from what past holders of the title say, she will earn every penny of it.

Being Miss America means traveling 150,000 miles during the year, with perhaps four or five days off to spend Christmas with the family. It means appearing in nearly every state and hundreds of cities, getting up at 4 a.m. to catch airplanes, giving up to 10 speeches a day, and answering bundles of fan mail.

But the Miss America who surrendered her crown to her successor Saturday night wouldn't trade one minute of it for a life of ease at home.

Mary Ann Mobley, of Brandon, Miss., who won the title here last September, wouldn't mind doing it all over again, she says.

"I'm a little sad that it's over," she said, in an interview. "This has been a wonderful experience.

"I've met governors, attended banquets and met people I never would have known. I've been on national television, travelled 150,000 miles in 44 states, Mexico and Canada and visited 500 cities.

"It has been a responsibility. People look to Miss America as the representative of all American girls.

"There has been a lifetime of living in one year. You go places and see things you would have no opportunity to do in any other year. But, I'm afraid, all good things must end."

Miss Mobley, 22, said she was on the go almost constantly during her term as Miss America. For two weeks, she averaged 30 hours of sleep a week, just a little over 4 hours a night.

"One day we had a 22 - hour stretch without sleep," she said. "We flew from Boston to Ogalala, Neb., landing at 4 p.m. I went to a banquet and then changed to a formal gown for the Nebraska state pageant, at which I spoke and sang. I got to bed at midnight, and was up at 5:30 the next morning."

Miss Mobley was paid for each of her personal appearances, most of them in behalf of the sponsors of the Miss America Pageant (Oldsmobile, Toni Home Permanents, Everglaze Fabrics, Philco and Pepsi Cola). She sang, danced and spoke at community chest fund drive functions, conventions and theaters. She did television commercials and went on a month-long modeling tour.

Throughout the year, Miss Mobley was closely chaperoned — so closely, in fact, that she had not a single date, except during her four days at home.

That's one thing she did not particularly miss, she said, for she has no favorite boy friend.

She had one unscheduled break in her routine. While serving as mistress of ceremonies at a cherry blossom festival in Washington, D. C., she was soaked in a rainstorm and developed pneumonia, which kept her in bed two weeks.

"My southern blood was just too thin," she said.

March Of Science

By RALPH DIGHTON

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Thinking has become a profession.

Some are busy with practical matters, such as keeping a man alive on a journey to the moon and back. Others are urged to be impractical, to challenge the impossible — electro-magnetic barriers which no missile can penetrate, for instance, or space ships driven by miniature suns in continuous explosion.

There's the idea of "growing" things as complicated as a TV set.

"Nature uses chemistry to build things stronger and better than we can," says Graham. "We are learning to adapt this process in growing crystals for transistors.

"It is foreseeable today that we may be able to chance molecular structures through electronics and chemistry and literally 'grow' anything—even robots in the shape of man—because all matter is just a combination of molecules."

From Graham also comes the thought of submarine cities.

"Are we sure we really want to be in space?" he asks. "Man is more vulnerable in space than anywhere else in the universe. Where he has no natural protection, only what he can take with him. The explosion of atomic bombs 300 miles in the air last year showed how fast and dangerous radiation can be in space.

"The blanket of our atmosphere shields us from much of the radiation in space. Water would be an even better blanket. We could live under great plastic bubbles, or in huge submarines, and never see the sun except on a TV screen."

Dr. Montgomery Johnson, director of the Office of Advanced Research of Aeronutronic Systems, Inc., says "Our next great advances will come in the biological sciences."

"Before long we will learn how to tap the universe's sources of energy and thus remove two historic limitations on population—lack of food and lack of power. Then we can begin improving on man himself, eliminating disease and senility.

"Our genes, the hereditary mechanism for determining what our offspring will be, can be altered by radiation. If we can learn to control this radiation precisely, to alter genes at will, we should be able to tailor our bodies to any specifications.

AGAINST THE NIGHT

Pipers Skirl, Jazzmen Rump

By WILLIAM GLOVER

Directly below, 100 feet down the sheer castle cliff, jazzmen romp in the New Orleans tailgate strut of "When the Saints Go Marching In."

The melodic contrast dramatizes the show business gamut of the three-week Edinburgh International Festival ending Sunday night.

Something ffor every entertainment taste has been the slogan for 174 performances of drama and dance, music and movies.

Everyshow must have its star, however, and the theater phase of the fete has an usual held the major attention at this 13th annual arts roundup.

Leaidng the array, the Old Vic troupe of London gleaned some of the best notices with polished ribaldry in Congreve's restoration spoof "The Double-Dealer."

Playwright Linklater explained why he set his allegory of manking, the devil and war in medieval France.

"You enable the audience to see a splendid spectacle," he said. "And when you place the scene in a foreign country, you have a little more latitude in language and the things you say."

The colorful piece de resistance has been Tyrone Guthrie's riotously stirring version of an old Scottish morality play, "The Thrie Estaites" of Sir David Lindsay.

For American visitors, special interest has attached to the appearance off Michael Flanders and Donald Swann, who set up shop on New York's Broadway next month with "At the Drop of a Hat."

Other drama events included the Birmingham Repertory version of another 16th century classic, "Gammer Gurton's Needle"; the English State Company in British premiere off Sean O'Casey's "Cock-a-Doodle Dandy"; and the Dundee Repertory in Shaw's "Candida."

All of Scotland's summer theatrical adventure is not continued however, to this ancient capital off Midlothian. Hidden in the glens 90 miles north is the town of Pittent, a redoubtable venture is lochry. In a covered-over canvas now in its ninth season off activity.

The Pitlochry Drama Festival began April 25 and ends Oct. 3. A company of 21 youthful players, recruited from London and elsewhere, performs eight times a week in a repertory that would tax the mettle of veterans.

ESCAPES FROM REDS

U.S. Airlines Gives Young Czech Job

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A handsome young Czech, who made a daring escape from Communism, has gone to work as a flight engineer for a major U.S. airline.

Several years ago Mira Slovak was piloting commercial airliners for the Red-run Czechoslovakian government. Though only 22, he was regarded as one of the safest and most reliable pilots. "I was a great belier in flight regulations and a good pilot," said Slovak in an interview given in surprisingly fluent, self-taught English.

Politically, the Reds didn't think Slovak so reliable. As a precaution in late 1951 he was taken off flights destined for points in West Germany and relegated to flying liners with Iron Curtain-only destinations.

For the next 20 months he was intermittently harassed by Communist authorities about the wartime activities of his family. "Each time they seemed to become more suspicious, and I knew time was running out," he said.

So it was as Slovak raced his DC-3 down the runway at Prague on March 23, 1953, and took off into the night bound for Berno, Czechoslovakia.

Berno was due east, deeper in Communist territory.

But this was the night for which Mira Slovak had planned for two years. It was the night he would fly west to freedom.

Slovak closed his eyes as he recalled the night. "It couldn't have started worse," he said. "The weather had been bad. That night it cleared. The moon was very bright, just what we didn't want.

"And our plane. All of the planes used on commercial flights were old, dirty DC-3's. They were never washed. This night we were given one of the very few new planes made for commercial use. It was shiny like a mirror. It would reflect the moon and be very easy to see.

"The moon and the plane made me very scared."

"As the plane cleared the runway and roared into the night, Slovak eased up from his first pilot's seat, and told the three fellow crew-members he'd be back shortly with two friends who wanted to see the cockpit.

Twenty - five passengers were aboard. Four of them had planned with Mira for the escape.

There were five Communist Party members aboard. They meant trouble for any escape effort. "I knew there were five," said Mira. "They're the only ones allowed to carry guns, and the guns must be checked when they get on a plane. The Communist government doesn't trust anyone—party members or crew members. We had to take the guns and leave the bullets with the Communists. That way no one could use them."

But Slovak, the believer in regulations, broke them that night. He concealed five loaded pistols in the upholstered rear wall of the cabin.

Two friends came back with him to the cabin. Two stayed with the passengers.

Quickly Mira handed them the pistols. "I told the pilot what was happening, and he began to fight," he related. "My two friends weren't as considerate. They knocked the two other crewmen unconscious and quickly pulled the pilot away and gave him the same."

"In the next hour I lost 15 years of my life," he remembers.

For 60 minutes Mira piloted the twin-engine plane 140 miles over the Czechoslovakian countryside, never flying higher than 150 feet.

"I was looking up for MIGs and down for church steeples," he said.

Finally they made West Germany. "The neon lights of Neurenberg gave us away," Slovak recalled. "Those five Communists in the plane knew that no Iron Curtain city had those bright lights. They knew we were in the West."

Five times they rushed the door, and five times they were thrown back by dips and turns. Then they gave up.

"A lot of passengers were very sick from the bouncing around, and I wasn't feeling so good myself. But we were free," said Slovak.

Mira and his four friends received asylum in the United States. The others flew back to Czechoslovakia.

After the Central Intelligence Agency used him for a year, Mira got a job as a crop-duster near Yakima, Wash. "I was well qualified after that flight," he said laughlingly.

Then Bill Boeing — of the Boeing aircraft family — hired him to pilot his three private planes.

Boeing introduced the handsome bachelor to power boats three years ago, and last year Mira dare-deviled his way to the top of the international boat - racing heap.

Now he's finishing a refresher course with Capital Airlines on flight engineering. He is the first non-citizen to be licensed as a flight engineer by the U.S. government. Next year he'll lost that distinction when he gets his citizenship papers.

This year he's driving bandleader Guy Lombardo's famous hydroplane," 'Miss Bardahl," in the President's Cup competition on the Potomac. The winner visits the President at the White House to receive the trophy.

"Wouldn't that be wonderful," Slovak enthused.

Rockefeller Undecided On Primary Test

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller Saturday told a group of New Hampshire citizens urging him to run in that state's presidential preference primary that he could not say at this time yes or no.

His answer to the appeal indicated a slightly more positive attitude toward running in the state's primary than he had last June when the matter first came up.

"I wish I could give you a definite 'yes' or 'no' answer at this time. But in all honesty I feel I cannot. My first responsibility is obviously to the people of New York who elected me governor last year," Rockefeller said in a telegram.

Last June, when members of Congress initiated a move to enter his name in the March 8 primary—the first of the 1960 campaign—the governor would only say he had no intention of taking any active step toward competing.

Rockefeller told his New Hampshire supporters that much work remained to be done in New York State.

"During the next few months, my time and energy will be consumed by the preparation of recommendations for another legislative program and budget to be presented to the legislature," Rockefeller said.

"Until these programs have been shaped for presentation to the legislature, it would be unfair to the citizens of New York State for me to divert my attention from these vital state problems," he added.

He told his New Hampshire supporters that he was deeply honored "by the confidence you expressed."

The statement was released by the governor's office in Albany. Rockefeller was attending a Republican picnic on Staten Island.

The latest pressure on Rockefeller to enter the primary developed Friday in a telegram from 40 prominent New Hampshire citizens.

CONFLICT FLARES

Governor Denies Butler's Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. David L. Lawrence of Pennsylvania denies that he has joined Southern democrats in a try at unseating Paul M. Butler as chairman of the National Democratic Committee.

Butler made the accusation Friday night in a statement that said the school segregation issue is involved.

But in Harrisburg, Pa., Lawrence replied that "it is ridiculous to suggest that I share the views of segregationists."

In fact, he added, it was Butler himself who associated with Southern committee members in the past.

The conflict between Butler and Lawrence could reach a climax next Wednesday, when the National Committee will meet here.

Butler said that Lawrence had mailed some committee members the same material being circulated by Southerners clamoring for the chairman's removal.

This material, Butler indicated, reproduces memos signed by him in 1954.

In one of the memos, Butler said: "I do not consider the question of segregation a political issue. I see no reason for any chairman of our party at any level to project segregation into our political discussions.

Lawrence, a veteran national committeeman for Pennsylvania, in his statement denied affiliating with the Southerners in any attempt to oust Butler.

"Chairman Butler is obviously mistaken," he said. "It was he who was associated with the Southerners in Demcember, 1954, when he was elected national chairman in New Orleans. His signature is on the paper for all to see."

In his statement Friday night, Butler said he was "sorry that Gov. Lawrence did not see fit to discuss this matter with me before circulating it to members of the National Committee."

Butler said he signed the 1954 memos a short time after the Supreme Court had outlawed public school segregation. At that time, the chairman said, integration was not a political issue.

U.S. Residents Have Chance To See Discoverer

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States residents will have their first chance Sunday to see the Discoverer V satellite rocket carrier launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., Aug. 13.

It should "appear as bright as a first magnitude star" when the 1,400-pound assembly passes over Long Island, N.Y., at about 7:25 p.m. Eastern Standard Time. The Pentagon's Advance Research Projects Agency announced Saturday.

Discoverer V will be traveling in a south to north direction at that portion of its polar orbit around the earth.

On its night pass it will appear first west of Brownsville, Tex., at about 7:25 p.m., Central Standard Time, going over Dallas and Ft. Worth, Tex., Oklahoma City, Wichita, Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Depending on the terrain, it should be visible about two minutes at any one point.

On its third visible pass, Discoverer V will appear over the California post, west of Los Angeles, and pass over Santa Barbara, between 7:55 p.m. and 8:05 p.m., Pacific Daylight Time.

ARPA said that it also should be visible over Fresno, Calif., western Nevada, eastern Oregon, western Idaho, Spokane, Wash., and western Montana.

Monitors Plan To Take Action Against Hoffa

WASHINGTON (AP) — The monitors of the Teamsters Union reportedly plan to seek contempt of court action Monday against union President James R. Hoffa to get compliance with their reform suggestions.

The monitors, named by the courts to police the 1½-million-member union, are expected to tell a U.S. Dist. Court judge Hoffa has defied their clean-up orders.

A monitor source said Friday night they had held two meetings this week with Hoffa trying to get him to agree to their suggested reforms.

One point at issue, it was learned, was a deposit of $400,000 in a noninterest bearing account in a Florida bank. The money belongs to Hoffa's home local No. 299 in Detroit.

AGAINST THE NIGHT

Pipers Skirl, Jazzmen Rump

By WILLIAM GLOVER

Directly below, 100 feet down the sheer castle cliff, jazzmen romp in the New Orleans tailgate sturt of "When the Saints Go Marching In."

The melodic contrast dramatizes the show business gamut of the three-week Edinburgh International Festival ending Sunday night.

Something ffor every entertainment taste has been the slogan for 174 performances of drama and dance, music and movies.

Everyshow must have its star, however, and the theater phase of the fete has an usual held the major attention at this 13th annual arts roundup.

Playwright Linklater explained why he set his allegory of manking, the devil and war in medieval France.

"You enable the audience to see a splendid spectacle," he said. "And when you place the scene in a foreign country, you have a little more latitude in language and the things you say."

The colorful piece de resistance has been Tyrone Guthrie's riotously stirring version of an old Scottish morality play, "The Thrie Estaites" of Sir David Lindsay.

For American visitors, special interest has attached to the appearance off Michael Flanders and Donald Swann, who set up shop on New York's Broadway next month with "At the Drop of a Hat."

Other drama events included the Birmingham Repertory version of another 16th century classic, "Gammer Gurton's Needle"; the English State Company in British premiere off Sean O'Casey's "Cock-a-Doodle Dandy"; and the Dundee Repertory in Shaw's "Candida."

All of Scotland's summer theatrical adventure is not continued however, to this ancient capital off Midlothian. Hidden in the glens 90 miles north is the town of Pittent, a redoubtable venture is lochry. In a covered-over canvas now in its ninth season off activity.

The Pitlochry Drama Festival began April 25 and ends Oct. 3. A company of 21 youthful players, recruited from London and elsewhere, performs eight times a week in a repertory that would tax the mettle of veterans.

CONFLICT FLARES

Governor Denies Butler's Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. David L. Lawrence of Pennsylvania denies that he has joined Southern democrats in a try at unseating Paul M. Butler as chairman of the National Democratic Committee.

Butler made the accusation Friday night in a statement that said the school segregation issue is involved.

But in Harrisburg, Pa., Lawrence replied that "it is ridiculous to suggest that I share the views of segregationists."

In fact, he added, it was Butler himself who associated with Southern committee members in the past.

The conflict between Butler and Lawrence could reach a climax next Wednesday, when the National Committee will meet here.

Butler said that Lawrence had mailed some committee members the same material being circulated by Southerners clamoring for the chairman's removal.

This material, Butler indicated, reproduces memos signed by him in 1954.

In one of the memos, Butler said: "I do not consider the question of segregation a political issue. I see no reason for any chairman of our party at any level to project segregation into our political discussions.

Lawrence, a veteran national committeeman for Pennsylvania, in his statement denied affiliating with the Southerners in any attempt to oust Butler.

"Chairman Butler is obviously mistaken," he said. "It was he who was associated with the Southerners in Demcember, 1954, when he was elected national chairman in New Orleans. His signature is on the paper for all to see."

In his statement Friday night, Butler said he was "sorry that Gov. Lawrence did not see fit to discuss this matter with me before circulating it to members of the National Committee."

Butler said he signed the 1954 memos a short time after the Supreme Court had outlawed public school segregation. At that time, the chairman said, integration was not a political issue.

U.S. Residents Have Chance To See Discoverer

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States residents will have their first chance Sunday to see the Discoverer V satellite rocket carrier launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., Aug. 13.

It should "appear as bright as a first magnitude star" when the 1,400-pound assembly passes over Long Island, N.Y., at about 7:25 p.m. Eastern Standard Time. The Pentagon's Advance Research Projects Agency announced Saturday.

Discoverer V will be traveling in a south to north direction at that portion of its polar orbit around the earth.

On its night pass it will appear first west of Brownsville, Tex., at about 7:25 p.m., Central Standard Time, going over Dallas and Ft. Worth, Tex., Oklahoma City, Wichita, Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Depending on the terrain, it should be visible about two minutes at any one point.

On its third visible pass, Discoverer V will appear over the California post, west of Los Angeles, and pass over Santa Barbara, between 7:55 p.m. and 8:05 p.m., Pacific Daylight Time.

ARPA said that it also should be visible over Fresno, Calif., western Nevada, eastern Oregon, western Idaho, Spokane, Wash., and western Montana.

Monitors Plan To Take Action Against Hoffa

WASHINGTON (AP) — The monitors of the Teamsters Union reportedly plan to seek contempt of court action Monday against union President James R. Hoffa to get compliance with their reform suggestions.

The monitors, named by the courts to police the 1½-million-member union, are expected to tell a U.S. Dist. Court judge Hoffa has defied their clean-up orders.

A monitor source said Friday night they had held two meetings this week with Hoffa trying to get him to agree to their suggested reforms.

One point at issue, it was learned, was a deposit of $400,000 in a noninterest bearing account in a Florida bank. The money belongs to Hoffa's home local No. 299 in Detroit.

ESCAPES FROM REDS

U.S. Airlines Gives Young Czech Job

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A handsome young Czech, who made a daring escape from Communism, has gone to work as a flight engineer for a major U.S. airline.

Several years ago Mira Slovak was piloting commercial airliners for the Red-run Czechoslovakian government. Though only 22, he was regarded as one of the safest and most reliable pilots. "I was a great belier in flight regulations and a good pilot," said Slovak in an interview given in surprisingly fluent, self-taught English.

Politically, the Reds didn't think Slovak so reliable. As a precaution in late 1951 he was taken off flights destined for points in West Germany and relegated to flying liners with Iron Curtain-only destinations.

For the next 20 months he was intermittently harassed by Communist authorities about the war-time activities of his family. "Each time they seemed to become more suspicious, and I knew time was running out," he said.

So it was as Slovak raced his DC-3 down the runway at Prague on March 23, 1953, and took off into the night bound for Berno, Czechoslovakia.

Berno was due east, deeper in Communist territory.

But this was the night for which Mira Slovak had planned for two years. It was the night he would fly west to freedom.

Slovak closed his eyes as he recalled the night. "It couldn't have started worse," he said. "The weather had been bad. That night it cleared. The moon was very bright, just what we didn't want.

"And our plane. All of the planes used on commercial flights were old, dirty DC-3's. They were never washed. This night we were given one of the very few new planes made for commercial use. It was shiny like a mirror. It would reflect the moon and be very easy to see.

"The moon and the plane made me very scared."

"As the plane cleared the runway and roared into the night, Slovak eased up from his first pilot's seat, and told the three fellow crew-members he'd be back shortly with two friends who wanted to see the cockpit.

Twenty - five passengers were aboard. Four of them had planned with Mira for the escape.

There were five Communist Party members aboard. They meant trouble for any escape effort. "I knew there were five," said Mira. "They're the only ones allowed to carry guns, and the guns must be checked when they get on a plane. The Communist government doesn't trust anyone—party members or crew members. We had to take the guns and leave the bullets with the Communists. That way no one could use them."

But Slovak, the believer in regulations, broke them that night. He concealed five loaded pistols in the upholstered rear wall of the cabin.

Two friends came back with him to the cabin. Two stayed with the passengers.

Quickly Mira handed them the pistols. "I told the pilot what was happening, and he began to fight," he related. "My two friends weren't as considerate. They knocked the two other crewmen unconscious and quickly pulled the pilot away and gave him the same."

"In the next hour I lost 15 years of my life," he remembers.

For 60 minutes Mira piloted the twin-engine plane 140 miles over the Czechoslovakian countryside, never flying higher than 150 feet.

"I was looking up for MIGs and down for church steeples," he said.

Finally they made West Germany. "The neon lights of Neurenberg gave us away," Slovak recalled. "Those five Communists in the plane knew that no Iron Curtain city had those bright lights. They knew we were in the West."

Five times they rushed the door, and five times they were thrown back by dips and turns. Then they gave up.

"A lot of passengers were very sick from the bouncing around, and I wasn't feeling so good myself. But we were free," said Slovak.

Mira and his four friends received asylum in the United States. The others flew back to Czechoslovakia.

After the Central Intelligence Agency used him for a year, Mira got a job as a crop-duster near Yakima, Wash. "I was well qualified after that flight," he said laughlingly.

Then Bill Boeing — of the Boeing aircraft family — hired him to pilot his three private planes.

Boeing introduced the handsome bachelor to power boats three years ago, and last year Mira dare-deviled his way to the top of the international boat - racing heap.

Now he's finishing a refresher course with Capital Airlines on flight engineering. He is the first non-citizen to be licensed as a flight engineer by the U.S. government. Next year he'll lost that distinction when he gets his citizenship papers.

This year he's driving bandleader Guy Lombardo's famous hydroplane," 'Miss Bardahl," in the President's Cup competition on the Potomac. The winner visits the President at the White House to receive the trophy.

"Wouldn't that be wonderful," Slovak enthused.

Rockefeller Undecided On Primary Test

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller Saturday told a group of New Hampshire citizens urging him to run in that state's presidential preference primary that he could not say at this time yes or no.

His answer to the appeal indicated a slightly more positive attitude toward running in the state's primary than he had last June when the matter first came up.

"I wish I could give you a definite 'yes' or 'no' answer at this time. But in all honesty I feel I cannot. My first responsibility is obviously to the people of New York who elected me governor last year," Rockefeller said in a telegram.

Last June, when members of Congress initiated a move to enter his name in the March 8 primary—the first of the 1960 campaign—the governor would only say he had no intention of taking any active step toward competing.

Rockefeller told his New Hampshire supporters that much work remained to be done in New York State.

"During the next few months, my time and energy will be consumed by the preparation of recommendations for another legislative program and budget to be presented to the legislature," Rockefeller said.

"Until these programs have been shaped for presentation to the legislature, it would be unfair to the citizens of New York State for me to divert my attention from these vital state problems," he added.

He told his New Hampshire supporters that he was deeply honored "by the confidence you expressed."

The statement was released by the governor's office in Albany. Rockefeller was attending a Republican picnic on Staten Island.

The latest pressure on Rockefeller to enter the primary developed Friday in a telegram from 40 prominent New Hampshire citizens.

Boy Stabbed Five Times By N.Y. Gang

NEW YORK (UPI) — An 18-year-old boy was slashed five times with a leather-cutting tool early Saturday by a gang of black-clad teen-agers.

The stabbing took place on a lower East Side street only two blocks from where two teenagers were killed last month in gang warfare. It also happened in an area where emergency details of police were on duty in a "saturation" effort to halt teen terrorism.

Police said the weapon used in the latest assault had a round wooden handle and a curved 2¼-inch blade. The blade had been honed to razor sharpness on one side and serrated to rip on the other.

It was wielded by one of a gang of Spanish - speaking teen-agers. All wore black chino pants, black shirts and red pullover sleeveless sweaters.

Their victim, Boris Bokitko, was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where 42 stitches were required to close the wounds in his back.

In the same area, Theresa Gee, 14, was shot to death and another youngster stabbed fatally in gang clashes last Aug. 23. The juvenile crime wave has sparked demands for a curfew and revision of the weapons laws.

Mayor Robert F. Wagner will meet Monday with Transit Authority officials to discuss an offer to put 500 transit policemen on voluntary foot patrol in areas where outbreaks of juvenile terrorism have been most severe.

Bokitko told police he was sitting on the steps of a post office with a friend and two girls when they were approached by two girls. He said the girls began upbraiding them in Spanish, which they did not understand.

The girls were soon joined by about a dozen youths. Bokitko said his friend ran, but he decided to stand his ground even when one of the boys drew a knife and pressed it against his throat.

He said he tried to break away when two boys began punching him but was overtaken and slashed across the back.

A patrolman ran to the scene and grabbed two of the boys. Detectives later rounded up the others.

Fire Destroys Mobile-Boloxi Railroad Span

PASCAGOULA, Miss. (UPI) — Traffic will be halted for several days on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad's main line between Mobile and Biloxi because fire destroyed one of the road's bridges Saturday.

A railroad official said repairs could not be made for several days and possibly a week. He said damage was more extensive than was first believed, when it was estimated at $150,000.

Passengers, meantime, were being relayed by bus between Mobile and Biloxi.

The structure bridged a bay at Gautier, just west of here. The railroad said the fire apparently was caused by a "hot box" in a car that passed over the bridge during the night.

SUMMER GAINS ERASED

Stock Prices Take Sharp Weekly Drop

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market took its worst weekly loss in nearly two years this week as it continued to retreat under the impact of higher interest rates, the prolonged steel strike and international uncertainties.

It was the second of two sharp weekly setbacks and it put the average back to its lowest level since June 16, thus erasing all of the summer rally.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks fell $4.60 to $222.70—a drop equal to that of the week ended Dec. 21, 1957, and last exceeded only by the plunge of $8.20 in the week ndd Oct. 12, 1957. That was the week the market shuddered under the news that the Russians had launched a Sputnik.

The rise in the Federal Reserve discount rate to 4 per cent from 3½ per cent came after the market close on Thursday but the fear of it had overhung the market since Sept. 1.

The two-month steel strike seemed no nearer solution despite a demand ffor a settlement ffrom President Eisenhower. Although the effects of the strike were still not profound, except for the railroads, there was growing concern over the future.

The possible results of the Khrushchev - Eisenhower meetings and the bringing of the Laos conflict to the attention of the United Nations provided more cause for hesitation.

In the four-day trading week, shortened by the Labor Day holiday, stocks fell sharply the first three days and ended the week with a rally which was regarded as largely technical.

Of 1,396 issues traded, 1,017 declined, 248 advanced and 131 were unchanged.

Government bonds sank to new historic lows in some cases, and corporates also fell.

WINNFIELD (Special) — Gov. Earl K. Long took advantage of the first real hog - killing weather of the season yesterday to do some butchering at his farm home here where he arrived just after midnight, before continuing o north Louisiana points for appearances beginning Monday.

During the governor's stopover it was predicted by a source usually correct on recent Long politics that three more men including the governor would qualify in the gubernatorial campaign before the deadline at 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Long has confused this issue with statements made the last few days that he may run for governor, file for that post and attorney general, or back another candidate.

There was no activity outside the governor's house late yesterday afternoon and there was no answer to telephone calls there last night.

Shelby Jackson, superintendent of education, and Sen. Estes Cole of Many were vaguely mentioned as possible filers besides Long in the governor's race.

The rise in the Federal Reserve discount rate to 4 per cent from 3½ per cent came after the market close on Thursday but the fear of it had overhung the market since Sept. 1.

The two-month steel strike seemed no nearer solution despite a demand ffor a settlement ffrom President Eisenhower. Although the effects of the strike were still not profound, except for the railroads, there was growing concern over the future.

The possible results of the Khrushchev - Eisenhower meetings and the bringing of the Laos conflict to the attention of the United Nations provided more cause for hesitation.

In the four-day trading week, shortened by the Labor Day holiday, stocks fell sharply the first three days and ended the week with a rally which was regarded as largely technical.

Of 1,396 issues traded, 1,017 declined, 248 advanced and 131 were unchanged.

Government bonds sank to new historic lows in some cases, and corporates also fell.

WINNFIELD (Special) — Gov. Earl K. Long took advantage of the first real hog - killing weather of the season yesterday to do some butchering at his farm home here where he arrived just after midnight, before continuing o north Louisiana points for appearances beginning Monday.

During the governor's stopover it was predicted by a source usually correct on recent Long politics that three more men including the governor would qualify in the gubernatorial campaign before the deadline at 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Long has confused this issue with statements made the last few days that he may run for governor, file for that post and attorney general, or back another candidate.

There was no activity outside the governor's house late yesterday afternoon and there was no answer to telephone calls there last night.

Shelby Jackson, superintendent of education, and Sen. Estes Cole of Many were vaguely mentioned as possible filers besides Long in the governor's race.

Gloria And Dianne Maza Watch Cunning 'Coon, Beulah

Mother Cat Is Proud Of 'Adopted Daughter' Raccoon

THE NAME IS BEULAH

Beguiling Raccoon

FEATURES

By TOMMY PARKS
Staff Writer

Out in West Monroe lives a raccoon which has found the nearest thing to modern, leisurely living that is available for such four footed woods creatures.

"Beulah," a five-month old pet of the B. L. Maza family of Route 1, lives a carefree life of ease surrounded by what usually is a 'coon's worst enemies, including some six dogs, ten cats, and five humans, not to mention a deodorized skunk and a one-footed duck.

Beulah, though, is by no means an ordinary coon. She not only has learned to live peaceably among such an assortment of creatures, but she has also managed to somehow emerge as a virtual ruler of them all.

'ADOPTED'

For instance Beulah has "adopted" one of the cats for her mother. No objections from Mother Cat, either, about the situation. In fact, the cat seems to be rather proud of her new offspring, even though it's over twice her size.

Beulah nurses contentedly from the cat and many times waits expectantly in her cage while Mother Cat brings frogs and other small foodstuffs from the nearby woods.

When the two animals are taken from their home cage for an outside frolic with the children, Mother Cat stays right alongside Beulah in order to protect her over-grown adopted daughter, if need be, from any impending danger.

WELL-LIKED

Actually, there is little danger for Beulah around the Maza home. She is liked by all the dogs, loved by the cats, tolerated by the one-footed duck, admired by the deodorized skunk and adored by the children.

"Beulah is the favorite of all our pets," said 12-year old Gloria, dodging the playful nips of the raccoon in her hands. The 'coon is apparently well aware of the unique position she holds in the Maza household for she occasionally tries stunts that aren't usually allowed.

"It didn't take long to teach her not to climb on the dining table," Mrs. Maza commented. "Raccoons are supposed to be pretty neat while eating, but Beulah certainly isn't. I guess she's just spoiled."

PLAYFUL

The frisky 'coon obviously loves inside the house better than anywhere else. The children decided to take her inside while this article was being written. Once inside the door, Beulah hopped to the floor, ran over and promptly slapped a small dog squarely on the nose before scampering for cover behind a nearby sofa.

A game of "hit and run" soon ensued between the dog, a small Feist named "Tippy," and the playful 'coon. The two's playful antics carried them across the living room, on chairs, under tables, on sofas, and behind the people watching, and finally ended up with a wrestling bout between the two.

"Beulah has always preferred Tippy as a playmate to the other dogs," Billy Ray said.

Once, when left alone to play in a tub of water in the bathroom, Beulah climbed up to the window, pulled the latch, raised the window, and went outside into the yard, where she was found later romping and playing with the dogs, many of which are regular hunting breeds.

NO DAMAGE

No damage was done, Maza said, although some of the best hunting dogs wore a guilty expression for some time afterward.

Although she loves the outdoors, especially a good climbing tree, Beulah is more at ease inside, where her curious antics keep the Maza family on the alert.

"She loves to stick her fingers in the telephone dial and turn it," Mrs. Maza commented. "And she has been known to listen in and try to bite the dial tone."

No argument has been received yet from telephone operators.

'SMARTEST'

"She's one of the smartest little animals I've ever seen," Maza commented. "When she was younger, we put her in a cage with a latch, but she easily learned to unlatch the door, open it, and run outside."

"She's also learned that some things are to be let alone in the house," Mrs. Maza pointed out. "I've spanked her several times about getting into my whatnot shelf, and she doesn't go near them anymore."

Beulah, though her diet includes practically everything she is offered, prefers sweets of any kind. And, true to raccoon tradition, she prefers a dish of water in which she can brush her food before eating it.

TO SOAK

Although some people believe a raccoon washes its food clean before eating, the animals actually use the water to help soak the food for easier eating, Maza explained.

He had planned at first to use Beulah to help train his dogs to hunt, but changed his mind later.

Or rather, Beulah changed his mind for him. Today, the dogs wouldn't think of hunting one of their favorite companions.

It seems the beguiling little 'coon has succeeded in making friends with everybody she meets, even with those that were meant to be enemies from the start.

But then, all this doesn't seem too hard to accomplish when you're as appealing as Beulah.

Another Great Penal Reform Wave Seen As National Need

Editor's note — Crime is big business. It costs the nation 20 billion dollars a year. It costs U.S. taxpayers 250 million dollars annually just to keep convicted felons behind bars. Now the question arises whether our prisons are falling down on the job of reformation. This is the first of two articles on America's prison problem.

By ROGER GREEN
Associated Press Staff Writer

America's prisons beset by frequent bloody riots and moral dry rot, stand in need of another great wave of penal reform such as swept the country more than 150 years ago.

That is the emphatic concensus of many leading penologists and prison officials.

In an era of growing enlightenment, experts say, too many U.S. prisons are outmoded snakepits of human despair—grim, sour-smelling bastilles where thousands of men are entombed year after year in a grey steel world.

SLOWLY

Even hard-headed critics who scoff at any pity-the-poor-prisoner approach—are slowly beginning to realize that some U.S. prisons amount to virtually a national disgrace.

Then, too, recent comments by American visitors to the Soviet Union unfavorably comparing U.S. penal methods with Soviet prisons, have set off fresh demands for a searching re-examination of this country's custodial system.

"More than 40 years as a prison official have led me to question not only the place but the effectiveness and the validity of the prison system in our society," say Dr. Frederick S. Baldi, former warden of Pennsylvania prisons.

Harry Elmer Barnes, noted sociologist and longtime advocate of penal reform, declares: "We shall ultimately come to admit that society has been as unfortunate in handing over criminals to lawyers and judges as it once was in entrusting surgery to barbers.

CONTROL

"A hundred years ago we allowed lawyers and judges to have the same control of the insane as they still exert over the criminal, but we now recognize that insanity is a complex medical problem which we entrust to properly trained experts in the field of neurology and psychiatry.

"We may hope that in another 100 years the treatment of the criminal will be submitted to medical and sociological experts."

Some authorities contend that about half the nation's prisoners could and should be turned out of prison—either shifted to open-air correctional camps and farms or released on parole.

The day of the high-walled Big House, they say, should be ended for all but the toughest, most vicious and unregenerate offenders.

The feeling among most leading officials today is that widespread reforms are impending—through progress will vary from region to region, state to state.

FIRST WAVE

It was during the American Revolution, in 1776, that the first great wave of penal reform started with Pennsylvania's adoption of a state constitution which decreed that henceforth "punishments (shall be) made in some cases less sanguinary" and "houses be provided for punishing at hard labor."

In the colonies, flogging, branding, the pillory aid the stocks had flourished. Now the British criminal code, with it's 220 separate offenses punishable by death, was discarded and the modern concept of penology born. With time, confinement behind prison walls has almost universally replaced public degradation, torture and death for all but the most heinous crimes.

Today penologists are taking a hard new look at the nation's 200 jam-packed federal and state prisons, which house over 200,000 inmates. They are clamoring for far-reaching reforms.

The result, they say, could be as revolutionary as the passing of the prison lockstep, ball and chain, zebra-striped uniform, shaven head, the sweatbox and the dread silent system which drove men insane.

OUTLOOK

Emphasizing that 95 per cent of the men and women now in prison will eventually return to society—and two-thirds of those released will be sent back to prison within five years—penal authorities are asking these questions:

What is wrong with American prisons?

Are we doing enough to rehabilitate criminals while they are in custody? Are we keeping them too long behind bars?

Is crime a socio-medical problem that should be treated like a disease?

Are we coddling prison inmates?

Or are we heedlessly letting them rot, like so much human refuse?

A nationwide survey discloses these facts:

1. Most U.S. prisons are explosively overcrowded. This is one of the prime reasons, authorities say, behind the more than 100 major prison riots which have erupted during the past 10 years.

2. Prisons are failing badly in their No. 1 objective of reform. More than 65 per cent of the men in prison have been there before.

HOTBEDS

3. Many prisons are hotbeds of homosexuality and virtual crime schools for teaching criminal techniques to young offenders thrown in with hard-rock convicts.

4. The most pressing immediate need, according to many wardens, is the establishment of a psychiatric clinic in every prison to weed out the hopeless defectives and degenerates—and keep them apart.

5. U.S. prison sentences, among the stiffest in the world, are often so severe and inflexible they destroy incentive for good behavior rehabilitation, many penologists assert.

6. Wide variations in sentences —where one man gets 10 years to life for armed robbery, while the man in the next cell gets off with a one-year sentence for the same offense—cause bitterness among prison inmates and plant the seeds of hatred against the social system which put them behind bars.

For example: in three states, the maximum penalty for the sale of narcotics (first offense) is three months. In three other states, the penalty is life imprisonment.

Inadequate as most of the country's prisons are, there are notable exceptions in both the federal and state systems.

Pleasant, modern-style "correctional institutions" — they aren't even called prisons any more— are slowly replacing the somber 18th century bastille in some areas, particularly in Wisconsin, California, Minnesota, New Mexico and Pennsylvania.

Many of these are located in the open country. In some cases the harsh old disciplinary rules have been thrown overboard.

The Federal Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa. lies in a 1,000-acre tract off U.S. Highway No. 15, and travelers on that route might easily mistake its Italian Renaissance structures for those of an Ivy League campus.

TREATMENT

At Ohio's gleaming new Marion Correctional Institution, just outside the sleepy little town where President Warren G. Harding lived, inmates are permitted to have their own TV sets in their cells, and some keep parakeets as pets. In season, a frequent item on the menu is strawberry shortcake topped with whipped cream.

Another example is the much-publicized federal "prison without walls" at Seagoville, Tex., where each of the 500 inmates has his own room, carries his own key, and is free to move around inside the building without restriction.

Seagoville officials say that "any man can walk off any day he chooses—but he'd be a fool to do it."

Enclosed by a seven-foot fence, designed "to keep the livestock out rather than to keep the man in," Seagoville has an escape record of less than one per cent.

Top penal authorities are gravely concerned over the slow progress toward modernization along with a host of other problems in trying to curb the steady rise in U.S. crime. What can be done?

"Hard decisions must be made" says James V. Bennett, longtime director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

QUESTION

"We must determine whether prisons are to be merely vast human warehouses, degrading and self-defeating because they demand little beyond obsequiousness and regimentation, or whether they are to become dynamic instrumentalities for the reshaping of character."

Built 120 year ago, the huge fortress-style penitentiary now houses 4,600 convicts in cellblocks designed to hold 2,500. No less than 2,400 inmates are packed four to a cell in tiny steel-barred cubicles smaller than a horse stall. Some experts fear it is ripe for an explosion.

Speaking of the recent series of riots and escapes in other prisons, Warden Ralph W. Alvis told me: "The worst prisoners today are the young psychopaths — the vicious punk who doesn't care what he does, how much he hurts anybody else, or what happens to himself. They're the ones that start the riots.

"I don't have to worry much about the old-timers, the so-called hardened criminal serving a long stretch. How would you like to meet a real nice guy—a murderer?"

"I'm a lifer. I killed a cop," the man said quietly. "I've been paying for it for 27 years behind walls."

Outside, in the sun-baked prison yard, two-abreast columns of men 1,600 strong, marched to the messhall in quick step to the beat of drums and the blare of a seven-piece brass band.

Or are we heedlessly letting them rot, like so much human refuse?

A nationwide survey discloses these facts:

1. Most U.S. prisons are explosively overcrowded. This is one of the prime reasons, authorities say, behind the more than 100 major prison riots which have erupted during the past 10 years.

2. Prisons are failing badly in their No. 1 objective of reform. More than 65 per cent of the men in prison have been there before.

HOTBEDS

3. Many prisons are hotbeds of homosexuality and virtual crime schools for teaching criminal techniques to young offenders thrown in with hard-rock convicts.

4. The most pressing immediate need, according to many wardens, is the establishment of a psychiatric clinic in every prison to weed out the hopeless defectives and degenerates—and keep them apart.

5. U.S. prison sentences, among the stiffest in the world, are often so severe and inflexible they destroy incentive for good behavior rehabilitation, many penologists assert.

6. Wide variations in sentences—where one man gets 10 years to life for armed robbery, while the man in the next cell gets off with a one-year sentence for the same offense—cause bitterness among prison inmates and plant the seeds of hatred against the social system which put them behind bars.

For example: in three states, the maximum penalty for the sale of narcotics (first offense) is three months. In three other states, the penalty is life imprisonment.

Inadequate as most of the country's prisons are, there are notable exceptions in both the federal and state systems.

Pleasant, modern-style "correctional institutions" — they aren't even called prisons any more—are slowly replacing the somber 18th century bastille in some areas, particularly in Wisconsin, California, Minnesota, New Mexico and Pennsylvania.

Many of these are located in the open country. In some cases the harsh old disciplinary rules have been thrown overboard.

The Federal Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa. lies in a 1,000-acre tract off U.S. Highway No. 15, and travelers on that route might easily mistake its Italian Renaissance structures for those of an Ivy League campus.

TREATMENT

At Ohio's gleaming new Marion Correctional Institution, just outside the sleepy little town where President Warren G. Harding lived, inmates are permitted to have their own TV sets in their cells, and some keep parakeets as pets. In season, a frequent item on the menu is strawberry shortcake topped with whipped cream.

Another example is the much-publicized federal "prison without walls" at Seagoville, Tex., where each of the 500 inmates has his own room, carries his own key, and is free to move around inside the building without restriction.

Seagoville officials say that "any man can walk off any day he chooses—but he'd be a fool to do it."

Enclosed by a seven-foot fence, designed "to keep the livestock out rather than to keep the man in," Seagoville has an escape record of less than one per cent.

Top penal authorities are gravely concerned over the slow progress toward modernization along with a host of other problems in trying to curb the steady rise in U.S. crime. What can be done?

"Hard decisions must be made" says James V. Bennett, longtime director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

QUESTION

"We must determine whether prisons are to be merely vast human warehouses, degrading and self-defeating because they demand little beyond obsequiousness and regimentation, or whether they are to become dynamic instrumentalities for the reshaping of character."

Built 120 year ago, the huge fortress-style penitentiary now houses 4,600 convicts in cellblocks designed to hold 2,500. No less than 2,400 inmates are packed four to a cell in tiny steel-barred cubicles smaller than a horse stall. Some experts fear it is ripe for an explosion.

Speaking of the recent series of riots and escapes in other prisons, Warden Ralph W. Alvis told me: "The worst prisoners today are the young psychopaths — the vicious punk who doesn't care what he does, how much he hurts anybody else, or what happens to himself. They're the ones that start the riots.

"I don't have to worry much about the old-timers, the so-called hardened criminal serving a long stretch. How would you like to meet a real nice guy—a murderer?"

"I'm a lifer. I killed a cop," the man said quietly. "I've been paying for it for 27 years behind walls."

Outside, in the sun-baked prison yard, two-abreast columns of men 1,600 strong, marched to the messhall in quick step to the beat of drums and the blare of a seven-piece brass band.

Trying Politics Again

Of course, the intended meaning of that is that the person wants to do what is right. In everyday practice, the frequent meaning is that the person just doesn't want to admit he is wrong.

That is the way it is now with the big labor union bosses. They have been following a wrong course but they would go to almost any lengths rather than admit it. Right now they are threatening to do more of one of the principal things that got them into trouble and are acting as if it were something new.

Union leaders said big business had forced them into an economic doghouse. They vowed to get out.

Organized labor's top chiefs devoted a series of statements to complaints about the new labor control bill that has been adopted by congress, and employers' resistance to wage increases, particularly in the steel strike.

There was a bitter overtone in all the union leaders' comments, accompanied by pledges to step up political and bargaining activities.

George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor-Congress of Industrial organizations, in a statement echoed by a number of other top union chiefs, said:

"Big business leaders are doing everything in their power to weaken our trade union movement.

"We have determined that we will have to organize for political education and political action in the same thorough and painstaking way that we organized in the past for economic purposes."

Two things which contributed most to the enactment of the fairly strong labor control bill accepted by house and senate conferees were racketeering by labor union bosses and the publicly announced campaigns of the labor unions to control the election of congressmen and other high national and state officials.

In combination, these thing were intolerable, since they meant that the affairs of our country were about to be brought under the control of crooked labor bosses.

James R. Hoffa, president of the Teamsters Union, had let it be known that he intended to try for international control of all transportation, by land, sea and air. He had demonstrated that he would stop at nothing to win his own election. He used fake unions, ex-convicts, hoodlums and racketeers to build up his strength in the unions.

Revelations of crooked handling of union funds, such as that engaged in by Dave Beck, former president of the Teamsters, added to the disrepute which fell upon the unions, both the worthy and the unworthy.

Control of national and state politics by labor union bosses would soon bring about a socialistic form of government. The power wielded by the unions in politics for the last 25 years has helped to lead this country in that direction.

If the unions had stuck to organizing for economic purposes, instead of trying to take over the reins of government, if they had paid their bosses reasonable salaries instead of exorbitant salaries and if the bosses had been honest instead of dishonest it is not likely that the people would have revolted against their practices.

The unions are trying to blame so-called big business for putting them in the doghouse but the people who really put them there were the ordinary citizens, the average voters. In appraising sentiment, congressmen know that numbers are an important factor. The congressmen reached the point at which they were more afraid of offending the people than of incurring the wrath of the union officials. That was the reason a fairly strong labor bill was enacted.

Now the union leaders want to do more of the very thing that put them in the doghouse. They want to go into politics on a still more aggressive and dominant level, although it is difficult to see how that could be done. In the last races, the unions donated to more than half the congressmen who were elected. They thought they had it made but the people revolted against political domination by crooked labor bosses.

Organized Labor Aims

About the only bright spot about the compromise labor bill passed by Congress is that it does deal with secondary boycotts and blackmail picketing. Otherwise, the bill is not strong enough for the present needs of the nation.

The law does offer hopes that more legislation will be forthcoming in the same direction — laws which will make certain that crookedness and extortion in the labor field is dealt with just as sternly as are such offenses in the field of banking and other businesses.

Beyond the law, what is now needed most on the national labor scene is a clear statement from the present leaders in the Hoffa, Reuther and Meany brackets as to how far down the road to socialism they intend to travel. Their open intentions to push their philosophies into next year's political campaign places them in a position where they should spell out their beliefs to the public.

There was a time in the early days of organized labor when guilds were established to set up standards of production and act as a means to pass skills from one generation to the next. While such ideals do not figure in present day national movements, they are uncomfortably evident in the workmanship of some of the automobiles imported from Europe.

Even the more modern concept of collective bargaining in labor has taken a back seat to unions in politics. Samuel Gompers, one of the founders of organized labor as it exists in the United States, declared unions could remain strong only so long as they remained out of politics. Walter Reuther in particular seems to have dropped this axiom.

Congressmen are hesitant to have their names attached to any labor reform law — even the one recently passed. Senator Kennedy does not want the new act to be known as the "Kennedy Act." He is concerned, no doubt, that national labor leadership in condemning the act would also condemn his chances as a presidential hopeful.

It is hoped Senator Kennedy and his colleagues will also recall the loud, left-wing attacks on the "Taft-Hartley Slave Labor Bill." Even with such a vicious attack on the law and its authors, Senator Taft was re-elected to his senatorial post by 435,000 votes, the largest majority in the state's political history. Top brass in the big unions could not overlook the fact that many rank and file union members voted for Taft in that election.

The philosophy of Reuther and other union leaders is clearly a desire for a share of the profits of industry without the risk of making industry pay. Whatever the means, the end of such an idea is socialism. For big labor wants not so much better pay and fringe benefits for the rank and file members but an increasing flowing into its treasury each year. This is just another way of drawing big dividends from industry without taking the risk of even the smallest stockholder.

When Others Fail

GEORGE SOKOLSKY

Propaganda Is Denied

Khrushchev Asserts His Country Not Conducting Verbal Campaign Against United States

Nikita Khrushchev said:

"It is quite incorrect to say that propaganda against the United States is waged in the Soviet Union. I am saying this now and I shall say it also during my stay in the United States. There has never been any propaganda waged in the USSR against the United States. We did and we shall wage propaganda only against militarists, against saber-rattling generals, against monopolists who urge the continuation of the cold war . . ."

From 1917 to 1959, for 42 years, Soviet Russian agencies have conducted propaganda not only in Russia but throughout the world against the United States, against the American way of life and against particular Americans. The Communist Party in every country has attacked the United States, American purposes and intentions.

As recently as August 30, Khrushchev delivered a eulogy of Mikhail A. Sholokhov, a Soviet novelist, whom he is bringing to the United States. Note how snidely he keeps the embers of hatred for the United States glowing:

". . . (Sholokhov's books) are directed against those who want to interfere with the peaceful creative work and to push the peoples into the maelstrom of fresh calamities. Remember the story 'Man's Destiny.' This story . . . is not only a terrible accusation against those who caused the horrors of World War II, but also a passionate protest against those who are trying today to unleash a new war which threatens the peoples with still greater horrors and suffering."

In this same speech, Khrushchev attacked Vice President Nixon quite frankly. He said:

". . . When (Nixon) was here in the Soviet Union I openly told him that the Soviet people would not recognize the Nixon of old. We knew him as a sympathizer of McCarthyism. Then his speeches began to show a glimmer of a true understanding of the present situation and the possible ways of coming out of the situation which had arisen . . ."

Then he said:

"What, then, happened after his departure? Presently Mr. Nixon is, as it were, apologizing for his recent pronouncements in the USSR; he uses the typical language of McCarthyite reactionaries and repeats stale phrases about the threat of Communist domination over all the people of the world. It seems to us that one ought not to resurrect the spirit of McCarthyism if he is sincerely striving for a relaxation of tension and an improvement of Soviet-American relations. But it appears that Mr. Nixon thinks differently.

"In the same speech he said that the U.S. Communist Party, like all Communist parties in the world, is directed and controlled by Moscow. As in the past, it will in the future occupy itself with espionage and subversive activity to serve the interests of Communist governments whenever they are in conflict with the interests of the United States or other free countries. These are old and stale inventions, calculated to frighten inexperienced people and to incite them against the Soviet Union. What data does Mr. Nixon possess on this point? Precisely none at all because it does not and cannot exist . . ."

Unfortunately, the data does exist. It exists in the report of the Canadian Royal Commission, in the record of the Rosenberg trials, in the record of Dr. Klaus Fuchs' imprisonment in Great Britain, in the Alger Hiss case, in the Trial of the Eleven, in the investigation of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, in the record of the Senate Internal Security subcommittee, in the files of the FBI, of Army and Navy intelligence and possibly even in the files of the CIA. The record is so full, so conclusive and runs continuously from 1917 to 1959.

Khrushchev continues:

". . . Does the 'free world' really exist there where the colonizers rule; where all human liberties are supposed and where there is not even a trace of democracy? No, the peoples do not understand freedom in this manner. They see it where the governments are composed of the workers, where they are accountable to the people, where they serve the interests of the people, where there is no exploitation of man by man and where the people are in fact, and not in words, the genuine masters of their destiny."

Commenting on this speech, Buranov, a Soviet official commentator, speaking in English, in a broadcast on the Soviet South Asian Service said:

"Certain forces . . . are aimed at disparaging the significance of the forthcoming exchange of visits . . ."

No propaganda! What!

VERNON LOUVIERE

Air Power Halt

Slow Strangulation May Explain Suppression Of Book

WASHINGTON — The way American air power is being slowly strangled may be the real reason why the Pentagon is suppressing a book by the chief of the Strategic Air Command.

As matters now stand Gen. Thomas S. Power's "Design for Survival" will gather dust at the Pentagon until and unless sufficient pressure is developed to force its release.

Sen. Stuart Symington, Dem.-Mo., former Secretary of the Air Force, has twice told the Senate the American people have a right to know what the Power's book contains.

Rep. John E. Moss, Dem-Calif., chairman of the Government Information Subcommittee, is trying to learn why Secretary of Defense Neil McElroy has prevented publication of the book despite the fact the Air Force gave Power full approval to write it.

The Pentagon admits the book is not being suppressed because of security reasons. The only official reason given is that no military officer is permitted to write a book about his work if he heads a "major" command and as long as he is in service.

So far, according to Moss, the Pentagon has not been able to show him anything in writing which bears out this regulation. And Symington gave the Senate a list of 15 general officers who in the past few years have written and published books on their areas of military responsibility while on active duty.

Interestingly, one of the authors is Gen. Dwight Eisenhower whose "Crusade in Europe" was published in 1948. It may be recalled that Mr. Eisenhower, through a special tax ruling, earned over $500,000 on this book.

What, then, is behind the book suppression?

There is growing suspicion that it is being banned because civilian leaders of the Defense Department are afraid of the effect it will have on drastic cuts in United States military power they are planning and will soon announce.

Already, the military economy ax has fallen on some weapons systems which only a few months ago top military planners told Congress the Nation could not do without. Every cutback, every contract cancellation can be traced to budgetary motives. It is being said over and over again that Uncle Sam's bookkeepers — not generals and admirals — are now making military decisions.

Production of the highly - successful B-58 supersonic bomber has been cut. The proposed B-70 chemical bomber is in trouble. In almost every instance air power is the sacrificial goat in the Pentagon's effort to stay within a tight and, what some competent observers believe, unrealistic budget.

At this point the American people have only a hint at the message Gen. Power is trying to put across. A preface to the book has been released and it contains some revealing passages.

Power makes it clear that the military problems of survival are no longer the sole concern of the men in uniform and their civilian superiors. He says the American public not only has the right but the "urgent" need to know the full truth about these problems.

Because the military aspects of the global struggle between the free and Communist worlds is only one phase of the overall problem, Power emphasizes, "I had to touch on certain political, economic and related subjects."

The words "political" and "economic" seem to indicate the general could not tell his story honestly and forthrightly without stepping on some important toes.

Power believes that none of the problems this country has faced in the past can compare to the formidable threat of nuclear aggression which we are facing today.

"Nor will we ever again have the time to plan, to rally, and to act after the aggressor has struck," he warns. "If he were to strike today, he would find us ready to strike back but ill prepared to ward off his blow."

Here, then, is part of the story which the Pentagon does not feel the American people are entitled to read.

Khrush's Safety

Government Is Confident No Untoward Incident Will Occur

The most elaborate preparations ever made to protect the person of a foreign visitor have been made for Khrushchev. Not only have various security or federal police agencies of this Government worked with State and city police agencies in the various stops to be made by Khrushchev and his entourage, but Maj. General Nikolai S. Zacharoff, of the Russian secret police, and his assistant Vladimir T. Burdin have made a tour.

Zacharoff and Burdin have been in Washington, New York and Pittsburgh and are visiting Los Angeles, San Francisco, Des Moines and Ames, Iowa, the full stops on Khrushchev's tour. There will be no whistle stops, and no deviation from his schedule because of security reasons. Air fields, hotels and possible danger spots have been thoroughly cased by both our own and the Russian security officers.

Three of the places where Khrushchev is to dine are the White House and the National Press Club in Washington and a civic banquet in San Francisco. Meticulous safety precautions are to be taken at all three. Invitations went out a week ago for the White House dinner. These invitations read:

"The President and Mrs. Eisenhower request the pleasure of the company of . . . at a dinner on Tuesday, September 15, 1959, at eight o'clock on the occasion of the visit of His Excellency, the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Union of Soviet Socialists Republics, and Mrs. Khrushchev."

"His Excellency" need have no worry about a paucity of bodyguards at the Executive Mansion. For several years now the White House has been the most guarded building and small plot of ground in the world. In addition to the large Secret Service detail there are 170 White House policemen. And practically the entire Washington police force plus such of the crack men of police departments from others cities as are desired will guard his journey through Washington streets to the White House gates.

Khrushchev, of course, will have his own large number of body guards just as the Secret Service accompanies President Eisenhower when he goes to other countries. But this Soviet guard is only an infinitesimal part of those policing his safety.

At the National Press Club a great cordon of police will not only be placed in the streets approaching it, but the police force on all the floors of the thirteen story building will run into the hundreds.

In the banquet room of the National Press Club itself United States and Russian security men will be placed at about a ratio of one police officer to each six newsmen. Similar painstaking safety plans are to be carried out at the Mark Hopkins Hotel where Khrushchev and his entourage will stop in San Francisco as well as the banquet in the Golden Gate city."

Handling the large party that will accompany Khrushchev in his tour is a real problem. There will be 39 Russian newspapermen in his party. Soviet officials, the Khrushchev family and the various Russian officials and newspapermen altogether will make up about 125 persons. Ambassador to the United Nations Henry Cabot Lodge, who will accompany the man whom our protocol calls "His Excellency" and not "Premier," will also have a considerable party.

Nearly 300 newspapermen, magazine writers, television commentators, cameramen, technicians, etc., made application to accompany Khrushchev from the time of his arrival until his departure. The State Department cut down, but still the number is unwieldly. Some of these newspapermen and reporters for other media who were approved for the trip probably will be seeing little of Khrushchev. Small pools of not to exceed three American and three Russian newsmen will be permitted to go with him at some places and they will make available to others the information they glean.

From the first our security officers have made their plans for the protection of Khrushchev by taking into full consideration that the man who is coming to our shores has been regarded by most Americans as our enemy in war — a cold war to be sure but one which could turn into shooting war.

Actually ever since the invitation was issued letters poured into the White House asking the President to cancel or to postpone it because of the trouble the Communists have since stirred up in Tibet, Laos and India.

There has also been full recognition of the fact that this country only recently observed a "Captive Nations Week" and now the Captor of those nations is to be our guest for twelve days. Chicago and Detroit with their large Polish, Hungarian, Roumanian, Lithuanian, Czech and other people with relatives still in those countries were ruled off the Khrushchev route because they were the cities where it was believed most likely some attempts at bodily harm for the visitor might be attempted.

For the cities and the one farm visitt tight security arrangements were formulated. Trouble cannot be entirely ruled out for no head of a foreign government so disliked, even hated, has ever come to the United States. But for all that this government thinks it has the situation safely in hand.

Presses Down More Thinking Caps Than Anything Recent

WASHINGTON, D. C. — ".... we must bring down the thing called Liberalism, which is powerful but decadent; and salvage a thing called conservatism, which is weak but viable."

William F. Buckley, Jr.
in "Up From Liberalism."

Nothing in our time has so pressed the thinking caps down upon American brows as this visit of Nikita Khrushchev.

As competitive events, you might name the atom-bombing of Hiroshima and the launching of the first Russian Sputnik. The mushroom cloud was captured by the Leftists, some of them traitors and some of them merely fools, as a symbol of American guilt the expiation of which was to be de-nationalization of the USA and gloabalissimo. The Russian "moon," shot into space, was a lucky break in that if shook up the country and caused it to perceive (what many of us had been calling attention to) that "progressivism" and education-for-everybody had raised us to be a generation of illiterates and slogansingers.

But Hiroshima and Sputnik were high-brow events. Khruschev's coming has the lowest common denominator of any comparable inter-national incident of our time. Savants of the cocktail circuit discuss it with their taxi drivers, and the country club set is as much interested as the church groups. For here comes the current leader of the World Revolution which began with the storming of the Bastille on July 14, 1789. Khrushchev is the worker peasant who tore up the Parisian paving blocks, who charged through the musket fire of the soldiery, who cut off the Queen's head, who turned atheist, who did a great deal to Share-the-Wealth but who, in Burke's famous phrase, brought death to the "age of chivalry."

It is no wonder if Khrushchev's coming to America as a State visitor did not startle the country which had a revolution as unlike the Franco - Russian orgy as anything could be. The USA got rid of King George III without killing him with his wife and family. Our Revolutionists managed to change Crown and Church for political and religious freedom without setting up any new dictators. But with the Communist boss in Washington, New York, touring grandly from Atlantic to Pacific, lionized by our high and mighty, we know how the royal families in France and Russia must have felt as they looked out their windows at the mob. Make no mistake The torch of revolution is at our door.

And how do we defend ourselves, intellectually and politically? Until quite recently our defense was the cheap cynicism of, "When you can't beat 'em, join 'em." With the recognition of Russia in 1933, we started to "join 'em" by becoming, as Russia herself, "a Socialist Republic," a workers' paradise, a phase of the World Revolution into compulsory equality at home and no-nationalism abroad.

But some time since 1950, a wholesome change set in. We began to stop aping the Reds. Today, the American people have pulled the thinking cap determinedly down over one eye and commenced a reversal in earnest. It is not insignificant, I think, that the most lop - sided Democratic Congress in two decades chose the time between Khrushchev's invitation and arrival to pass the toughest Labor bill in history. It is remarkable that with Mr. Eisenhower's popularity at its crest, his decision to exchange visits with the top Communist is far from warmly acclaimed. Most important of all, it seems to me, we are beginning to hear public men hint at the possibility of "preventive war."

Top brass in the big unions could not overlook the fact that many rank and file union members voted for Taft in that election.

The philosophy of Reuther and other union leaders is clearly a desire for a share of the profits of industry without the risk of making industry pay. Whatever the means, the end of such an idea is socialism. For big labor wants not so much better pay and fringe benefits for the rank and file members but an increasing flowing into its treasury each year. This is just another way of drawing big dividends from industry without taking the risk of even the smallest stockholder.

When Others Fail

GEORGE SOKOLSKY

Propaganda Is Denied

Nikita Khrushchev said:

"It is quite incorrect to say that propaganda against the United States is waged in the Soviet Union. I am saying this now and I shall say it also during my stay in the United States. There has never been any propaganda waged in the USSR against the United States. We did and we shall wage propaganda only against militarists, against saber-rattling generals, against monopolists who urge the continuation of the cold war . . ."

From 1917 to 1959, for 42 years, Soviet Russian agencies have conducted propaganda not only in Russia but throughout the world against the United States, against the American way of life and against particular Americans. The Communist Party in every country has attacked the United States, American purposes and intentions.

As recently as August 30, Khrushchev delivered a eulogy of Mikhail A. Sholokhov, a Soviet novelist, whom he is bringing to the United States. Note how snidely he keeps the embers of hatred for the United States glowing:

". . . (Sholokhov's books) are directed against those who want to interfere with the peaceful creative work and to push the peoples into the maelstrom of fresh calamities. Remember the story 'Man's Destiny.' This story . . . is not only a terrible accusation against those who caused the horrors of World War II, but also a passionate protest against those who are trying today to unleash a new war which threatens the peoples with still greater horrors and suffering."

In this same speech, Khrushchev attacked Vice President Nixon quite frankly. He said:

". . . When (Nixon) was here in the Soviet Union I openly told him that the Soviet people would not recognize the Nixon of old. We knew him as a sympathizer of McCarthyism. Then his speeches began to show a glimmer of a true understanding of the present situation and the possible ways of coming out of the situation which had arisen . . ."

Then he said:

"What, then, happened after his departure? Presently Mr. Nixon is, as it were, apologizing for his recent pronouncements in the USSR; he uses the typical language of McCarthyite reactionaries and repeats stale phrases about the threat of Communist domination over all the people of the world. It seems to us that one ought not to resurrect the spirit of McCarthyism if he is sincerely striving for a relaxation of tension and an improvement of Soviet-American relations. But it appears that Mr. Nixon thinks differently.

"In the same speech he said that the U.S. Communist Party, like all Communist parties in the world, is directed and controlled by Moscow. As in the past, it will in the future occupy itself with espionage and subversive activity to serve the interests of Communist governments whenever they are in conflict with the interests of the United States or other free countries. These are old and stale inventions, calculated to frighten inexperienced people and to incite them against the Soviet Union. What data does Mr. Nixon possess on this point? Precisely none at all because it does not and cannot exist . . ."

Unfortunately, the data does exist. It exists in the report of the Canadian Royal Commission, in the record of the Rosenberg trials, in the record of Dr. Klaus Fuchs' imprisonment in Great Britain, in the Alger Hiss case, in the Trial of the Eleven, in the investigation of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, in the record of the Senate Internal Security subcommittee, in the files of the FBI, of Army and Navy intelligence and possibly even in the files of the CIA. The record is so full, so conclusive and runs continuously from 1917 to 1959.

Khrushchev continues:

". . . Does the 'free world' really exist there where the colonizers rule; where all human liberties are supposed and where there is not even a trace of democracy? No, the peoples do not understand freedom in this manner. They see it where the governments are composed of the workers, where they are accountable to the people, where they serve the interests of the people, where there is no exploitation of man by man and where the people are in fact, and not in words, the genuine masters of their destiny."

Commenting on this speech, Buranov, a Soviet official commentator, speaking in English, in a broadcast on the Soviet South Asian Service said:

"Certain forces . . . are aimed at disparaging the significance of the forthcoming exchange of visits . . ."

No propaganda! What!

VERNON LOUVIERE

Air Power Halt

Slow Strangulation May Explain Suppression Of Book

WASHINGTON — The way American air power is being slowly strangled may be the real reason why the Pentagon is suppressing a book by the chief of the Strategic Air Command.

As matters now stand Gen. Thomas S. Power's "Design for Survival" will gather dust at the Pentagon until and unless sufficient pressure is developed to force its release.

Sen. Stuart Symington, Dem.-Mo., former Secretary of the Air Force, has twice told the Senate the American people have a right to know what the Power's book contains.

Rep. John E. Moss, Dem-Calif., chairman of the Government Information Subcommittee, is trying to learn why Secretary of Defense Neil McElroy has prevented publication of the book despite the fact the Air Force gave Power full approval to write it.

The Pentagon admits the book is not being suppressed because of security reasons. The only official reason given is that no military officer is permitted to write a book about his work if he heads a "major" command and as long as he is in service.

So far, according to Moss, the Pentagon has not been able to show him anything in writing which bears out this regulation. And Symington gave the Senate a list of 15 general officers who in the past few years have written and published books on their areas of military responsibility while on active duty.

Interestingly, one of the authors is Gen. Dwight Eisenhower whose "Crusade in Europe" was published in 1948. It may be recalled that Mr. Eisenhower, through a special tax ruling, earned over $500,000 on this book.

What, then, is behind the book suppression?

There is growing suspicion that it is being banned because civilian leaders of the Defense Defense Department are afraid of the effect it will have on drastic cuts in United States military power they are planning and will soon announce.

Already, the military economy ax has fallen on some weapons systems which only a few months ago top military planners told Congress the Nation could not do without. Every cutback, every contract cancellation can be traced to budgetary motives. It is being said over and over again that Uncle Sam's bookkeepers — not generals and admirals — are now making military decisions.

Production of the highly-successful B-58 supersonic bomber has been cut. The proposed B-70 chemical bomber is in trouble. In almost every instance air power is the sacrificial goat in the Pentagon's effort to stay within a tight and, what some competent observers believe, unrealistic budget.

At this point the American people have only a hint at the message Gen. Power is trying to put across. A preface to the book has been released and it contains some revealing passages.

Power makes it clear that the military problems of survival are no longer the sole concern of the men in uniform and their civilian superiors. He says the American public not only has the right but the "urgent" need to know the full truth about these problems.

Because the military aspects of the global struggle between the free and Communist worlds is only one phase of the overall problem, Power emphasizes, "I had to touch on certain political, economic and related subjects."

The words "political" and "economic" seem to indicate the general could not tell his story honestly and forthrightly without stepping on some important toes.

Power believes that none of the problems this country has faced in the past can compare to the formidable threat of nuclear aggression which we are facing today.

"Nor will we ever again have the time to plan, to rally, and to act after the aggressor has struck," he warns. "If he were to strike today, he would find us ready to strike back but ill prepared to ward off his blow."

Here, then, is part of the story which the Pentagon does not feel the American people are entitled to read.

BASCOM TIMMONS

Khrush's Safety

Government Is Confident No Untoward Incident Will Occur

The most elaborate preparations ever made to protect the person of a foreign visitor have been made for Khrushchev. Not only have various security or federal police agencies of this Government worked with State and city police agencies in the various stops to be made by Khrushchev and his entourage, but Maj. General Nikolai S. Zacharoff, of the Russian secret police, and his assistant Vladimir T. Burdin have made a tour.

Zacharoff and Burdin have been in Washington, New York and Pittsburgh and are visiting Los Angeles, San Francisco, Des Moines and Ames, Iowa, the full stops on Khrushchev's tour. There will be no whistle stops, and no deviation from his schedule because of security reasons. Air fields, hotels and possible danger spots have been thoroughly cased by both our own and the Russian security officers.

Three of the places where Khrushchev is to dine are the White House and the National Press Club in Washington and a civic banquet in San Francisco. Meticulous safety precautions are to be taken at all three. Invitations went out a week ago for the White House dinner. These invitations read:

"The President and Mrs. Eisenhower request the pleasure of the company of . . . at a dinner on Tuesday, September 15, 1959, at eight o'clock on the occasion of the visit of His Excellency, the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Union of Soviet Socialists Republics, and Mrs. Khrushchev."

"His Excellency" need have no worry about a paucity of bodyguards at the Executive Mansion. For several years now the White House has been the most guarded building and small plot of ground in the world. In addition to the large Secret Service detail there are 170 White House policemen. And practically the entire Washington police force plus such of the crack men of police departments from others cities as are desired will guard his journey through Washington streets to the White House gates.

Khrushchev, of course, will have his own large number of body guards just as the Secret Service accompanies President Eisenhower when he goes to other countries. But this Soviet guard is only an infinitesimal part of those policing his safety.

At the National Press Club a great cordon of police will not only be placed in the streets approaching it, but the police force on all the floors of the thirteen story building will run into the hundreds.

In the banquet room of the National Press Club itself United States and Russian security men will be placed at about a ratio of one police officer to each six newsmen. Similar painstaking safety plans are to be carried out at the Mark Hopkins Hotel where Khrushchev and his entourage will stop in San Francisco as well as the banquet in the Golden Gate city."

Handling the large party that will accompany Khrushchev in his tour is a real problem. There will be 39 Russian newspapermen in his party. Soviet officials, the Khrushchev family and the various Russian officials and newspapermen altogether will make up about 125 persons. Ambassador to the United Nations Henry Cabot Lodge, who will accompany the man whom our protocol calls "His Excellency" and not "Premier," will also have a considerable party.

Nearly 300 newspapermen, magazine writers, television commentators, cameramen, technicians, etc., made application to accompany Khrushchev from the time of his arrival until his departure. The State Department cut down, but still the number is unwieldly. Some of these newspapermen and reporters for other media who were approved for the trip probably will be seeing little of Khrushchev. Small pools of not to exceed three American and three Russian newsmen will be permitted to go with him at some places and they will make available to others the information they glean.

From the first our security officers have made their plans for the protection of Khrushchev by taking into full consideration that the man who is coming to our shores has been regarded by most Americans as our enemy in war — a cold war to be sure but one which could turn into shooting war.

Actually ever since the invitation was issued letters poured into the White House asking the President to cancel or to postpone it because of the trouble the Communists have since stirred up in Tibet, Laos and India.

There has also been full recognition of the fact that this country only recently observed a "Captive Nations Week" and now the Captor of those nations is to be our guest for twelve days. Chicago and Detroit with their large Polish, Hungarian, Roumanian, Lithuanian, Czech and other people with relatives still in those countries were ruled off the Khrushchev route because they were the cities where it was believed most likely some attempts at bodily harm for the visitor might be attempted.

For the cities and the one farm visitt tight security arrangements were formulated. Trouble cannot be entirely ruled out for no head of a foreign government so disliked, even hated, has ever come to the United States. But for all that this government thinks it has the situation safely in hand.

Khrush Trip Big

Presses Down More Thinking Caps Than Anything Recent

WASHINGTON, D. C. — ".... we must bring down the thing called Liberalism, which is powerful but decadent; and salvage a thing called conservatism, which is weak but viable."

William F. Buckley, Jr.
in "Up From Liberalism."

Nothing in our time has so pressed the thinking caps down upon American brows as this visit of Nikita Khrushchev.

As competitive events, you might name the atom-bombing of Hiroshima and the launching of the first Russian Sputnik. The mushroom cloud was captured by the Leftists, some of them traitors and some of them merely fools, as a symbol of American guilt the expiation of which was to be de-nationalization of the USA and gloabalissimo. The Russian "moon," shot into space, was a lucky break in that if shook up the country and caused it to perceive (what many of us had been calling attention to) that "progressivism" and education-for-everybody had raised us to be a generation of illiterates and slogansingers.

But Hiroshima and Sputnik were high-brow events. Khruschev's coming has the lowest common denominator of any comparable inter-national incident of our time. Savants of the cocktail circuit discuss it with their taxi drivers, and the country club set is as much interested as the church groups. For here comes the current leader of the World Revolution which began with the storming of the Bastille on July 14, 1789. Khrushchev is the worker peasant who tore up the Parisian paving blocks, who charged through the musket fire of the soldiery, who cut off the Queen's head, who turned atheist, who did a great deal to Share-the-Wealth but who, in Burke's famous phrase, brought death to the "age of chivalry."

It is no wonder if Khrushchev's coming to America as a State visitor did not startle the country which had a revolution as unlike the Franco - Russian orgy as anything could be. The USA got rid of King George III without killing him with his wife and family. Our Revolutionists managed to change Crown and Church for political and religious freedom without setting up any new dictators. But with the Communist boss in Washington, New York, touring grandly from Atlantic to Pacific, lionized by our high and mighty, we know how the royal families in France and Russia must have felt as they looked out their windows at the mob. Make no mistake The torch of revolution is at our door.

And how do we defend ourselves, intellectually and politically? Until quite recently our defense was the cheap cynicism of, "When you can't beat 'em, join 'em." With the recognition of Russia in 1933, we started to "join 'em" by becoming, as Russia herself, "a Socialist Republic," a workers' paradise, a phase of the World Revolution into compulsory equality at home and no-nationalism abroad.

But some time since 1950, a wholesome change set in. We began to stop aping the Reds. Today, the American people have pulled the thinking cap determinedly down over one eye and commenced a reversal in earnest. It is not insignificant, I think, that the most lop-sided Democratic Congress in two decades chose the time between Khrushchev's invitation and arrival to pass the toughest Labor bill in history. It is remarkable that with Mr. Eisenhower's popularity at its crest, his decision to exchange visits with the top Communist is far from warmly acclaimed. Most important of all, it seems to me, we are beginning to hear public men hint at the possibility of "preventive war."

On Global Tour Of

Juvenile Underworld

Editor's note—It's small consolation for U.S. cities beset by juvenile gangs, but such organizations of youthful toughs represent an international phenomenon. The following article takes you on a global tour through the eerie juvenile underworld.

By SAUL PETT
Associated Press Writer

Like crabgrass or acne, juvenile gangs are not a peculiarly American affliction.

They spawn almost anywhere and grow in the worst conditions. They are, in fact, quite global.

You can find them, in their tight pants, slick hair and pimply arrogance, roaming the streets of London, the alleys of Rome, around the train stations of Munich, in the garish lights of the Ginza in Tokyo, along the wide avenidas of Buenos Aires. Even the Soviet Union is not immune.

While their modus operandi may differ in detail—one London mob prefers fish hooks for redecorating a rival's face while the Tokyo mobs favor clubs and daggers but frown on guns—these coagulations of young punks usually operate for one of two reasons, and sometimes both.

Some gangs are formed purely to titillate the battered egos of their members, to stake out a territory, to raise organized hell, to beat up people and wreck property, to strut and rule like little Caesars purely for the fun of it.

Other gangs—like those in Italy and Japan—give less emphasis to their collective psyche and more to commerce. Their motive is pure, unadulterated, non-Freudian larceny.

Both types of adolescent mobsters move under a bizarre variety of names. There are, for example, the "Apaches" and "Blackhawks" of Manila, the "Paddington Leopards" of London, the "Three-Cherry Club" of Tokyo, the "Five-fingers" mob of Buenos Aires and the "Tony Curtis" congregation of Singapore.

England apparently has the biggest mobs (some are 500 or 600 strong), Japan has the most highly organized (several have subsidiary branches), Germany has the most ritualistic (in one, each member had the "Z" tattooed in his armpit), and Italy the most larcenous (according to legend, a Naples gang once dismantled an entire ship and sold it piece by piece for scrap.)

Most explanations cited by local experts for the rise of such gangs already are familiar to Americans—slums, poverty, broken homes, neglect, social abuses. But in some areas abroad there are unique factors.

Japanese sociologists, for example, also blame social changes since the war symbolized by the emperor's renunciation of his own divinity. Experts in Manila cite the social breakdown caused by the Japanese occupation, during which guerilla groups became heroes.

Most of the solutions suggested by experts abroad also are familiar to Americans—closer police work, stiffer laws, more understanding of family conditions, slum clearance. Other solutions suggested or used abroad are quite unusual.

The Soviets, for example, have anti-gang gangs—legal gangs to curtail the illegal gangs. The premier of Thailand has suggested stronger methods—sterilization of the young thugs. But perhaps the most intriguing method has been tried in Athens.

Greence never had a big juvenile gang problem but it did have some hooliganism—small groups which used to pester old ladies or throw rocks at windows.

The Athens police put a stop to such things by using a powerful weapon—ridicule. The young villains had their heads sheared and were paraded, handcuffed, in the streets with a description of their offense written on a board hanging from their necks.

Imagine our own young desperadoes, bald and bound, being led wrist to wrist up Broadway or State Street or Sunset Boulevard.

The Soviet Union has its youth packs but they are not so highly organized as those in London or New York. Soviet laws are such that any such organization might find itself ordered to a youth "retraining camp."

Still, the U.S.S.R. has its young hooligans, thieves, drunkards and "stilyagi," the boys in the ubiquitous tight pants and sloppy shoes. To help police combat them, volunteer brigades, or legal gangs, have been formed in most large cities.

Pravda reported last year that because of the rising incidence of drunkenness, it is now usual for policemen to be present at youth parties and meetings "to guarantee public security."

Elsewhere behind the Iron Curtain, Poland apparently no longer has juvenile gangs but authorities said that "during Stalinist days many youths released their repressions in gangs and were thrown into prison as members of 'anti-state organizations.'"

Communists have tried hard to make juvenile crime appear to be an American invention and export. This fact needs to be borne in mind in considering the announcement by East German officials that three big gangs called "The Broadway," "Capital," and "42nd Street," were smashed in Leipzig last year. The gangs, it was alleged, specialized in frightening people, raping girls, organizing traffic accidents and stealing cars.

Balkan Communists seem particularly disturbed by the wearing of tight pants, which they regard as typically American. In Bulgaria, authorities decreed no trousers could be made which were too narrow to be taken off over shoes.

In Czechoslovakia, state-owned men's stores were ordered to ignore customers who wanted tight pants "a la Texas." A "technical expert" was appointed specifially to watch over the matter.

Until recently, France was not plagued by organized young gangs. But this summer, police on the Left Bank of Paris rounded up 26 adolescents who were terrorizing the neighborhood with whips, iron bars, brass knuckles, chains and knives. The boys wore blue jeans or chinos and leather jackets.

Widely separated countries like Egypt and Laos report no juvenile gangs. In Cairo, their absence is attributed to the generally conservative behavior of Moslems, the strict sex mores, and the importance attached to closely knit families. In Laos, a police officer explained, "Parents control their houses with a strong hand."

In Bangkok, strong police action has cleared the streets of the "Lizards," as the juvenile delinquents with the slick haircuts and draped trousers are known. The crackdown began when Premier Sarit Thanarat took over the government, declared martial law, ordered police into action and publicly suggested sterilization as a means of punishing and curbing delinquents. Bangkok now has few "Lizards."

In London, it's booming. Authorities there estimate the city has at least 200 separate gangs, each with its own area or "manor" staked out. The biggest are the "Elephant Mob," "The Paddington Leopards," and "The Angel Gang," whose organized strength range from 400 to 600.

They fight each other on the streets, around dance halls or aboard the trains to Brighton. They fight because one gang member walked into another's manor. They fight just for "the giggle," or the fun of it.

The leader gets to be "top notch" of his gang by beating any challengers. The uniform usually has been Edwardian — narrow, cuffless pants, long jackets with velvet collars and cuffs. They are known as "Teddy Boys," Teddy being a diminutive of Edward. Now the more fashion-conscious gangs reflect the Italian influence —striped narrow pants, single-breasted narrow three-button jackets with tiny lapels.

One member of the gang is the "tool minder," or keeper of the weapons. The tools vary: fish hooks sewed into the jacket sleeve near the cuff; metal bars, wooden cudgels, flick knives, razors, knuckle dusters, heavy finger rings with built-in hooks or blades, broken bottles, bike chains, blackjacks.

The gangs are smaller in Italy but geared for a dishonest buck. The biggest in Rome, a 17-member group, admitted on recent arrest that they stole 200 cars in several months. Others specialize in beating and robbing couples parked along the ancient Appian Way, a favorite lovers' lane.

The uniform of the day is tight blue jeans, white tennis shoes and leather jackets and the favorite transportation is the two-man motor scooter—a handy vehicle for pulling up to a curb, snatching a lady's purse and racing off.

All of this is small stuff compared to the wartime Italian gangs. Besides the one credited with stealing and selling a ship for scrap, another was reputed to have swiped an entire freight train.

In Tokyo, the biggest teen-aged gang is called the Sanseikai. It runs its own bar (the prices are fantastically high) and maintains franchised branches called the Saknokai (Three Cherry) Club; Fubukikai (Blizzard) Club, Chuokai (Chuo Railroad Line) Club, and Santokai (Three Islands) Club.

The lodge members peddle protection to pin ball parlors and bars. If you don't buy it, they wreck your joint. If you do buy, they'll station boys around your place to keep other gangs out. For their own protection, the Sanseikai members wear copper armor under their clothes.

In Germany, the young thugs are known derisively as the "Halbstarken," half-strong or half mature. The best known was the Zorro gang which flourished around Stuttgart until 1953. There were 11 members, from 15 to 24, armed with pistols, knives, rubber truncheons and a machine-pistol.

They took an oath promising death to any member who betrayed them. The leader tattooed a "Z" under the armpit of each member.

They stole anything negotiable but specialized in raiding farms. Slaughtering the animals and carrying them off in trucks, the gang finally was sent to jail.

Munich still has its gangs clotted around railroad stations and known by the terminals they favor. For many German gangs, motorbikes are the favorite form of transportation—whenever they can steal one.

The Philippines, which spent almost 50 years under American influence, has gang names that sound like theEast Side of New Atom Boys, Cobras Apaches, Dragons, Gestapo, Black Hawks.

The names painted in bold letters on buildings and walls often stake out gang territory in the city's sprawling slums and more respectable suburbs. Some gangs carry photo identification cards. A few have "ladies auxiliaries."

Manila has both poor and rich gangs. The poor operate for profit — burglary, shakedowns, even armed robbery. The gangs drawn from well-to-do families operate for fun. They roar through the streets in hot rods, worship James Dean and commit vandalism for the thrill.

In Buenos Aires, the favorite gang names are "The Cat," "Five Fingers," "The Gaucho," and "The Knife." They generally hit small stores, apartments and homes. In Buenos Aires, anyone leaving his house for vacation, usually hires a watch man to live there while he's gone.

Fervor And Frankness But Dull

SATURDAY NIGHT AND SUNDAY MORNING. By Alan Sillitoe. Knopf. $3.75.

This novel reads like a semi - autobiographical story of the life of the author, Alan Sillitoe. And it is written with such fervor and frankness that it must be so.

This first novel of 31-year-old Sillitoe is the personal lives story of almost any group of people in the slums of an industrial city of England. Sillitoe has ample background for his story; he was son of a laborer in a tannery factory in Nottingham. And from that he moved on to work in a bicycle factory, a plywood mill and as a capstan-lathe operator.

The story is that of an independent, sometimes rebellious, young man named Arthur Seaton, who is a lathe operator in a Nottingham bicycle factory.

Arthur is a 22-year-old with great vigor and a liking for exciting living. In the bicycle factory at his lathe machine he is obedient and efficient enough.

But, after hours he is overflowing with vitality, eager only to spend his money on accomodating women who like to wander around the pubs, or into bedrooms or elsewhere—and that "elsewhere" encompasses a multitude of sins.

Pursuit Of The Prodigal Among One Of The Best

PURSUIT OF THE PRODIGAL. By Louis Auchincloss, Houghton Mifflin. $3.75.

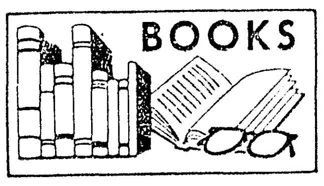
In this newnovel, Auchincloss's eighth book of fiction, the hero, Reese Parmelee, seems to have everything a man wants: Two promising children, a beautiful and popular wife, a position in a good law firm, inherited money, utterly blue blood, fine home, and the one flawless social background, the Parmelee background.

But what he might well be envied for is not what in his heart he wants: Parmelee advantages, to you, are hindrances to him, and he longs to break these ties and be a man on his own. He willfully makes public his clandestine affair with Cynthia his friend Andy's wife; his wife Esther hears, Andy hears, and the upshot of the fuss is his flight, and a start anew.

He picks up a few women as passing acquaintances, but the one likely to stay on permanently is Rosina, magazine editor. He transfers his legal commitment from the plush Clark, Day & Parmelee to the more pushing house of Amos Levine. But here again his extreme contrariness, his ultra honesty, his persistence in what strikes him as right set him to struggling cross - current against the mode and fashion of his new world; and again his standards, and nobody else's, count; for a second time, after establishing blocks to success in the society into which he was born, he establishes them stubbornly in the world he has adopted. He just likes shackles.

Auchincloss's hero learns the hard way to take things easy; and Auchincloss's novel is again marked by the most adept writing. No other novelist handles the lawyer so well; no other handles this social stratum any better.

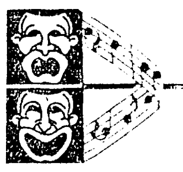
Books



THE GRAVEYARD. By Marek Hlasko (Dutton): A second novel by this young Polish writer who continues his devastating account of what communism does to the individual. His first story was "The Eighth Day of the Week." This is a narrative of life in Stalinist Poland. The story is built around Franciszek Kowalski, a loyal party member and partisan against the Nazis. In a moment of indiscretion (he is drunk) he finds himself arrested on a charge of slandering the state. The few other characters in the novel are members of Kowalski's family, to whom he brings destruction, and his former partisan friends, who live in isolation from each other and from him, hoping for a few more hours of freedom from the all - pervading police terror. A somber picture deftly drawn.

WHAT NEXT DOCTOR Peck? by Joseph H. Peck, M. D. (Prentice - Hall): n his second book, the doctor-turned - author reminisces about his life and experiences as a young doctor. He got his start as medical supervisor of a railroad construction gang in the Utah desert early in the century. His patients were the skid-row characters of the gang and the "girls" from Mamie's establishment. Later he had prospectors and Indians. From this rich vein of experience he has culled these recollections of old Utah and its pioneers of many pursuits or none. Peck imparts his wisdom and philosophy in a matter - of - fact way salted with humor that makes for entertaining and thoughtful reading.

THE MASKS OF WAR, by George Langelaan (Doubleday): The author, although English born, has lived a long time in Paris. He was there when he joined the British Army early in World War II, and it took him four years to get back — by way of Dunkirk, Vichy France, Spain, North Africa and Omaha Beach. This is his story of that wartime odyssey, with special emphasis on the time he spent as a spy in Unoccupied France, his face altered beyond recognition by plastic surgery. It is an exciting, easily readable and often very funny tale.



RUNNING THE SCALES

With JOHN CALE

While other composers of opera have lived to see their music placed on a paying basis, Richard Wagner is the only one who built an opera house to fit his compositions.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Hayward, Jr., and children of Monroe fit into this picture in that they have recently returned from an extended vacation to Bayreuth, Germany, where their activities included two operas at the Wagner festival.

Though Wagner's opera house towers above all else in the small city in world prominence, people and families also live there including Mrs. Hayward's. Her father wrote last spring he had some tickets to "Lohengrin" and "Die Mesitersinger" and invited the Haywards to come over.

SCENE CHANGES

From Monroe to Bayreuth is a far piece to travel to see a couple of operas. But from all accounts, it is well worth the time, effort and expense. Wagner the composer died in 1883, a number of years after he had seen completion of his theatre. He was so farsighted in designing the building until the basic structure seems modern. It has features such as a hidden orchestra, fine acoustics, and a stage which fully accommodates the most modern curtains, sets and lighting — even though grandpappa Wagner never saw an electric light bulb.

The family term is used because two grandsons Wieland and Wolfgang Wagner are the present heads of the staging department. Mrs. Hayward, who recalls the pre - war versions of the two operas she saw this summer, was particularly impressed by the change in the sets. Where once there were gigantic structures reaching from the floor to the rafters, there are simple sets now with lights to fill in details.

Acquainted herself with the old staging of "Die Meistersinger," in which she took part for two years, Mrs. H. says the new settings are not only more effective but give the singers more room to act as well as sing their roles.

She pointed out an example of this as the cathedral scene at the opening of "Meistersinger." Instead of piles of interior masonry for settings, Wieland Wagner has achieved the effect of a Gothic church interior with pointed arch outlines placed high on the back and sides of the stage.

Gone is the mechanical swan which used to bring Lohengrin to work in the opera of that name. Instead, a projected image is "parked" in the mists over the stage, giving the impression that the knight, his swan and all about him are not of this world. Some may wish the familiar wedding march from this opera was also a "projected image" and "never really happened" to them, but even the new generation of Wagners can't meddle with that contract.

According to the Haywards, the Bayreuth opera - goers said the productions there in the early 1950's were too stark — even rather colorless — but that the last two years had seen the young Wagners come into a better realization of handling and designing the stage settings. So if you're planning a trip to Bayreuth to hear Wagner in his own home town, next summer would be a good time to go.

LOCAL ART

The Louis Locke room at the Ouachita Parish Library is serving as an art gallery this month for a one - man show by Mrs. H. M. James. The paintings show wide variety in texture and techniques with an abstraction "Girl Resting" showing a good measure of creativity. Local subject matter such as a moonlit view of "Phillips Bridge" on Bayou De-Siard has also brought favorable comment from many who have viewed the 19 paintings.

Finished Man Sinewy Piece Of Writing

THE FINISHED MAN. By George Garrett. Scribners. $3.95.

Judge Royle, who started at the very bottom as a Florida poor white, fought his way up against the Klan and for humanity and decency, enduring physical as well as political lickings, till he married the rich girl and was elevated to the bench. He has three children, Mary Ann who stays home, Jojo who complains bitterly of his father's demagoguery, and Mike with whom this novel is powerfully concerned.

Tired of the law, Mike throws himself into Sen. Parker's campaign for reelection. Parker had planned to retire, the state's moneyed bosses have picked John Batten as successor, Parker decides he can't stomach Batten's lack of principle.

But there's something infectious about lack of principle, as if the bad were more catching than the good; the only way to fight a man who hits below the belt is to aim your blows low, too. It is Mike's lot to sit in on this disintegration, to learn rudely what price a man will pay for votes, and to decide in the end where he stands in this scene of corruption with the uncompromising old judge, with the desperate Parker, with that slick number Vivian brought down from the north to handle publicity.

The story opens dramatically with an assassination, and develops with unusual vigor and speed; the political picture is interestingly relieved with some salty old-fashioned sinning. But the core of it all is Mike's fate: Is he a man, and what sort of man? This is fine sinewy fiction.

Soviets Still Out To Win Space Race

LONDON (UPI)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev served an unmistakable warning on the United States Saturday that his new "co-existence" drive will not impair Russia's determination to win at almost all cost the race for the conquest of outer space.

This was the first authoritative interpretation here os Moscow's firing of its moon rocket virtually on the eve of Khrushchev's history-making trip to the United States.

The military "lesson" behind the latest Kremlin move was by no means negligible either, according to a diplomatic appraisal.

The Western Big Three powers have only just completed agreement with Russia to resume global disarmament negotiations in which arms controls in outer space will play, for the first time, a major role.

It was scheduled to reach the moon as Khrushchev was about to embark on his Washington journey.

The Soviet leader whose strong sense for the practical has been reflected in Russia's policy moves over the past few years, has shown no less inclination for the spectacular, as a carefully calculated prestige booster.

The Soviet experiment therefore was seen designed to underline Moscow's claim to superiority in the field of rocketry and in the race for the conquest of outer space.

Experts here believed the Soviet must be fairly sure of success if they have chosen to publicize the launching in a big way.

Observers in London felt the Soviet move was carefully planned on the eve of Khrushchev's U.S. tour to impress as well as possibly intimidate missile - conscious Americans.

Moreover, Moscow may want this prestige boost also to impress its unruly Red Chinese allies whose quarrel with India has caused the Kremlin worry and embarrassment.

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

A most unusual and exciting book added to the collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library this week is "Chain Reaction" by Christopher Hodder-Williams. This concerns the problems of the British Atomic Energy Commission when they are confronted with the problem of radioactive ash contained in one can of beans. This is the electrifying story of man's struggle against his most treacherous invisible enemy — of human beings trapped by a silent, sinister invader of their own making. This novel has an urgent and timely theme and it is one that has a meaning for all of us in today's world. "Perish by the Sword" is the title of the exciting new mystery story written by Poul Anderson. It is one which will be vastly entertaining, especially to men.

A perfectly delightful book of cartoons is called "Ed Fisher's First Folio." It will appeal to everyone who has a sense of humor and enjoys looking at cartoons. A perfectly fascinating book for all bridge players is Charles H. Goren's "New Contract Bridge in a Nutshell." This is a book which makes extremely clear the rules and basic principles of Mr. Goren's system of playing contract bridge. It is a book which everyone who plays the game will enjoy.

A very scholarly approach to the field of education is "The Aims of Education" written by Alfred North Whitehead. This is a book which everyone in the field of education could read with enjoyment and profit. A very unusual book is "The Calendar for the Modern Age" written by Elisabeth Achells. This book proposes an international calendar and is one which bears study by scientists. The newest book in the field of Sound Recording is "From Microphone to Ear" by Gerard Slot. This is a very fine book and one which will be used by many people. A very fine history of modern Europe is called "The Rape of Europe" and was written by Luis Diex Del Corral. It gives the Spanish viewpoint, but is still one of the best histories of our time.

New Zealand is a country about which we know very little and about which not much has been written. Especially interesting is J. B. Condliffe's "Welfare State in New Zealand." This draws many parallels between conditions in our own country and provides food for thought.

Maturing In One Anguishing Year

THE WAR FOR THE UNION, Vol. 1: The Improvised War. By Allan Nevins. Scribner's. $7.50.

Allan Nevins monumental study of the United States in its time of great crisis and transition, from the Mexican War through Reconstruction, is here advanced to the Civil War period. This — the fifth volume of the project — is the narrative of the first stumbling year of conflict between the states, the formative, anguishing year of 1861-62.

Nevins sees the Civil War period as one of critical transition, in which the United States passed from the immaturity of "a giant in swaddling clothes" to the stature of an adult, close - knit nation, aware of the strength it possessed and knowing how to use it.

It is not an original concept. Bruce Catton, among other modern historians, has explored the idea fruitfully. But Nevins gives the picture new depth with his delineation of the nation's economy and society when the war's demands for manpower, materiel and discipline tested its capacities to the utmost.

The United States was a backward nation in 1861, lagging behind Europe in many fields of social and economic progress. The reason was our cherished individuality: "Americans were hostile to discipline and jealous of every encroachment on personal freedom." Yet, even granting the influence of such feeling, it is startling to read some of Nevins' pages.

In a nation in which half of the people were allied with agriculture, there were no associations for farm production or marketing and the government was aloof. Industry was "a multiplicity of petty establishments" — 286 pig iron furnaces with an average annual output worth no more than $14,000 each, a great variety of machine shops with individual ambition and ingenuity but no collective direction. There were no labor unions qualified for leadership, medical organization "was in its groping, initial stages," the transport picture had some bright spots and some dismally dark ones.

Still, in this first groping year, the foundations were laid. Some good men emerged — Abraham Lincoln; Montgomery Meigs, the quartermaster general; Stanton, Welles and Chase in the cabinet; Gustavus Fox, Tom Scott in the subordinate circles. Some poor men passed — Secretary of War Cameron (though Nevins is far less harsh with him than most other historians; the impetuous Fremont. And some other men were still to come to the ultimate testing — chief among these, George Brinton McClellan, although Nevins is plainly not one of those who views the Little Napoleon as an abused and maligned genius.

This is a fascinating, inspir*ing picture of a nation flex*ing its muscles, even while it is in travail.

Modern Version Of Top Mystery

THE NEW GOLDEN BOUGH. By Sir James George Frazer. A new abridgement edited by Dr. Theodor H. Gaster. Criterion Books. $8.50.

"The Golden Bough" is a great classic study in primitive magic and religion that almost everybody has heard about but not almost everybody has read.

Frazer collected facts about primitive behavior like Darwin collected nature specimens — and, in fact, his place in the field of comparative religion has been compared to Darwin's in biology. He devoted a lifetime to his study, and if there's a taboo, superstition or fertility rite Frazer didn't unearth, classify and fit into his interpretation — of primitive man's view of the universe — then it's one of history's better kept secrets.

First published in two volumes in 1890, "The Golden Bough" later was expanded to 12, plus supplemental works. In 1922 Frazer published a one-volume abridgement. But in the last four decades there have been so many discoveries and advances in cultural anthropology, the "Bough" needed pruning.

Dr. Theodor Gaster has done an admirable job in trimming off the outdated and superseded, and in modifying Frazer's views in the light of later research. His commentary and notes are invaluable to the reader dipping into this monumental work for the first, or fifteenth, time.

For all its erudition and weighty look, "The New Golden Bough" reads as breathlessly as a detective thriller. And actually, it is one: the mystery is there; so are the clues. The only difference is that man is still writing the denouement.

Sad, But Well Written Tale Of Boy Ideals

ARTURA'S ISLAND by Elsa Morante. Knapp. $4.50.

One of Italy's top women novelists in a sad but well written tale tells of the disillusioning of a romantic boy's ideals as he grows to manhood.

Arturo lives on a romantic island of Procida in a castle which a rich man has given his father. Arthuro's mother dies and his father is seldom home. The boy worships his father as a romantic wanderer. He is fascinated by the island and the tales about it and explores it all.

His romantic world comes to an end when his father returns with a new wife only two years Arturo's senior and he finds that far from being an adventurer his father has only been away to nearby surrounding islands and is involved in a sordid affair with a prisoner in the island's prison. Arturo falls in love with his stepmother. His shame over this and over his father turns his romantic boyhood into a nightmare and he tries to withdraw from the world. He is saved by his boyhood nurse who launches him into manhood and the realities of the world.

Arturo's island holds the reader's interest to the end despite its leisurely pace and rambling from episode to episode rather than working smoothly up to a dramatic conclusion.

On Global Tour Of Juvenile Underworld

Editor's note—It's small consolation for U.S. cities beset by juvenile gangs, but such organizations of youthful toughs represent an international phenomenon. The following article takes you on a global tour through the eerie juvenile underworld.

By SAUL PETT
Associated Press Writer

Like crabgrass or acne, juvenile gangs are not a peculiarly American affliction.

They spawn almost anywhere and grow in the worst conditions. They are, in fact, quite global.

You can find them, in their tight pants, slick hair and pimply arrogance, roaming the streets of London, the alleys of Rome, around the train stations of Munich, in the garish lights of the Ginza in Tokyo, along the wide avenidas of Buenos Aires. Even the Soviet Union is not immune.

While their modus operandi may differ in detail—one London mob prefers fish hooks for redecorating a rival's face while the Tokyo mobs favor clubs and daggers but frown on guns—these coagulations of young punks usually operate for one of two reasons, and sometimes both.

Some gangs are formed purely to titillate the battered egos of their members, to stake out a territory, to raise organized hell, to beat up people and wreck property, to strut and rule like little Caesars purely for the fun of it.

Other gangs—like those in Italy and Japan—give less emphasis to their collective psyche and more to commerce. Their motive is pure, unadulterated, non-Freudian larceny.

Both types of adolecent mobsters move under a bizarre variety of names. There are, for example, the "Apaches" and "Blackhawks" of Manila, the "Paddington Leopards" of London, the "Three-Cherry Club" of Tokyo, the "Five-fingers" mob of Buenos Aires and the "Tony Curtis" congregation of Singapore.

England apparently has the biggest mobs (some are 500 or 600 strong), Japan has the most highly organized (several have subsidiary branches), Germany has the most ritualistic (in one, each member had the letter "Z" tatooed in his armpit), and Italy the most larcenous (according to legend, a Naples gang once dismantled an entire ship and sold it piece by piece for scrap.)

Most explanations cited by local experts for the rise of such gangs already are familiar to Americans—slums, poverty, broken homes, neglect, social abuses. But in some areas abroad there are unique factors.

Japanese sociologists, for example, also blame social changes since the war symbolized by the Emperor's renunciation of his own divinity. Experts in Manila cite the social breakdown caused by the Japanese occupation, during which guerilla groups became heroes.

Most of the solutions suggested by experts abroad also are familiar to Americans—closer police work, stiffer laws, more understanding of family conditions, slum clearance. Other solutions suggested or used abroad are quite unusual.

The Soviets, for example, have anti-gang gangs—legal gangs to curtail the illegal gangs. The premier of Thailand has suggested stronger methods—sterilization of the young thugs. But perhaps the most intriguing method has been tried in Athens.

Greecce never had a big juvenile gang problem but it did have some hooliganism—small groups which used to pester old ladies or throw rocks at windows.

The Athens police put a stop to such things by using a powerful weapon—ridicule. The young villains had their heads shaved and were paraded, handcuffed, in the streets with a description of their offense written on a board hanging from their necks.

Imagine our own young desperadoes, bald and bound, being led single file to wrist up Broadway or State Street or Sunset Boulevard.

The Soviet Union has its youth packs but they are not so highly organized as those in London or New York. Soviet laws are such that any such organization might find itself ordered to a youth "retraining camp."

Still, the U.S.S.R. has its young hooligans, thieves, drunkards and "stilyagi," the boys in the ubiquitous tight pants and sloppy shoes. To help police combat them, volunteer brigades, or legal gangs, have been formed in most large cities.

Pravda reported last year that because of the rising incidence of drunkenness, it is now usual for policemen to be present at youth parties and meetings "to guarantee public security."

Elsewhere behind the Iron Curtain, Poland apparently no longer has juvenile gangs but authorities said that "during Stalinist days many youths released their repressions in gangs and were thrown into prison as members of 'anti-state organizations.'"

Communists have tried hard to make juvenile crime appear to be an American invention and export. This fact needs to be borne in mind in considering the announcement by East German officials that three big gangs called "The Broadway," "Capital," and "42nd Street," were smashed in Leipzig last year. The gangs, it was alleged, specialized in frightening people, raping girls, organizing traffic accidents and stealing cars.

Balkan Communists seem particularly disturbed by the wearing of tight pants, which they regard as typically American. In Bulgaria, authorities decreed no trousers could be made which were too narrow to be taken off over shoes.

In Czechoslovakia, state-owned men's stores were ordered to ignore customers who wanted tight pants "a la Texas." A "technical expert" was appointed specifically to watch over the matter.

Until recently, France was not plagued by organized young gangs. But this summer, police on the Left Bank of Paris rounded up 26 adolescents who were terrorizing the neighborhood with whips, iron bars, brass knuckles, chains and knives. The boys wore blue jeans or chinos and leather jackets.

Widely separated countries like Egypt and Laos report no juvenile gangs. In Cairo, their absence is attributed to the generally conservative behavior of Moslems, the strict sex mores, and the importance attached to closely knit families. In Laos, a police officer explained, "Parents control their houses with a strong hand."

In Bangkok, strong police action has cleared the streets of the "Lizards," as the juvenile delinquents with the slick haircuts and draped trousers are known. The crackdown began when Premier Sarit Thanarat took over the government, declared martial law, ordered police into action and publicly suggested sterilization as a means of punishing and curbing delinquents. Bangkok now has few "Lizards."

In London, it's booming. Authorities there estimate the city has at least 200 separate gangs, each with its own area or "manor" staked out. The biggest are the "Elephant Mob," "The Paddington Leopards," and "The Angel Gang," whose organized strength range from 400 to 600.

They fight each other on the streets, around dance halls or aboard the trains to Brighton. They fight because one gang member walked into another's manor. They fight just for "the giggle," or the fun of it.

The leader gets to be "top notch" of his gang by beating any challengers. The uniform usually has been Edwardian — narrow, cuffless pants, long jackets with velvet collars and cuffs. They are known as "Teddy Boys." Teddy being a diminutive of Edward. Now the more fashion-conscious gangs reflect the Italian influence—striped narrow pants, single-breasted narrow three-button jackets with tiny lapels.

One member of the gang is the "tool minder," or keeper of the weapons. The tools vary: fish hooks sewed into the jacket sleeve near the cuff: metal bars, wooden cudgels, flick knives, razors, knuckle dusters, heavy finger rings with built-in hooks or blades, broken bottles, bike chains, blackjacks.

The gangs are smaller in Italy but geared for a dishonest buck. The biggest in Rome, a 17-member group, admitted on recent arrest that they stole 200 cars in several months. Others specialize in beating and robbing couples parked along the ancient Appian Way, a favorite lovers' lane.

The uniform of the day is tight blue jeans, white tennis shoes and leather jackets and the favorite transportation is the two-man motor scooter—a handy vehicle for pulling up to a curb, snatching a lady's purse and racing off.

All of this is small stuff compared to the wartime Italian gangs. Besides the one credited with stealing and selling a ship for scrap, another was reputed to have swiped an entire freight train.

In Tokyo, the biggest teen-aged gang is called the Sanseikai. It runs its own bar (the prices are fantastically high) and maintains franchised branches called the Saknokai (Three Cherry) Club; Fubukikai (Blizzard) Club, Chuokai (Chuo Railroad Line) Club, and Santokai (Three Islands) Club.

The lodge members peddle protection to pin ball parlors and bars. If you don't buy it, they wreck your joint. If you do buy, they'll station boys around your place to keep other gangs out. For their own protection, the Sanseikai members wear copper armor under their clothes.

In Germany, the young thugs are known derisively as the "Halbstarken," half-strong or half mature. The best known was the Zorro gang which flourished around Stuttgart until 1953. There were 11 members, from 15 to 24, armed with pistols, knives, rubber truncheons and a machine-pistol.

They took an oath promising death to any member who betrayed them. The leader tattooed a "Z" under the armpit of each member.

They stole anything negotiable but specialized in raiding farms. Slaughtering the animals and carrying them off in trucks, the gang finally was sent to jail.

Munich still has its gangs clotted around railroad stations and known by the terminals they favor. For many German gangs, motorbikes are the favorite form of transportation—whenever they can steal one.

The Philippines, which spent almost 50 years under American influence, has gang names that sound like theEast Side of New Atom Boys, Cobras Apaches, Dragons, Gestapo, Black Hawks.

The names painted in bold letters on buildings and walls often stake out gang territory in the city's sprawling slums and more respectable suburbs. Some gangs carry photo identification cards. A few have "ladies auxiliaries."

Manila has both poor and rich gangs. The poor operate for profit — burglary, shakedowns, even armed robbery. The gangs drawn from well-to-do families operate for fun. They roar through the streets in hot rods, worship James Dean and commit vandalism for the thrill.

In Buenos Aires, the favorite gang names are "The Cat," "Five Fingers," "The Gaucho," and "The Knife." They generally hit small stores, apartments and homes. In Buenos Aires, anyone leaving his house for vacation usually hires a watch man to live there while he's gone.

Fervor And Frankness But Dull

SATURDAY NIGHT AND SUNDAY MORNING. By Alan Sillitoe. Knopf. $3.75.

This novel reads like a semi - autobiographical story of the life of the author, Alan Sillitoe. And it is written with such fervor and frankness that it must be so.

This first novel of 31-year-old Sillitoe is the personal lives story of almost any group of people in the slums of an industrial city of England. Sillitoe has ample background for his story; he was son of a laborer in a tannery factory in Nottingham. And from that he moved on to work in a bicycle factory, a plywood mill and as a capstan-lathe operator.

The story is that of an independent, sometimes rebellious, young man named Arthur Seaton, who is a lathe operator in a Nottingham bicycle factory.

Arthur is a 22-year-old with great vigor and a liking for exciting living. In the bicycle factory at his lathe machine he is obedient and efficient enough.

But, after hours he is overflowing with vitality, eager only to spend his money on accomodating women who like to wander around the pubs, or into bedrooms or elsewhere" and that "elsewhere" encompasses a multitude of sins.

Pursuit Of The Prodigal Among One Of The Best

PURSUIT OF THE PRODIGAL. By Louis Auchincloss, Houghton Mifflin. $3.75.

In this newnovel, Auchincloss's eighth book of fiction, the hero, Reese Parmelee, seems to have everything a man wants: Two promising children, a beautiful and popular wife, a position in a good law firm, inherited money, utterly blue blood, fine home, and the one flawless social background, the Parmelee background.

But what he might well be envied for is not what in his heart he wants: Parmelee advantages, to you, are hindrances to him, and he longs to break these ties and be a man on his own. He willfully makes public his clandestine affair with Cynthia his friend Andy's wife; his wife Esther hears, Andy bears, and the upshot of the fuss is his flight, and a start anew.

He picks up a few women as passing acquaintances, but the one likely to stay on permanently is Rosina, magazine editor. He transfers his legal commitment from the plush Clark, Day & Parmelee to the more pushing house of Amos Levine. But here again his extreme contrariness, his ultra honesty, his persistence in what strikes him as right set him on struggling cross - current against the mode and fashion of his new world; and again his standards, and nobody else's, count; for a second time, after establishing blocks to success in the society into which he was born, he establishes them stubbornly in the world he has adopted. He just likes shackles.

Auchincloss's hero learns the hard way to take things easy; and Auchincloss's novel is again marked by the most adept writing. No other novelist handles the lawyer so well; no other handles this social stratum any better.

RUNNING THE SCALES
With JOHN CALE

While other composers of opera have lived to see their music placed on a paying basis, Richard Wagner is the only one who built an opera house to fit his compositions.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Hayward, Jr., and children of Monroe fit into this picture in that they have recently returned from an extended vacation to Bayreuth, Germany, where their activities included two operas at the Wagner festival.

Though Wagner's opera house towers above all else in the small city in world prominence, people and families also live there including Mrs. Hayward's. Her father wrote last spring he had some tickets to "Lohengrin" and "Die Meistersinger" and invited the Haywards to come over.

SCENE CHANGES

From Monroe to Bayreuth is a far piece to travel to see a couple of operas. But from all accounts, it is well worth the time, effort and expense. Wagner the composer died in 1883, a number of years after he had seen completion of his theatre. He was so farsighted in designing the building until the basic structure seems modern. It has features such as a hidden orchestra, fine acoustics, and a stage which fully accommodates the most modern curtains, sets and lighting — even though grandpappa Wagner never saw an electric light bulb.

Family tension is used because two grandsons Wieland and Wolfgang Wagner are the present heads of the staging department. Mrs. Hayward, who recalls the pre - war versions of the two operas she saw this summer, was particularly impressed by the change in the sets. Where once there were gigantic structures reaching from the floor to the rafters, there are simple sets now with lights to fill in details.

Acquainted herself with the old staging of "Die Meistersinger," in which she took part for two years, Mrs. H. says the new settings in "Die Meistersinger" are much more effective but give the singers more room to act as well as sing their roles.

She pointed out an example of this as the cathedral scene at the opening of "Meistersinger." Instead of piles of interior masonry for settings, Wieland Wagner has achieved the effect of a Gothic church interior with suspended curtains placed high on the side and back of the stage.

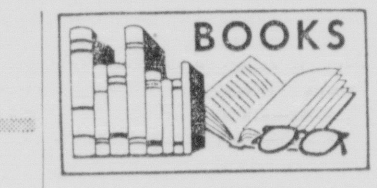
Gone is the mechanical swan which used to bring Lohengrin to work in the opera of that name. Instead, a projected image is "parked" in the mists over the stage, giving the impression that the knight, his swan and all there are not of this world. Some may wish the familiar wedding march from this opera was also a "projected image" and "never really happened" to them, but even the new generation of Wagners can't meddle with that contract.

According to the Haywards, the Bayreuth opera - goers said the productions there in the early 1950's were too stark — even rather colorless — but that the new generation has come into a better realization of handling and designing the stage settings. So if you're planning a trip to Bayreuth to hear Wagner in his own home town, next summer would be a good time to go.

LOCAL ART

The Louis Locke room at the Ouachita Parish Library is serving as an art gallery this month for a one - man show by Mrs. H. M. James. The paintings show wide variety in texture and techniques with an abstraction "Girl Resting" showing a good measure of creativity. Local subject matter such as a moonlit view of "Phillips Bridge" on Bayou De Siard has also brought favorable comment from many who have viewed the 19 paintings.

BOOKS



THE GRAVEYARD, By Marek Hlasko (Dutton): A second novel by this young Polish writer who continues his devastating account of what communism does to the individual. His first story was "The Eighth Day of the Week." This is a narrative of life in Stalinist Poland. The story is built around Franciszek Kowalski, a loyal party member and partisan against the Nazis. In a moment of indiscretion (he is drunk) he finds himself arrested on a charge of slandering the state. The few other characters in the novel are members of Kowalski's family, to whom he brings destruction, and his former partisan friends, who live in isolation from each other and from him, hoping for a few more hours of freedom from the all - pervading police terror. A somber picture deftly drawn.

WHAT NEXT DOCTOR Peck? by Joseph H. Peck, M. D. (Prentice - Hall): In his second book, the doctor-turned - author reminisces about his life and experiences as a young doctor. He got his start as medical supervisor of a railroad construction gang in the Utah desert early in the century. His patients were the skid-row characters of the gang and the "girls" from Mame's establishment. Later he had prospectors and Indians. From this rich vein of experience he distills these recollections of old Utah and its pioneers of many pursuits or none. Peck imparts his wisdom and philosophy in a matter - of - fact way salted with humor that makes for entertaining and thoughtful reading.

THE MASKS OF WAR, by George Langelaan (Doubleday): The author, though English born, has lived a long time in Paris. He was there when he joined the British Army early in World War II, and he served with it in France, then he got back to England — by way of Dunkirk, Vichy France, Spain, North Africa and Omaha Beach. This is the story of that wartime odyssey, with special emphasis on the time he spent as a spy in Unoccupied France, after his face was changed by plastic surgery. It is an exciting, easily readable and often very funny tale.

Finished Man Sinewy Piece Of Writing

Judge Royle, who started at the very bottom as a Florida poor white, fought his way up against the Klan and for humanity and decency, enduring physical as well as political lickings, till he married the rich girl and was elevated to the bench. He has three children, Mary Ann who stays home, Jojo who complains bitterly of his father's demagoguery, and Mike with whom this novel is powerfully concerned.

Tired of the law, Mike throws himself into Sen. Parker's campaign for reelection. Parker had planned to retire, the state's moneyed bosses have picked John Batten as successor, Parker decides he can't stomach Batten's lack of principle.

But there's something infectious about lack of principle, as if the bad were more catching than the good; the only way to fight a man who hits below the belt is to aim your blows low, too. It is Mike's lot to join in on this disintegration, to learn rudely what price a man will pay for votes, and to decide in the end where he stands in this scene of corruption with the uncompromising old judge, with the desperate Parker, with that slick number Vivian brought down from the north to handle publicity.

The story opens dramatically with an assassination and develops with unusual vigor and speed; the political picture is interestingly relieved with some salty old-fashioned sinning. But the core of it all is Mike's fate: In a way, what's become of man? This is fine sinewy fiction.

Soviets Still Out To Win Space Race

LONDON (UPI)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev served an unmistakable warning on the United States Saturday that his new "co-existence" drive will not impair Russia's determination to win at almost all cost the race for the conquest of outer space.

This was the first authoritative interpretation here of Moscow's firing of its moon rocket virtually on the eve of Khrushchev's history-making trip to the United States.

The military "lesson" behind the latest Kremlin move was by no means negligible either, according to a diplomatic appraisal.

The Western Big Three powers have only just completed agreement with Russia to resume global disarmament negotiations in which arms controls in outer space will play, for the first time, a major role.

It was scheduled to reach the moon as Khrushchev was about to embark on his Washington journey.

The Soviet leader whose strong sense for the practical has been reflected in Russia's policy moves over the past few years, has shown no-less inclination for the spectacular, as a carefully calculated prestige booster.

The Soviet experiment therefore has been designed to underline Moscow's claim to superiority in the field of rocketry and in the race for the conquest of outer space.

Experts here believed the Soviet must be fairly sure of success if they have chosen to publicize the launching in a big way.

Observers in London felt the Soviet move was carefully planned on the eve of Khrushchev's U.S. tour to impress as well as possibly intimidate missile - conscious Americans.

Moreover, Moscow may want this prestige boost also to impress its unruly Red Chinese allies whose quarrel with India has been a Kremlin worry and embarrassment.

Modern Version Of Top Mystery

THE NEW GOLDEN BOUGH. By Sir James George Frazer. A new abridgement edited by Dr. Theodor H. Gaster. Criterion Books. $3.50.

"The Golden Bough" is a great classic study in primitive magic and religion that almost everybody has heard about but not almost everybody has read.

Frazer collected facts about primitive behavior like Darwin collected nature specimens — and, in fact, his place in the field of comparative religion has been compared to Darwin's in biology. He devoted a lifetime to his study, and if there's a taboo, superstition or fertility rite Frazer didn't unearth, classify and fit into his interpretation — of primitive man's view of the universe — then it's one of history's better kept secrets.

First published in two volumes in 1890, "The Golden Bough" later was expanded to 12, plus supplemental works. In 1922 Frazer published a one-volume abridgement. But in the last four decades there have been so many discoveries and advances in cultural anthropology, the "Bough" needed pruning.

Dr. Theodor Gaster has done an admirable job in trimming off the outdated and superseded, and in modifying Frazer's views in the light of later research. His commentary and notes are invaluable to the reader dipping into this monumental work for the first, or fifteenth, time.

For all its erudition and weighty look, "The New Golden Bough" reads as breathlessly as a detective thriller. And actually, it is one: the mystery is there; so are the clues. The only difference is that man is still writing the denouement.

Leaves Bring Unending Job

By MILDRED SWIFT

Labor Day was named official holiday in 1894, when Congress passed a bill setting this up. Labor Day has passed but it brought with it reminders of garden jobs to be done.

I guess about the most important job, now, is clean up. In spring and summer when there's bloom and foliage, we don't notice "messiness" in the garden. Grass can grow up to the edge of plants, beds can be weedy but there's always something so pretty in bloom we don't notice. However, when winter comes the deciduous plants lose their leaves. Annuals and perennials are gone and believe me we see the ugliness then.

The leaves are beginning to fall so of course that is a never ending job for several months, now. Diseased and dead wood needs to be cut out of shrubs and trees. shrubs need edging. The grass in patios needs poisoning. Dead blooms from hydrangeas and other plants need clipping.

Lower limbs from trees may need removing to let more light in the house for winter. If you prune evergreen shrubs, now, you'll have to look at the clipped bush all winter. After Christmas is the best time for that. However, some few limbs must be removed when they're overhanging driveways or steps or have grown so large they're cutting out the light.

Brick edging around beds give a well groomed look to the garden. Old brick are preferred but they'll age in a hurry. Brick layed flush with the lawn, in a circular pattern around the lamp post will give this spot a neat look. The edger will keep the grass from growing over the brick. I've noticed landscape architects follow this practice often.

GARDEN JOBS

Remove and burn the dead foliage of iris. Fertilize with bone meal if you haven't done that earlier.

You can spray with malathion any time you see scale on evergreens, summer, winter, spring or fall. This scale on camellias is something we're going to have to fight all winter. That season is going to be as balmy as the last two.

Though women don't specialize in tree work, we can tell you to get a fishing pole, some newspapers and burn the webs that are appearing in your trees, especially pecans. Inside the web are the ugly old hairy caterpillars. They'll eat all the leaves they can get to. The trees should be sprayed with DDT after burning the webs, but few of you have spray equipment that will reach high enough. Thus it becomes a professional job.

More people have called in about bagworm this year than any previous year in my record. The larva is the stage of the worm that is so ravenous. This larva cuts the twigs and makes a bag. He rolls up in this brown, inch long, bag and these hang down from the branches. The foliage, as a result, looks ragged and dead. To control the larva, spray with 20 per cent toxaphene or with 4½ ounces of lead arsenate in one gallon of water. I haven't found the poison does anything for the worm after it encases itself in its twig like home. Just pick those, put them in a paper bag and burn.

These bagworms only attack conifers and this almost entirely in the south. In the north where the winters are colder, they're seldom found.

SEWING

When you're making a fall dress, you'll find that sheer wool is a good choice of fabric. It's one of the easiest of all to sew. If you're going to line the dress completely, here's the easiest way to do it. After cutting lining and fabric, take time to machine baste the lining to the fabric, just outside each seam line. Press, then go ahead with your construction, treating lining and sheer wool as one fabric. Remember, press as you sew if you want to avoid that preside look. A complete lining is well worth the little extra work and expense.

'JEST TALKING'

It won't be long before you'll be getting out the woolens you so carefully stored away before summer began. When you take garments out of moth ball storage, tumble them in the dryer with no heat for a few minutes to help get rid of the odor.

Today's beauty hint concerns the newest hair styles for fall. Many of them have a smooth youthful look with flirtations wings at the sides or as a novel back detail.

Here, as well as abroad, dressmakers and hatmakers are still trying hard to win bare-headed feminity back to hats. Word has gone round that there will be a small headed look to the new fashion silhouette. So there are a number of very flattering and smart looking turbans and toques.

Designers are featuring close harmony between costumes and jewelry. You'll see many pretty chokers of beads in neutrals such as beige and gray, as well as, in brighter colors. The new look is seen in fuschia and a near amethyst called cardinal. Also popular in fall jewelry is the nugget type stone which is full of lights. This necklace comes in blue, green, red or topaz.

If you're buying a new pearl necklace to wear with your fall clothes, remember that the new look in necklaces features back of neck interest. Ornamental clasps on the new pearl necklaces feature large colorful stones — like rubies.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

New Bulbs In Tulip Show

By MARY JARDINE

The International Tulip Selections made each spring at Keukenhof Gardens near Lisse, Holland was extended this year to include crocus, narcissus and hyacinths and became the International Bulb Selections.

All of these may be obtained from your bulb dealers and planted this fall. Some of these have already become popular among bulb fanciers while others are still little known. They are: Unsurpassable, Largest yellow trumpet daffodil.

A striking garden flower, Geranium, is the top narcissus among the poetaz hybrids. Broad, paper white petals and golden orange cup. Bear heads of three to five flowers on strong stems. A late bloomer and very desirable. Thalia, is probably best known of the triandrus narcissus. Pure white flowers are carried two to four on a stem. It flowers late. Its dainty form and fragrance and keeping qualities make it most desirable.

Jeanne d'Arc, the largest and probably the most beautiful white crocus was the selection of the jury. Cream white flowers with a faint lavender flush at the base. Sometimes we overlook these lovely flowers in our garden picture.

BAYOU VISTA CLUB

In the horticulture section blue ribbons were awarded as follows: Mrs. Frank Francis for Pedilanthus (red-bird cactus), Mrs. William Lynn for Candle tree flowers (Cassia alata) and Mrs. Frank Francis for celosia.

In the arrangement section Mrs. C. A. McKenzie's design was awarded top score. A classic compote in dark green was elected for the symmetrical mass design. Background placements were of aspidistra, with large loquat leaves providing a change of texture and a deeper tone of green. Massed in the center for a focus of interest were clusters of houseleek flower heads. (Sempervivum) These were a light green tinged with lavender. A lovely combination of colors and textures. Most appealing.

Mrs. C. S. McIntosh and Mrs. Frank Francis combined their talents in creating a green and white arrangement using summer flowers. The container was an oblong black bowl set on a brilliant orange base of structural glass. The symmetrical pattern was delineated with amaryllis foliage in the background. Secondary placements were of pedilanthas in green and white. White zinnias in sizes from small to large were skillfully grouped low in the center of the design. Japanese yew in light green was placed low as a filler behind the zinnias. A crisp and fresh design suitable for a living room or hall table.

Mrs. Pat Mitchell designed a most colorful arrangement combining crybaby plant and celosia. For a container Mrs. Mitchell selected a white boat shaped bowl of pottery. Her design gave the effect of sails in the wind. Background "sails" were of aspidistra with gracefully curved spikes of the cry - baby flowers emphasizing the line. Low in the design were clusters of the crested cockscomb in a salmon color, blending perfectly with the other materials. The cry-baby plant is Erythrina, also called the Coral Tree.

THE SOUTHERN GARDENER

Houseleaks Cool Looking

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The rosy flowered form of grandmother's houseleak in bloom right now is certainly one of the most useful plants for gardens and landscapes in the south. It is extremely drouth - resistant because it is a succulent plant. While succulents are not quite such camels as cacti, they can store up water in their thick leaves and stems and coast through the drought that we have every year at some time or other — even if they are followed by floods!

The common old houseleak of old - fashioned gardens has whitish flowers of no character, but there are new forms, now, with white and bright rose flowers. From early spring when the rosettes of new leaves begin to unfurl till frost cuts them down these plants are neat and cool looking. Although they are drouth resistant, they will, nevertheless, grow in some shade. Their silvery green fat foliage is strong and a beautiful sight at all times — something you can count on to look neat with the other perennials.

The Latin name of houseleak is Sedum spectabile, a good name for the species because it is the showiest and largest of the sedums. Another fine sedum that has begun to appear in catalogues of perennials is sedum spurium and its variety called Dragon's Blood. This one has heads of bronzy red buds and red flowers that follow. It lasts well into the cold weather after weeks and weeks of bloom. For a beautiful fall effect, plant it near white flowers of some kind, especially late while chrysanthemums.

Still another of the sedums is sedum Sieboldi. Most people grow it in pots because they do not realize that it is hardy outdoors. It is the one with a little reddish margin around the succulent leaves. The plants make a beautiful edger for beds that are raised up a foot or more above garden walks. This well drained position is necessary to grow such a succulent because all excess water must be drained away from it, especially in winter and in the summer floods.

Most of us are familiar with the small and tiny sedums of various kinds. They are rock garden plants, for the most part, but some will make a fine textured ground cover where almost nothing else seems to succeed. The tiny leaved sedums are frequently seen growing on hanging baskets and in pots. These are admired because of their fine texture and because some kinds are evergreen, and the pot just sits out in the winter with hardy cacti and hens-and-chickens without being hurt by the cold. Frequently these tiny sedums are called "moss."

All of the larger sedums are beautiful in dried arrangements. After frost has removed the leaves, hang them, upside-down, to dry out thoroughly, and then work them into your winter decorations.

Camera News

THE EXPOSURE ratings of black-and-white films received an official and long overdue jolt recently. Ansco of Binghamton took the initiative by issuing a revised list of their films in which the exposure indexes were more or less doubled. For example, Super Hypan is now officially rated at A. S. A. 500 daylight, 400 tungsten. Up till now it has been 160 tungsten. Another popular rated at 200 daylight and film, All Weather Pan is now officially 125 daylight (from 64) and 100 tungsten (from 50). Nothing else has been changed except the rating.

It brings to a head the long-time relization that A. S. A. indexes for black-and-white films have not been realistic. It is one jump ahead of the industry-wide revision upward which is expected when the proper committee of the American Standards Assn. makes its announcement public.

The whole fuss revolves around the tremendous safety factor which has been incorporated in A. S. A. exposure indexes till now. After determining the minimum exposure necessary to produce a good quality print, a leeway of 2½ times exposure was added as safety factor to arrive at the official A. S. A. rating.

Thus, in normal shooting, if the A. S. A. exposure index is followed, negatives are over-exposed 2½ times or the equivalent of 1 1-3 stops in the lens opening. A really "normal" exposure will produce a negative which is less dense, will have finer grain, better resolution and sharpness and is easier to enlarge.

The large safety factor has become outmoded in today's camera world. Years ago it was necessary to allow for much human mis-judgement in exposure, less accurate shutters, uncoated lenses and greater prevalence of contact printing because larger negatives were used.

Today, more thorough exposure information and diagrams are packed with each type of film, light meters have become a common accessory or built-in as a part of the camera, shutters are more efficient, lenses are come more important because smaller negative sizes are being used.

It was found that when larger negative sizes were the vogue, over-exposed or dense negatives would still make good contact prints or small enlargements. However, as smaller negative sizes became the trend, greater enlargements were needed. It was found that heavy or over-exposed negatives resulted in poorer quality as the enlargement ratio increased.

With the rise in popularity of the miniature cameras, we heard a great deal about getting "greater speed" out of black-and-white films by increasing the A. S. A. ratings. Actually this amounted to eliminating the safety factor of the film, thereby getting thinner negatives and better enlargements...if it wasn't carried too far.

Another factor which indicates that photo fans should have little difficulty adjusting to the new, more exact film speed ratings in black-and-white is color photography.

Color films have no safety factor or one so small it is fairly negligible. Yet camera fans, in recent years, have adjusted to the need for precise exposure calculations in color with great success, on the whole. The curve on use of color slides, color movies and color prints keeps going up and up and up.

What it boils down to is that if you're shooting with films other than the Ansco types which have been officially revised, you can start doubling up on your own meter settings. For instance, with Verichrome Pan instead of A. S. A. 80 daylight, make it 150 or 200. Tri-X film can be set to 500 daylight and 400 tungsten instead of 200 daylight and 160 tungsten. light.

Divide Clumps Of Daylilies

By AUDREY DAWSON

If your daylilies are overcrowded, you can divide them this month. It is an excellent time now with all the showers — they will not be too hard to dig. Cut the tops back half way and replant only the healthiest roots.

Bulbs to plant this month are corcus, hyacinth, daffodil and scilla — and order your tulip buds and put them in the ice box for two months.

Be sure to rake the leaves that will be falling real soon when Ole Man Autumn pays us a visit. Save the leaves and put them in your compost heap.

STORE BREAD

Storing bread in the freezer is the best way to keep it fresh if you plan to keep it more than a few days. This news came from the Minnesota Experiment Station. Their tests showed that bread needs no special freezer over - wrapping unless it's being stored for more than 6 months. Just freeze bread in the wrapping in which it came from the store. For home - made bread, however, freezer wrap is necessary. Other studies show that bread does not have to be thoroughly thawed before it's used for toast, and sandwiches made from frozen slices can help refrigerate the lunch box.

The next time you drive by the fairgrounds, look at the exhibit buildings — the new coat of white paint will make you realize it's about fair time in Ouachita Parish.

FALL HATS

Ladies, have you ever seen lovelier hats than this season's? Just take a look in any of our store windows — colors and styles all add up to a lovely fall collection of hats. Most of the hats have a slightly bulkier look this season with high crown and wider brims, but there are plenty of small styles such as the beret and the cloche. Feathers are again in high fashion this fall, and I believe prettier than last year's showing. Hats are shown in handsome fabrics like velvets, satin, brocades and in luxury furs, too. Metallic brocades are the newest fabrics used for dinner and evening hats this season.

During this back - to - school month, parents of school bus riders should remember these important tips: Be sure your youngsters wait for the bus off the roadway. Once they get inside the bus, they should remember that horseplay is not allowed — and they shouldn't bother the driver. Let's keep school bus accidents to a minimum — zero. You can help, too, by observing the law which requires automobiles to stop at least 10 feet from school busses when taking on or discharging passengers.

YANK AT OXFORD

No Grades, No Tests So It Is Wonderful

Editor's note - Oxford University was turning out graduates before Columbus discovered America. Since the war, Americans in increasing numbers have discovered its peculiar charms. Peter Grose of Tucson, Ariz., came here from Yale University and this is his story of what life is like for a Yank at Oxford in 1959.

By PETER GROSE

OXFORD, England (AP) — Oxford is a university with no tests, no grades, no classes—you just sit down with your tutor sonce a week over a glass of sherry and talk about the books you've read.

Oxford is a place where the weekend date is an unknown institution, where they lock you in the college buildings at midnight, and where the beer you drink from antique silver tankards is always warm.

The cold Gothic halls of this medieval university seem a far cry from an American campus. How does the modern Yank at Oxford — there are hundreds each year—get along?

I have just finished two years of post-graduate study at Oxford, and without hesitation I say a Yank can have as good a time here as he did at his American university—but as different as tea parties are from a homecoming weekend.

The way you study is different. What you do when you're not studying is different. The way you make friends is very different.

I'll never forget the astonished — almost frightened — looks from other first-year men when I tried to introduce myself with a hearty American handshake.

I caught on to the usual English way—you just start talking idly and leave any introductions for much later. I was friendly with some people for weeks before I knew their names.

But you must take little things as they come here and must never flaunt ancient tradition.

Manners, organization and discipline — even gardening — all follow centuries-old routines.

An old gardner once told some American tourists how one of the vast Oxford lawns was kept so soft and smooth: "You mow it and roll it every Friday afternoon for 300 years."

Before the war the Yank was a relative rarity at England's oldest university-by 1959 he is as much a part of Oxford life as the dreaming spires and academic gowns.

Soon after I arrived in Oxford I received a note from an instructor—they are called "dons" here —asking me to drop in to discuss my work.

As he poured me a glass of sherry he explained that I should visit him once a week and read him a short essay on the books I had been reading.

"You might also want to go to a few lectures," he said, giving me a list. "Try some of these out, but if you don't enjoy them don't bother going any more—you may find they're a waste of your time."

If this wasn't surprising enough to me, fresh from an American university, he poured another glass of sherry and added that students are given no tests, no formal assignments, and no grades!

"Just prepare as best you can for the final examinations at the end of your second year—I'll find out in talking with you how you're coming," he added with a twinkle.

I walked in to the college common room to find American magazines on the tables. History students argue about the American Civil War almost as fiercely as they do back home.

I was constantly bombarded with questions about everything American—from foreign policy to Mickey Mantle.

You learn quickly to accept the little annoyances without complaining:

There is no running water in some of the dormitories—it was a strange feeling the first time I had to walk into the next quadrangle in my dressing gown for a bath: a party of gaping tourists happened to be passing through the college.

Coming straight from the comforts of a modern American university these seemed like big annoyances, but after a few weeks they don't count for much. And there is always the compensation of quiet, very British bull-sessions over pints of bitter in a cozy pub on winter evenings, or punting on the River Cherwell in the bright springtime.

Oxford has three academic terms, each lasting eight weeks. The vacations between them seem luxurious to an American — six weeks at Christmas and Easter, and nearly four months in the summer.

But you are expected to read suggested books during the vacations and will quickly be found out if you haven't.

The initiative is all on the student—no one makes you study—and it's probably the reason why the English undergraduate is rated academically more mature than his American counterpart.

Socially, however, he is not as experienced as an American college student—this is reflected in regulations which strike me as more appropriate to a boarding school.

"Gating" is the worst—the college gates are locked at midnight and any undergraduate not in will have to explain himself to the authorities when his bed is discovered empty next morning.

This is as annoying to the English students as the Americans, so ways of climbing in over the high, iron-spiked college walls are often discovered and used in the early hours of the morning.

College authorities know all this goes on, but they tend to be indulgent.

"There are 26 ways of climbing in to your college—what do you propose to do about this?" wrote the university disciplinary officer a few years ago to the dean of one of the residential colleges.

The dean replied, "There are 28, and I have no intention of doing anything."

Oxford is co-educational, but the so-called "Ladies Colleges" are well away from the center of the university.

"I was horrified to find that the time-honored U.S. institution of the weekend date is unknown at Oxford.

But before long I found that social life consists mainly of informal "bottle" parties, rather than college dances.

I am sure that no one at any time of his life is more carefree and easy-going than the undergraduate at Oxford.

But there is none of the tense pressure to excel—either to pile up grades or extra-curricular activities—that you find on many an American campus.

"Why," I was often asked, "do you Americans always have to be doing something?"

Always Next Year In Game Of Gardening

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CHAPPAQUA, N. Y. — One of the pleasures of gardening, as we of the calloused palms and broken fingernails well know, is that there is always next year when things are going to be so much better. And one of the frustrations is that one's brightest ideas invariably strike at just the wrong seasons.

For instance, if you want to open up a new garden bed next season in an area planted to grass, the time to reach that decision is right now. If you do, it will be possible to dig up the area, turn over the clods and let winter weather break up the soil and help you turn the spot into a future Eden. Unfortunately, however, most bright ideas about opening up a new border strike around Jan. 15 — when the ground is frozen solid although the will to work is strong.

These fall weeks should be the most important work periods for hobby gardeners. Actually it is a more crucial period than the spring in terms of improving soil, cleaning up established plantings and adding new plantings. Just about the only thing lacking is the average gardener's enthusiasm for hard labor.

This the time for planting earlier - blooming perennials, for moving biennial and perennial seedlings from seed beds to permanent locations. This is also the right time to dig and divide established perennials — except of course those which bloom late in the year and are best moved in the spring. And when this activity is in progress, it is a good time to dig over and thoroughly feed the beds.

It is time to give the lawn, the trees and the shrubs their slow - acting fall feedings — if this hasn't been done earlier—and then, if the ground has adequate supplies of water, to allow the growing things to start resting.

Leaves Bring Unending Job

By MILDRED SWIFT

Labor Day was named official holiday in 1894, when Congress passed a bill setting this up. Labor Day has passed but it brought with it reminders of garden jobs to be done.

I guess about the most important job, now, is clean up. In spring and summer when there's bloom and foliage, we don't notice "messiness" in the garden. Grass can grow up to the edge of plants, beds can be weedy but there's always something so pretty in bloom we don't notice. However, when winter comes the deciduous plants lose their leaves. Annuals and perennials are gone and believe me we see the ugliness then.

The leaves are bginning to fall so of course that is a never ending job for several months, now. Diseased and dead wood needs to be cut out of shrubs and trees. shrubs need edging. The grass in patios needs poisoning. Dead blooms from hydrangeas and other plants need clipping.

Lower limbs from trees may need removing to let more light in the house for winter. If you prune evergreen shrubs, now, you'll have to look at the clipped bush all winter. After Christmas is the best time for that. However, some few limbs must be removed when they're overhanging driveways or steps or have grown so large they're cutting out the light.

Brick edging around beds give a well groomed look to the garden. Old brick are preferred but they'll age in a hurry. Brick layed flush with the lawn, in a circular pattern around the lamp post will give this spot a neat look. The edger will keep the grass from growing over the brick. I've noticed landscape architects follow this practice often.

GARDEN JOBS

Remove and burn the dead foliage of iris. Fertilize with bone meal if you haven't done that earlier.

You can spray with malathion any time you see scale on evergreens, summer, winter, spring or fall. This scale on camellias is something we're going to have to fight all winter. That season is going to be as balmy as the last two.

Though women don't specialize in tree work, we can tell you to get a fishing pole, some newspapers and burn the webs that are appearing in your trees, especially pecans. Inside the web are the ugly old hairy caterpillars. They'll eat all the leaves they can get to. The trees should be sprayed with DDT after burning the webs, but few of you have spray equipment that will reach high enough. Thus it becomes a professional job.

More people have called in about bagworm this year than any previous year in my record. The larva is the stage of the worm that is so ravenous. This larva cuts the twigs and makes a bag. He rolls up in this brown, inch long, bag and these hang down from the branches. The foliage, as a result, looks ragged and dead. To control the larva, spray with 20 per cent toxaphene or with 4½ ounces of lead arsenate in one gallon of water. I haven't found the poison does anything for the worm after it encases itself in its twig like home. Just pick those, put them in a paper bag and burn.

These bagworms only attack conifers and this almost entirely in the south. In the north where the winters are colder, they're seldom found.

SEWING

When you're making a fall dress, you'll find that sheer wool is a good choice of fabric. It's one of the easiest of all to sew. If you're going to line the dress completely, here's the easiest way to do it. After cutting lining and fabric, take time to machine baste the lining to the fabric, just outside each seam line. Press, then go ahead with your construction, treating lining and sheer wool as one fabric. Remember, press as you sew if you want to avoid that preside look. A complete lining is well worth the little extra work and expense.

'JEST TALKING'

It won't be long before you'll be getting out the woolens you so carefully stored away before summer began. When you take garments out of moth ball storage, tumble them in the dryer with no heat for a few minutes to help get rid of the odor.

Today's beauty hint concerns the newest hair styles for fall. Many of them have a smooth youthful look with flirtations wings at the sides or as a novel back detail.

Here, as well as abroad, dressmakers and hatmakers are still trying hard to win bare-headed feminity back to hats. Word has gone round that there will be a small headed look to the new fashion silhouette. So there are a number of very flattering and smart looking turbans and toques.

Designers are featuring close harmony between costumes and jewelry. You'll see many pretty chokers of beads in neutrals such as beige and gray, as well as, in brighter colors. The new look is seen in fuschia and a near amehyst called cardinal. Also popular in fall jewelry is the nugget type stone which is full of lights. This necklace comes in blue, green, red or topaz.

If you're buying a new pearl necklace to wear with your fall clothes, remember that the new look in necklaces features back of neck interest. Ornamental clasps on the new pearl necklaces feature large colorful stones — like rubies.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Your Open House programs for next week are: Monday Mrs. Berdina Smelly will give us "Hair Styles"; Tuesday Mrs. Ona Blondin will show us how to buy a coat; Wednesdty Mrs. Jardine and flower arrangements; Thursday and Friday marketing with Mildred. See you next Sunday.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

New Bulbs In Tulip Show

By MARY JARDINE

The International Tulip Selections made each spring at Keukenhof Gardens near Lisse, Holland was extended this year to include crocus, narcissus and hyacinths and became the International Bulb Selections.

All of these may be obtained from your bulb dealers and planted this fall. Some of these have already become popular among bulb fanciers while others are still little known. They are: Unsurpassable. Largest yellow trumpet daffodil.

A striking garden flower, Geranium, is the top narcissus among the poetaz hybrids. Broad, paper white petals and golden orange cup. Bear heads of three to five flowers on strong stems. A late bloomer and very desirable. Thalia, is probably best known of the triandrus narcissus. Pure white flowers are carried two to four on a stem. It flowers late. Its dainty form and fragrance and keeping qualities make it most desirable.

Jeanne d'Arc, the largest and probably the most beautiful white crocus was the selection of the jury. Cream white flowers with a faint lavender flush at the base. Sometimes we overlook these lovely flowers in our garden picture.

BAYOU VISTA CLUB

In the horticulture section blue ribbons were awarded as follows: Mrs. Frank Francis for Pedilanthus (red-bird cactus), Mrs. William Lynn for Candle tree flowers (Cassia alata) and Mrs. Frank Francis for celosia.

In the arrangement section Mrs. C. A. McKenzie's design was awarded top score. A classic compote in dark green was elected for the symmetrical mass design. Background placements were of aspidistra, with large loquat leaves providing a change of texture and a deeper tone of green. Massed in the center for a focus of interest were clusters of houseleek flower heads. (Sempervivum) These were a light green tinged with lavender. A lovely combination of colors and textures. Most appealing.

Mrs. C. S. McIntosh and Mrs. Frank Francis combined their talents in creating a green and white arrangement using summer flowers. The container was an oblong black bowl set on a brilliant orange base of structural glass. The symmetrical pattern was delineated with amaryllis foliage in the background. Secondary placements were of pedilanthas in green and white. White zinnias in sizes from small to large were skillfully grouped low in the center of the design. Japanese yew in light green was placed low as a filler behind the zinnias. A crisp and fresh design suitable for a living room or hall table.

Mrs. Pat Mitchell designed a most colorful arrangement combining crybaby plant and celosia. For a container Mrs. Mitchell selected a white boat shaped bowl of pottery. Her design gave the effect of sails in the wind. Background "sails" were of aspidistra with gracefully curved spikes of the cry - baby flowers emphasizing the line. Low in the design were clusters of the crested cockscomb in a salmon color, blending perfectly with the other materials. The cry-baby plant is Erythrina, also called the Coral Tree.

THE SOUTHERN GARDENER

Houseleaks Cool Looking

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The rosy flowered form of grandmother's houseleak in bloom right now is certainly one of the most useful plants for gardens and landscapes in the south. It is extremely drouth - resistant because it is a succulent plant. While succulents are not quite such camels as cacti, they can store up water in their thick leaves and stems and coast through the drought that we have every year at some time or other — even if they are followed by floods!

The common old houseleak of old - fashioned gardens has whitish flowers of no character, but there are new forms, now, with white and bright rose flowers. From early spring when the rosettes of new leaves begin to unfurl till frost cuts them down, these plants are neat and cool looking. Although they are drouth resistant, they will, nevertheless, grow in some shade. Their silvery green fat foliage is strong and a beautiful sight at all times — something you can count on to look neat with the other perennials.

The Latin name of houseleak is Sedum spectabile, a good name for the species because it is the showiest and largest of the sedums. Another fine sedum that has begun to appear in catalogues of perennials is sedum spurium and its variety called Dragon's Blood. This one has heads of bronzy red buds and red flowers that follow. It lasts well into the cold weather after weeks and weeks of bloom. For a beautiful fall effect, plant it near white flowers of some kind, especially late while chrysanthemums.

Still another of the sedums is sedum Sieboldi. Most people grow it in pots because they do not realize that it is hardy out-of-doors. It is the one with a little reddish margin around the succulent leaves. The plants make a beautiful edger for beds that are raised up a foot or more above garden walks. This well drained position is necessary to grow such a succulent because all excess water must be drained away from it, especially in winter and in the summer floods.

Most of us are familiar with the small and tiny sedums of various kinds. They are rock garden plants, for the most part, but some will make a fine textured ground cover where almost nothing else seems to succeed. The tiny leaved sedums are frequently seen growing on hanging baskets and in pots. These are admired because of their fine texture and because some kinds are evergreen, and the pot just sits out in the winter with hardy cacti and hens-and-chickens without being hurt by the cold. Frequently these tiny sedums are called "moss."

All of the larger sedums are beautiful in dried arrangements. After frost has removed the leaves, hang them, upside-down, to dry out thoroughly, and then work them into your winter decorations.

GUILD SUBSIDIARY

NEW YORK (AP) — The Theatre Guild, Broadway's oldest producing organization, is setting up a subsidiary to develop new creative talent.

Called Studio Three, the organization is to operate off - Broadway to keep costs down.

"The purpose,' the Guild explains, "shall be to nurture, develop and expose under professional theater management the creative abilities of playwrights, directors, designers and actors."

AIRPORT THESPIANS

NEW YORK (AP) — Idlewild Players, the first theatrical group to perform at any commercial airport in the world, has been organized at New York's international air terminal.

All members of the cast are airport workers. The new off-Broadway group intends to concentrate on doing original dramas.

SWITCH IN COSTS

NEW YORK (AP) — A musical show, "Billy Barnes Revue" came up with fiscal oddity when it moved to a regular Broadway theater from an off Broadway playhouse.

The price of the cheapest seats was cut from $2.25 to $2. The management explained that the larger capacity of the new auditorium made the reduction possible.

Welcome Garden Guest Speaker

Mrs. Roy Davis of Shreveport, nationally accredited flower show judge and member of the Shreveport Beautification Foundation, will speak to the fall meeting of the Welcome Garden club Monday, September 21, at 2 p.m. in the Virginia Hotel ballroom.

Camera News

THE EXPOSURE ratings of black-and-white films received an official and long overdue jolt recently. Ansco of Binghamton took the initiative by issuing a revised list of their films in which the exposure indexes were more or less doubled. For example, Super Hypan is now officially rated at A. S. A. 500 daylight, 400 tungsten. Up till now it has been 160 tungsten. Another popular rated at 200 daylight and film, All Weather Pan is now officially 125 daylight (from 64) and 100 tungsten (from 50). Nothing else has been changed except the rating.

It brings to a head the long-time relization that A. S. A. indexes for black-and-white films have not been realistic. It is one jump ahead of the industry-wide revision upward which is expected when the proper committee of the American Standards Assn. makes its announcement public.

The whole fuss revolves around the tremendous safety factor which has been incorporated in A. S. A. exposure indexes till now. After determining the minimum exposure necessary to produce a good quality print, a leeway of 2½ times exposure was added as safety factor to arrive at the official A. S. A. rating.

Thus, in normal shooting, if the A. S. A. exposure index is followed, negatives are over-exposed 2½ times or the equivalent of 1 1-3 stops in the lens opening. A really "normal" exposure will produce a negative which is less dense, will have finer grain, better resolution and sharpness and is easier to enlarge.

The large safety factor has become outmoded in today's camera world. Years ago it was necessary to allow for much human mis-judgement in exposure, less accurate shutters, uncoated lenses and greater prevalence of contact printing because larger negatives were used.

Today, more thorough exposure information and diagrams are packed with each type of film, light meters have become a common accessory or built-in as a part of the camera, shutters are more efficient, lenses are come more important because smaller negative sizes are being used.

It was found that when larger negative sizes were the vogue, over-exposed or dense negatives would still make good contact prints or small enlargements. However, as smaller negative sizes became the trend, greater enlargements were needed. It was found that heavy or over-exposed negatives resulted in poorer quality as the enlargement ratio increased.

With the rise in popularity of the miniature cameras, we heard a great deal about getting "greater speed" out of black-and-white films by increasing the A. S. A. ratings. Actually this amounted to eliminating the safety factor of the film, thereby getting thinner negatives and better enlargements...if it wasn't carried too far.

Another factor which indicates that photo fans should have little difficulty adjusting to the new, more exact film speed ratings in black-and-white is color photography.

Color films have no safety factor or one so small it is fairly negligible. Yet camera fans, in recent years, have adjusted to the need for precise exposure calculations in color with great success, on the whole. The curve on use of color slides, color movies and color prints keeps going up and up and up.

What it boils down to is that if you're shooting with films other than the Ansco types which have been officially revised, you can start doubling up on your own meter settings. For instance, with Verichrome Pan instead of A. S. A. 80 -daylight, make it 150 or 200. Tri-X film can be set to 500 daylight and 400 tungsten instead of 200 daylight and 160 tungsten. light.

Divide Clumps Of Daylilies

By AUDREY DAWSON

If your daylilies are overcrowded, you can divide them this month. It is an excellent time now with all the showers — they will not be too hard to dig. Cut the tops back half way and replant only the healthiest roots.

Bulbs to plant this month are corcus, hyacinth, daffodil and scilla — and order your tulip buds and put them in the ice box for two months.

Be sure to rake the leaves that will be falling real soon when Ole Man Autumn pays us a visit. Save the leaves and put them in your compost heap.

STORE BREAD

Storing bread in the freezer is the best way to keep it fresh if you plan to keep it more than a few days. This news came from the Minnesota Experiment Station. Their tests showed that bread needs no special freezer over - wrapping unless it's being stored for more than 6 months. Just freeze bread in the wrapping in which it came from the store. For home - made bread, however, freezer wrap is necessary. Other studies show that bread does not have to be thoroughly thawed before it's used for toast, and sandwiches made from frozen slices can help refrigerate the lunch box.

FAIR CATALOGUES

The fair catalogues for the Ouachita Fair are ready, and you may come by to get your copy at our office, 704 Cypress Street.

It's time to make preparation-it will be fair time in just a few weeks. Mark the date on your calendar, October 12-17. Mr. John Birdsong, secretary - manager of the fair, is getting the buildings in good shape. The next time you drive by the fairgrounds, look at the exhibit buildings — the new coat of white paint will make you realize it's about fair time in Ouachita Parish.

FALL HATS

Ladies, have you ever seen lovelier hats than this season's? Just take a look in any of our store windows — colors and styles all add up to a lovely fall collection of hats. Most of the hats have a slightly bulkier look this season with high crown and wider brims, but there are plenty of small styles such as the beret and the cloche. Feathers are again in high fashion this fall, and I believe prettier than last year's showing. Hats are shown in handsome fabrics like velvets, satin, brocades and in luxury furs, too. Metallic brocades are the newest fabrics used for dinner and evening hats this season.

During this back - to - school month, parents of school bus riders should remember these important tips: Be sure your youngsters wait for the bus off the roadway. Once they get inside the bus, they should remember that horseplay is not allowed — and they shouldn't bother the driver. Let's keep school bus accidents to a minimum — zero. You can help, too, by observing the law which requires automobiles to stop at least 10 feet from school busses when taking on or discharging passengers.

YANK AT OXFORD

No Grades, No Tests So It Is Wonderful

Editor's note - Oxford University was turning out graduates before Columbus discovered America. Since the war, Americans in increasing numbers have discovered its peculiar charms. Peter Grose of Tucson, Ariz., came here from Yale University and this is his story of what life is like for a Yank at Oxford in 1959.

By PETER GROSE

OXFORD, England (AP) — Oxford is a university with no tests, no grades, no classes—you just sit down with your tutor sonce a week over a glass of sherry and talk about the books you've read.

Oxford is a place where the weekend date is an unknown institution, where they lock you in the college buildings at midnight, and where the beer you drink from antique silver tankards is always warm.

The cold Gothic halls of this medieval university seem a far cry from an American campus. How does the modern Yank at Oxford — there are hundreds each year—get along?

I have just finished two years of post-graduate study at Oxford, and without hesitation I say a Yank can have as good a time here as he did at his American university—but as different as tea parties are from a homecoming weekend.

The way you study is different. What you do when you're not studying is different. The way you make friends is very different.

I'll never forget the astonished — almost frightened — looks from other first-year men when I tried to introduce myself with a hearty American handshake.

I caught on to the usual English way—you just start talking idly and leave any introductions for much later. I was friendly with some people for weeks before I knew their names.

But you must take little things as they come here and must never flaunt ancient tradition.

Manners, organization and discipline — even gardening — all follow centuries-old routines.

An old gardner once told some American tourists how one of the vast Oxford lawns was kept so soft and smooth: "You mow it and roll it every Friday afternoon for 300 years."

Before the war the Yank was a relative rarity at England's oldest university-by 1959 he is as much a part of Oxford life as the dreaming spires and academic gowns.

Soon after I arrived in Oxford I received a note from an instructor—they are called "dons" here—asking me to drop in to discuss my work.

As he poured me a glass of sherry he explained that I should visit him once a week and read him a short essay on the books I had been reading.

"You might also want to go to a few lectures," he said, giving me a list. "Try some of these out, but if you don't enjoy them don't bother going any more—you may find they're a waste of your time."

If this wasn't surprising enough to me, fresh from an American university, he poured another glass of sherry and added that students are given no tests, no formal assignments, and no grades!

"Just prepare as best you can for the final examinations at the end of your second year—I'll find out in talking with you how you're coming," he added with a twinkle.

I walked in to the college common room to find American magazines on the tables. History students argue about the American Civil War almost as fiercely as they do back home.

I was constantly bombarded with questions about everything American—from foreign policy to Mickey Mantle.

You learn quickly to accept the little annoyances without complaining:

There is no running water in some of the dormitories—it was a strange feeling the first time I had to walk into the next quadrangle in my dressing gown for a bath: a party of gaping tourists happened to be passing through the college.

Coming straight from the comforts of a modern American university these seemed like big annoyances, but after a few weeks they don't count for much. And there is always the compensation of quiet, very British bull-sessions over pints of bitter in a cozy pub on winter evenings, or punting on the River Cherwell in the bright springtime.

Oxford has three academic terms, each lasting eight weeks. The vacations between them seem luxurious to an American — six weeks at Christmas and Easter, and nearly four months in the summer.

But you are expected to read suggested books during the vacations and will quickly be found out if you haven't.

The initiative is all on the student—no one makes you study—and it's probably the reason why the English undergraduate is rated academically more mature than his American counterpart.

Socially, however, he is not as experienced as an American college student—this is reflected in regulations which strike me as more appropriate to a boarding school.

"Gating" is the worst—the college gates are locked at midnight and any undergraduate not in will have to explain himself to the authorities when his bed is discovered empty next morning.

This is as annoying to the English students as the Americans, so ways of climbing in over the high, iron-spiked college walls are often discovered and used in the early hours of the morning.

College authorities know all this goes on, but they tend to be indulgent.

"There are 26 ways of climbing in to your college—what do you propose to do about this?" wrote the university disciplinary officer a few years ago to the dean of one of the residential colleges.

The dean replied, "There are 28, and I have no intention of doing anything."

Oxford is co-educational, but the so-called "Ladies Colleges" are well away from the center of the university.

"I was horrified to find that the time-honored U.S. institution of the weekend date is unknown at Oxford.

But before long I found that social life consists mainly of informal "bottle" parties, rather than college dances.

I am sure that no one at any time of his life is more carefree and easy-going than the undergraduate at Oxford.

But there is none of the tense pressure to excel—either to pile up grades or extra-curricular activities—that you find on many an American campus.

"Why," I was often asked, "do you Americans always have to be doing something?"

MRS. F. A. BROWN

Baptist Group Lists Honors At Reception

The Women's Missionary Union of the Trenton Baptist Association honored Mrs. F. A. Brown Sr., at a tea held Thursday evening at the Ridge Avenue Baptist Church in view of her work as president of the missionary group.

Mrs. Brown has served for six years as president of the missionary union. During that time she led the activities of women in 23 churches of the association who did not have missionary societies in their own churches.

Offerings to missions increased under Mrs. Brown's leadership the last year the scholarship goal was realized, enabling the Trenton Association to be eligible to make such an award to a worthy student in the area.

Other activities taken up under her leadership include the establishment of a library, purchase and distribution of Bibles at Angola State Prison, contributions to the Baptist Student Center at Northeast and the arrangements for outstanding speakers in the missionary field to appear at association meetings.

Protestants Sound Alarm On Fund Issue

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

American Protestants, who have long scolded their Roman Catholic brethren for raising money through raffles and bingo games, have lately discovered a beam in their own eye.

They are getting concerned about the prevalence of "commercialism" in Protestant fund-raising activities.

The Christian Century Magazine, which is always pricking the Protestant conscience in its sore spots, was one of first to raise the alarm.

"One need not travel far in American Protestantism," the Century declared in a recent editorial, "to find money-raising schemes that approximate the Roman Catholic Church's exploitation of games of chance, which we deplore and protest.

COMPARED WITH LAS VEGAS

"Thousands of Protestant church bazaars, carnivals and 'summer fairs' are slightly more respectable than Las Vegas.

"The practice of wringing 'advertising' dollars from merchants, particularly from those who are not members of the churches in question, to finance church bulletins and magazines and dedication folders is also ripe for reform. Let's call it what it is: Extortion."

The basic objection which many Protestants feel toward money-making projects — even such time-honored ones as church suppers and bake sales — is that they tend to become a substitute for generous voluntary giving by the congregation.

DANGER S STRESSED

This danger was stressed in a policy statement adopted last month at the annual convention of the Luther League, youth auxiliary of the United Lutheran Church in America.

"Commercialism within the church is a primary enemy of Christian stewardship," the statement asserted.

"It exploits the name of Christ and his church by causing church members, as well as others, to feel an obligation to support such projects as fairs, bazaars, games of chance, car washes and sales of various kinds because a church organization sponsors them.

"Commercialism tricks people into the satisfaction of thinking they are giving to Christ and his church when they are receiving a product or service in exchange for their money."

The statement concluded with an appeal to Lutherans to rely on "free will giving" to finance their activities.

CAN BE DONE

It can be done. The Southern Baptists have done it for years—and they still manage to pour more money into domestic and foreign missions than any other Protestant denomination. The Presbyterians have doubled their benevolence budget in the past five years — not with profit-making enterprises, but through a vigorous campaign to educate their members to the duties and privileges of Christian giving.

One typical U. S. congregation that has relied entirely on voluntary giving for the past several years is the Westport Presbyterian Church of Kansas City, Mo. Its pastor, the Rev. Stuart M. Patterson, says that the results of this policy "have been good in every respect."

Not only has Westport managed to meet its own local expenses without trouble. It has also increased its giving to the larger work of the church, in the nation and the world, by several thousand dollars a year.

Urgency Seen In Adventist's Mission Work

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Seventh Day Adventists are Christians in a hurry.

They believe that the second coming of Christ is imminent. So they feel a sense of urgency Lord's work, particularly his command to preach the gospel to all nations.

This sense of urgency explains certain statistics that have baffled and embarrassed other Protestant bodies. For example:

With 291,000 members, the Adventists are 26th in size among U. S. Protestant denominations. But they rank first by a wide margin in the size of their missionary effort. Today they have more than 2,000 missionaries at work in 185 countries.

They also rank first, year after year, in giving. Most of them practice income, before taxes, to work of the church. Their total contributions last year averaged out to $212 for every man, woman and child. This compared with per capita giving of $56 for U.S. church members as a whole.

Adventists belong to the fundamentalist wing of Protestantism which believes in literal interpretation of the Bible. In fact, they go beyond many other fundamentalists in regarding the laws and prophecies of the Old Testament as being as fully applicable to modern Christians as the New Testament.

That is why they observe the seventh day of the week—the traditional Jewish Sabbath from sundown Friday to sundown Saturday—as a day of worship, instead of the Christian Sunday.

Their reading of biblical prophecies, specially those found in the apocalyptic books of Daniel and Revelations, convinces them that the time is near for Christ to return to earth in the promised "second advent." Exactly how near, they do not profess to know. The church strictly forbids any attempt to set a specific year or date.

The church was formally organized in 1863 at Battle Creek, Mich. It had an initial membership of about 3,500. Today, less than a century later, there are thriving Seventh Day Adventist Churches on every continent, with a total world membership of more than 1,100,000.

Mrs. Ellen White, who wrote books, articles and pamphlets about the group, was a strong believer in health, and this emphasis has become part of the Adventist heritage. The first Adventist medical institution was the famed Battle Creek Sanitarium. The denomination now operates 197 hospitals, sanitariums and clinics around the world.

Adventists are forbidden, on grounds of health, to use alcohol, tobacco, tea or coffee. They are urged to stick to a simple vegetarian diet, avoiding meats, hot spices and rich desserts. But vegetarianism is not a "test" of membership.

The church also frowns on movies and dancing, which it regards as unwholesome influences on young people. Adventist girls may use cosmetics in moderation, but they are advised that jewelry is "a display of pride and vanity" and a waste of money that should be used in the work of the kingdom.

Although their hopes are vividly fixed on another world, Adventists take very seriously Jesus' example of ministering to human suffering in this one. In addition to their globe - circling network of medical institutions, they carry on one of the largest welfare programs ever undertaken by a private agency. Last year, more than 6,000,000 indigent people received food, clothing or other help from Seventh Day Adventist welfare workers.

MY ANSWER
by Billy Graham

QUESTION: How can we know what is right and what is wrong? There are so many conflicting ideas, and one becomes confused. Is there really any rule to go by? K. L.

ANSWER: The Bible says: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the teaching, whether it be of God." I think before one can know what is right and wrong, he must first align himself with God. Only then, is he in a position to do right.

J. Wilbur Chapman once said, "The rule that governs my life is this: "Anything that dims my vision of Christ, or takes away my taste for Bible study, or cramps my prayer life, or makes Christian work difficult, is wrong for me, and I must, as a Christian, turn away from it."

When I have a problem of deciding right from wrong I always give it three tests. First, I give it the common - sense test, and ask if it is reasonable. Then, I give it the prayer - test. I ask God if it is good and edifying. Then, I give it the Scripture test. I see if the Bible has anything to say for or against it. Then, I may add a fourth: the conscience-test. But the most important thing is to follow Jesus' suggestion: "If any man "do his will" he shall know . . . whether it be of God or not."

REV. PAUL RAGLAND

West Monroe Church Will Hold Revival

The Rev. Paul Ragland of Crossett, Ark. will be the evangelist for the revival at Emmanuel Baptist Church of West Monroe beginning Monday night, and continuing through Sept. 20. Rev. Ragland is well known throughout his native state, according to Rev. Cecil Avery, pastor at the church.

The music will be under the direction of Donald McGough, music director for the First Baptist Church of Columbia, La., assisted at the piano by Miss Delores Lindsey of West Monroe.

Emmanuel Baptist Church is located near the west end of Wellerman Road. Services are scheduled for each night at 7:30.

REV. DONALD WADDELL

Ridge Avenue Church Sets Reception

The Ridge Avenue Baptist Church of West Monroe will give a reception for Rev. Donald Waddell the new minister of education today from 3 to 5 p.m. in the educational building of the church.

Rev. Waddell is the first full time minister of education the church has ever had. He is from Beaumont, Texas and a graduate of Hardin - Simmons University and the New Orleans Seminary. Luther Burney will remain with the church as minister of music.

Break Ground For Convent, Church Here

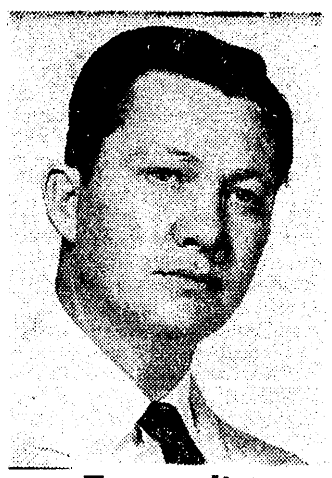
Ground - breaking ceremonies for Jesus the Good Shepherd Catholic School, church, rectory and convent, Monroe, will be held today at 4 p.m. on the ten acre site location just off the north tip of loop road on the corner of Emerson St. and Good Shepherd Lane.

According to Father Dave P. Dabria, pastor, church and city officials will be present. R. C. Spars, chairman of the church's finance committee, will be the master of ceremonies. The new north Monroe Catholic parish was approved by the Most Rev. Charles P. Greco, bishop of Alexandria June 20th, 1959. The parish has been holding its services and Sunday masses at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Oliver Road. There are approximately 70 Catholic families in the parish, with an average attendance of 350 persons at mass on Sundays.

On September 3rd, 1959, a contract agreement was signed between the congregation of the new parish and Don A. Baxter & Son, Sicily Island, for the building of the elementary school, the church, rectory and convent for a price of $225,697. The drawings and specifications were prepared by Herbert H. and Jr., Monroe, who will also supervise the construction.

Work upon the buildings will begin at once and the buildings will be completed by August, 1960. The Daughters of the Cross of St. Matthew's School, Monroe and St. Vincent's Academy, Shreveport, will staff the grade school which will formally open next fall.

The buildings will be of contemporary design. The rectory and convent will be of brick veneer, the rectory containing eight rooms or two priests, the convent fourteen rooms for five nuns. The church, which will later serve as 365-seat auditorium, will be of brick, interior and exterior.



Evangelist

The Rev. Turner Davis Jr., has resigned as pastor of the Southside Baptist Church in Monroe because of ill health. He is now engaged in evangelistic work and will broadcast messages over a local radio station and other stations in the south.

Superintendents of West Point Military Academy were confined to the Corps of Engineers from its beginning in 1802 until 1866 when it was opened to the entire Army.

MRS. F. A. BROWN

Baptist Group Lists Honors At Reception

The Women's Missionary Union of the Trenton Baptist Association honored Mrs. F. A. Brown Sr., at a tea held Thursday evening at the Ridge Avenue Baptist Church in view of her work as president of the missionary group.

Mrs. Brown has served for six years as president of the missionary union. During that time, she led the activities of women in 23 churches of the association who did not have missionary societies in their own churches.

Offerings to missions increased under Mrs. Brown's leadership the last year the scholarship goal was realized, enabling the Trenton Association to be eligible to make such an award to a worthy student in the area.

Other activities taken up under her leadership include the establishment of a library, purchase and distribution of Bibles at Angola State Prison, contributions to the Baptist Student Center at Northeast and the arrangements for outstanding speakers in the missionary field to appear at association meetings.

Protestants Sound Alarm On Fund Issue

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

American Protestants, who have long scolded their Roman Catholic brethren for raising money through raffles and bingo games, have lately discovered a beam in their own eye.

They are getting concerned about the prevalence of "commercialism" in Protestant fund-raising activities.

The Christian Century Magazine, which is always pricking the Protestant conscience in its sore spots, was one of first to raise the alarm.

"One need not travel far in American Protestantism," the Century declared in a recent editorial, "to find money-raising schemes that approximate the Roman Catholic Church's exploitation of games of chance, which we deplore and protest.

COMPARED WITH LAS VEGAS

"Thousands of Protestant church bazaars, carnivals and 'summer fairs' are slightly more respectable than Las Vegas.

"The practice of wringing 'advertising' dollars from merchants, particularly from those who are not members of the churches in question, to finance church bulletins and magazines and dedication folders is also ripe for reform. Let's call it what it is: Extortion."

The basic objection which many Protestants feel toward money-making projects — even such time-honored ones as church suppers and bake sales — is that they tend to become a substitute for generous voluntary giving by the congregation.

DANGER S STRESSED

This danger was stressed in a policy statement adopted last month at the annual convention of the Luther League, youth auxiliary of the United Lutheran Church in America.

"Commercialism within the church is a primary enemy of Christian stewardship," the statement asserted.

"It exploits the name of Christ and his church by causing church members, as well as others, to feel an obligation to support such projects as fairs, bazaars, games of chance, car washes and sales of various kinds because a church organization sponsors them.

"Commercialism tricks people into the satisfaction of thinking they are giving to Christ and his church when they are receiving a product or service in exchange for their money."

The statement concluded with an appeal to Lutherans to rely on "free will giving" to finance their activities.

CAN BE DONE

It can be done. The Southern Baptists have done it for years—and they still manage to pour more money into domestic and foreign missions than any other Protestant denomination. The Presbyterians have doubled their benevolence budget in the past five years — not with profit-making enterprises, but through a vigorous campaign to educate their members to the duties and privileges of Christian giving.

One typical U. S. congregation that has relied entirely on voluntary giving for the past several years is the Westport Presbyterian Church of Kansas City, Mo. Its pastor, the Rev. Stuart M. Patterson, says that the results of this policy "have been good in every respect."

Not only has Westport managed to meet its own local expenses without trouble. It has also increased its giving to the larger work of the church, in the nation and the world, by several thousand dollars a year.

Urgency Seen In Adventist's Mission Work

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Seventh Day Adventists are Christians in a hurry.

They believe that the second coming of Christ is imminent. So they feel a sense of urgency Lord's work, particularly his command to preach the gospel to all nations.

This sense of urgency explains certain statistics that have baffled and embarrassed other Protestant bodies. For example:

With 291,000 members, the Adventists are 26th in size among U. S. Protestant denominations. But they rank first by a wide margin in the size of their missionary effort. Today they have more than 2,000 missionaries at work in 185 countries.

They also rank first, year after year, in giving. Most of them practice income, before takes, to work of the church. Their total contributions last year averaged out to $212 for every man, woman and child. This compared with per capita giving of $56 for U.S. church members as a whole.

Adventists belong to the fundamentalist wing of Protestantism which believes in literal interpretation of the Bible. In fact, they go beyond many other fundamentalists in regarding the laws and prophecies of the Old Testament as being as fully applicable to modern Christians as the New Testament.

That is why they observe the seventh day of the week—the traditional Jewish Sabbath from sundown Friday to sundown Saturday—as a day of worship, instead of the Christian Sunday.

Their reading of biblical prophecies, specially those found in the apocalyptic books of Daniel and Revelations, convinces them that the time is near for Christ to return to earth in the promised "second advent." Exactly how near, they do not profess to know. The church strictly forbids any attempt to set a specific year or date.

The church was formally organized in 1863 at Battle Creek, Mich. It had an initial membership of about 3,500. Today, less than a century later, there are thriving Seventh Day Adventist Churches on every continent, with a total world membership of more than 1,100,000.

Mrs. Ellen White, who wrote books, articles and pamphlets about the group, was a strong believer in health, and this emphasis has become part of the Adventist heritage. The first Adventist medical institution was the famed Battle Creek Sanitarium. The denomination now operates 197 hospitals, sanitariums and clinics around the world.

Adventists are forbidden, on grounds of health, to use alcohol, tobacco, tea or coffee. They are urged to stick to a simple vegetarian diet, avoiding meats, hot spices and rich desserts. But vegetarianism is not a "test" of membership.

The church also frowns on movies and dancing, which it regards as unwholesome influences on young people. Adventist girls may use cosmetics in moderation, but they are advised that jewelry is "a display of pride and vanity" and a waste of money that should be used in the work of the kingdom.

Although their hopes are vividly fixed on another world, Adventists take very seriously Jesus' example of ministering to human suffering in this one. In addition to their globe-circling network of medical institutions, they carry on one of the largest welfare programs ever undertaken by a private agency. Last year, more than 6,000,000 indigent people received food, clothing or other help from Seventh Day Adventist welfare workers.

MY ANSWER

by Billy Graham

QUESTION: How can we know what is right and what is wrong? There are so many conflicting ideas, and one becomes confused. Is there really any rule to go by? K. L.

ANSWER: The Bible says: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the teaching, whether it be of God." I think before one can know what is right and wrong, he must first align himself with God. Only then, is he in a position to do right.

J. Wilbur Chapman once said, "The rule that governs my life is this: "Anything that dims my vision of Christ, or takes away my taste for Bible study, or cramps my prayer life, or makes Christian work difficult, is wrong for me, and I must, as a Christian, turn away from it."

When I have a problem of deciding right from wrong I always give it three tests. First, I give it the common-sense test, and ask if it is reasonable. Then, I give it the prayer-test. I ask God if it is good and edifying. Then, I give it the Scripture test. I see if the Bible has anything to say for or against it. Then, I may add a fourth: the conscience-test. But the most important thing is to follow Jesus' suggestion: "If any man "do his will" he shall know . . . whether it be of God or not."

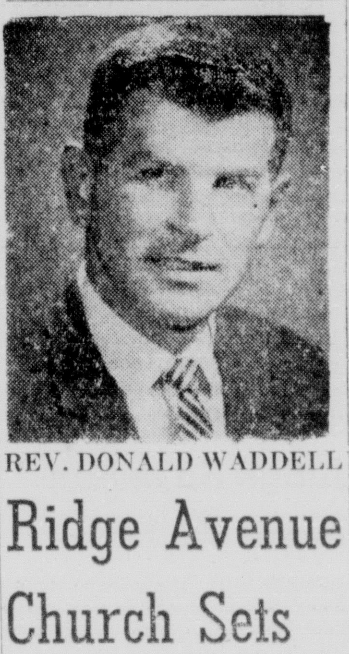
REV. PAUL RAGLAND

West Monroe Church Will Hold Revival

The Rev. Paul Ragland of Crossett, Ark. will be the evangelist for the revival at Emmanuel Baptist Church of West Monroe beginning Monday night, and continuing through Sept. 20. Rev. Ragland is well known throughout his native state, according to Rev. Cecil Avery, pastor at the church.

The music will be under the direction of Donald McGough, music director for the First Baptist Church of Columbia, La., assisted at the piano by Miss Delores Lindsey of West Monroe.

Emmanuel Baptist Church is located near the west end of Wellerman Road. Services are scheduled for each night at 7:30.



REV. DONALD WADDELL

Ridge Avenue Church Sets Reception

The Ridge Avenue Baptist Church of West Monroe will give a reception for Rev. Donald Waddell the new minister of education today from 3 to 5 p.m. in the educational building of the church.

Rev. Waddell is the first full time minister of education the church has ever had. He is from Beaumont, Texas and a graduate of Hardin - Simmons University and the New Orleans Seminary. Luther Burney will remain with the church as minister of music.

Break Ground For Convent, Church Here

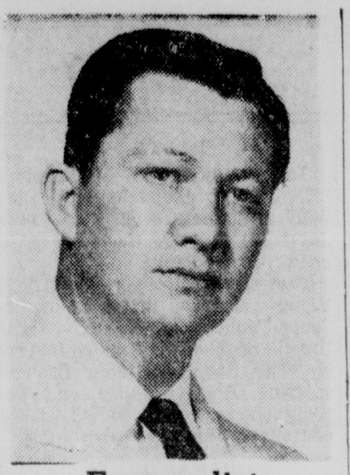
Ground - breaking ceremonies for Jesus the Good Shepherd Catholic School, church, rectory and convent, Monroe, will be held today at 4 p.m. on the ten acre site location just off the north tip of loop road on the corner of Emerson St. and Good Shepherd Lane.

According to Father Dave P. Dabria, pastor, church and city officials will be present. R. C. Spars, chairman of the church's finance committee, will be the master of ceremonies. The new north Monroe Catholic parish was approved by the Most Rev. Charles P. Greco, bishop of Alexandria June 20th, 195_. The parish has been holding its services and Sunday masses at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Oliver Road. There are approximately 220 Catholic families in the parish, with an average attendance of 350 persons at mass on Sundays.

On September 3rd, 1959, a contract agreement was signed between the congregation of the new parish and Don A. Baxter & Son, Sicily Island, for the building of the elementary school, the church, rectory and convent for a price of $225,697. The drawings and specifications were prepared by Herbert H. and, Jr., Monroe, who will also supervise the construction.

Work upon the buildings will begin at once and the buildings will be completed by August, 1960. The Daughters of the Cross of St. Matthew's School, Monroe and St. Vincent's Academy, Shreveport, will staff the grade school which will formally open next fall.

The buildings will be of contemporary design. The rectory and convent will be of brick veneer, the rectory containing eight rooms or two priests, the convent fourteen rooms for five nuns. The church, which will later serve as 365-seat auditorium, will be of brick, interior and exterior.



Evangelist

The Rev. Turner Davis Jr., has resigned as pastor of the Southside Baptist Church in Monroe because of ill health. He is now engaged in evangelistic work and will broadcast messages over a local radio station and other stations in the south.

Superintendents of West Point Military Academy were confined to the Corps of Engineers from its beginning in 1802 until 1866 when it was opened to the entire Army.

NEW YORK (UPI)—There is a sort of electricity in the air in the Lunt-Fontanne theater these days. Rehearsals of "The Sound of Music" are in progress.

There simply must be sparks flying when you have a combination that consists of Mary Martin as the star, Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein as the songwriters, Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse as the librettists Leland Hayward, Richard Halliday and Rodgers and Hammerstein as producers.

"That first day was one I won't forget," Rodgers said. "After the morning preliminaries and the lunch break, I came back to the theater all set to go right to work with the cast on the songs. But there they were, all lined up expectantly hoping to hear the entire score for the first time. I didn't have the heart to disappoint them.

"So Mary sang and I played and Patricia Neway chimed in with one of her songs that she had never seen before, holding a sheet of paper with the lyrics in one hand and the music sheet in the other."

Miss Neway, a fine opera singer was a rather late addition to the cast, and Rodgers used her to explain why it isn't practical for even such pros as Rodgers and Hammerstein to go into rehearsal with an inflexible script and score.

"We didn't know when we were writing the show that we were going to have that splendid voice available," Rodgers said. "Fortunately, when we got her, we were in a position to rearrange matters to accommodate it.

"But in any event we keep rewriting through rehearsals and the tryout weeks on any show we do. Songs come and go and sometimes come back. Not in wholesale lots, you understand, but in spots here and there that we think can stand improvement."

"The Sound of Music" will be the ninth Rodgers-Hammerstein musical in a collaboration that started 16 years ago with "Oklahoma!" Oddly enough, it is also the 37th new Broadway show in the career of each. Both had their first work on Broadway in 1920, with Hammerstein beating Rodgers in by six months.

"This is the quickest job we have done," Rodgers said. "Usually we take a couple of years. Of course, Oscar didn't have to work on the libretto in this case, so we didn't have quite so much to do. We started on it late last year after our 'Flower Drum Song' opened here.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI)—The contenders for the 1960 Miss America crown Saturday chose Hawaii's perky little Gordean Leilehua Lee, who is working her way through college dancing the hula, as "Miss Congeniality".

Parents Give Girl Consent On Operation

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Nineteen-year-old Charlene Butts has won her parents' consent for a tumor operation, a hospital executive said Saturday.

Physicians said she would lose her eyesight and possibly her life if a tumor on the pituitary gland at the base of her brain was not removed. Her father, Charles Butts of Oswego, Kan., objected, saying she did not need an operation.

Dr. Vernon Wilson, acting dean of the University of Kansas Medical Center, said Mr. and Mrs. Butts finally gave their oral consent. The parents are expected at the center Monday to give their permission in writing. The operation is set for Tuesday.

Miss Butts, claiming she has already lost about 40 per cent of her sight, petitioned a court to give her the rights of majority so that she could have the operation without her parents' agreement.

Later she filed a suit asking that the court appoint a guardian for her to accomplish the same purpose. It is expected that both suits now will be withdrawn.

Miss Butts, an office worker in Kansas City, Kan., was admitted to the center Sept. 4 for further diagnosis. Dr. Wilson said the original X-ray diagnosis was confirmed.

Dr. Wilson said specialists are optimistic over the chances of a successful operation but that they cannot tell whether full vision can be restored.

The young woman's attorneys, Emil C. Anderson Jr., and his wife, Dolly Anderson, took her to Oswego Sept. 3 for a reunion with her parents. Next day she entered the center.

Judge Says Son Drew $20 Fine

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — It seems that the speeding fine given New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's son here was $20 — not $10.

Phoning the Portland Evening Express Saturday to report the error, trial Justice Grover C. Alexander said:

"I've been getting calls like this all day: 'You fined my husband $20 and Rockefeller gets off with $10.'

"It isn't so. I fined him just the same as everyone else—$20." Michael, 21, the governor's youngest son, got his fine Friday for doing 80 m.p.h. on the Maine Turnpike, where the limit is 70.

National Home Week Kicks Off In New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — National Home Week was officially opened Saturday from New Orleans with ceremonies at City Hall.

Commenting on the home building industry, Mitnick predicted the price of homes would go up, probably in the next 30 days. He urged the people to buy now.

Mitnick blamed the expected rise on increasing land costs, a predicted hike in interest rates on FHA - insured loans and rising costs of materials.

When the Parade of Homes gets under way Sunday the New Orleans area will have 60 model dwellings in three sub divisions open for inspection.

Parents Give Girl Consent On Operation

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Nineteen-year-old Charlene Butts has won her parents' consent for a tumor operation, a hospital executive said Saturday.

Physicians said she would lose her eyesight and possibly her life if a tumor on the pituitary gland at the base of her brain was not removed. Her father, Charles Butts of Oswego, Kan., objected, saying she did not need an operation.

Dr. Vernon Wilson, acting dean of the University of Kansas Medical Center, said Mr. and Mrs. Butts finally gave their oral consent. The parents are expected at the center Monday to give their permission in writing. The operation is set for Tuesday.

Miss Butts, claiming she has already lost about 40 per cent of her sight, petitioned a court to give her the rights of majority so that she could have the operation without her parents' agreement.

Later she filed a suit asking that the court appoint a guardian for her to accomplish the same purpose. It is expected that both suits now will be withdrawn.

Miss Butts, an office worker in Kansas City, Kan., was admitted to the center Sept. 4 for further diagnosis. Dr. Wilson said the original X-ray diagnosis was confirmed.

Dr. Wilson said specialists are optimistic over the chances of a successful operation but that they cannot tell whether full vision can be restored.

The young woman's attorneys, Emil C. Anderson Jr., and his wife, Dolly Anderson, took her to Oswego Sept. 3 for a reunion with her parents. Next day she entered the center.

Judge Says Son Drew $20 Fine

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — It seems that the speeding fine given New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's son here was $20 — not $10.

Phoning the Portland Evening Express Saturday to report the error, trial Justice Grover C. Alexander said:

"I've been getting calls like this all day: 'You fined my husband $20 and Rockefeller gets off with $10.'

"It isn't so. I fined him just the same as everyone else—$20." Michael, 21, the governor's youngest son, got his fine Friday for doing 80 m.p.h. on the Maine Turnpike, where the limit is 70.

National Home Week Kicks Off In New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — National Home Week was officially opened Saturday from New Orleans with ceremonies at City Hall.

Commenting on the home building industry, Mitnick predicted the price of homes would go up, probably in the next 30 days. He urged the people to buy now.

Mitnick blamed the expected rise on increasing land costs, a predicted hike in interest rates on FHA - insured loans and rising costs of materials.

When the Parade of Homes gets under way Sunday the New Orleans area will have 60 model dwellings in three sub divisions open for inspection.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

USELESS WORRY

Worry is a health hazard because it affects the circulatory glandular, and nervous systems. Dr. Charles Mayo once said he never knew a man who died from overwork but he knew many who died from doubt and apprehension. In addition, life is shortened by fear.

Tension is essential to living. It keeps us on guard when our safety well - being, happiness, or self esteem are threatened. In this respect anxiety is normal and can be expected from time to time. No one enjoys tension but it's here to stay.

On the other hand, be on guard when these emotional upsets occur too often, persist, or interfere with everyday living Most of these troublesome reactions concern minor problems and small disappointments. It is surprising how often we worry about something that never happens.

Those bothered most are men and women who are unsatisfied with the ordinary pleasures of life; they are always looking for something out of this world. These people are suspicious and do not get along with others. The majority suffer from self-doubt.

Most worries can be banished by talking them over with someone. It is best to get to the source of trouble. Give in or apologize when wrong instead of acting like a defiant, frustrated child. Go easy with criticism of others; concentrate on their good points and help develop them. Giving the other fellow a break often makes things easier for you.

Those in the habit of responding to frustration by anger should discipline themselves to wait 24 hours before retaliating. Meanwhile, work it off by doing something physical When tension at the office or plant becomes unbearable, consider what is happening. Unload the unimportant duties and then tackle the more important problems one at a time.

Dr. Van Dellen will send a list of books on mental hygiene, if stamped, addressed envelope accompanies request.

I'M MISQUOTED

F. S. writes: Someone said you were against exercise except walking. Is this a correct statement?

REPLY

No. In my opinion, everyone ought to exercise, within the limits of his physical condition. A young, healthy person should remain active as long as possible in noncompetitive sports such as golf, swimming, tennis, and hiking. It is better for the oldster to avoid strenuous exercise. For him, walking is excellent. What I object to is a 45 year old man who suddenly decides to become a week-end athlete. Perhaps this is what you had in mind.

CANCER RADIATION

Mrs. M. writes: Years ago, when I was a practicing nurse, radium was used freely in cancer. But now you hear only about X-ray. Is radium out of date?

REPLY

No, but it is getting strong competition from high voltage X-ray and radioactive isotopes, including the cobalt bomb.

GURGLING FROM LUNGS

W. P. writes: What causes bubbles in the lungs?

REPLY

The bubbles represent frothy sputum and serum that originate in the lungs. They usually stem from pneumonia or congestion from heart trouble.

HARD WATER

S. L. writes: Can drinking hard water for a number of years cause calcium deposits in the joints?

REPLY

No. The majority of chemicals in hard water are not absorbed.

DAMMED TUBES

L. M. writes: What would cause blocked eustachian tubes, lasting five months?

REPLY

Swelling due to infection.

Apparel Sales Brisk For Week In Many Cities

Children's, juniors' and college departments all shared in the sales upkick enjoyed by department and specialty stores in many cities, a Dun & Bradstreet Inc. survey showed. Dresses, skirts, bulky sweathers and boys' apparel topped the lst of best sellers.

Liberal discounts on outgoing 1959 models spurred new car sales in some cities but failed to attract buyers in areas hit by the steel strike.

Many retailers benefitted from an extra shopping day. Business in the same week last year was shortened by the Labor Day holiday.

Retail trade around the country for the week ended Wednesday was estimated by Dun & Bradstreet at from 2 to 6 per cent higher than a year ago.

FOUR-DAY AFFAIR

Bastrop Cotton Festival Nears

BASTROP (Special) — Cotton Festival and Fair days are near again and all eyes will soon be turned to the big fairgrounds east of Bastrop where the four-day series of events are scheduled to be held, according to John Blanchard, president of the event.

The first event on the slate is the prince and princess contest, scheduled for Sept. 22 in the Bastrop High school auditorium. Following up the first day of activities is a big "Colored Day parade and fashion show slated Wednesday, Sept. 23."

Layton Stephenson, chairman of the beauty pageant, said yesterday that contestants will register Wednesday, Sept. 23 between 9 and 11 a.m. A luncheon is slated at noon, and a special buffet Wednesday night. Thursday, Sept. 24, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, contestants will take part in a big downtown parade, and Thursday night final judging will be held at the Bastrop High auditorium.

SCHEDULED

Horse show performances are scheduled for Friday, Sept. 25 with three big performances coming up Saturday, Sept. 26. Dale Robertson, well-known movie and television star will be on hand for each of the performances Friday and Saturday.

In the meantime, Bastrop merchants are beginning to dress their windows with cotton displays and streets are being decorated for the event.

According to Blanchard, the livestock portion of the fair will be greatly enlarged this year with outstanding cattlemen throughout the area slated to exhibit their animals.

Blanchard pointed out that the North Louisiana Cotton Festival and Fair is designed to serve as a mirror of progress, reflecting the uses of cotton and cotton products in this delta area. "Through exhibits attention is focused on the effect of the product in our daily lives," he said.

Continuing the president said that the participation of area farmers, businessmen, bankers, and professional people is welcomed to aid in making this sixth annual North Louisiana Cotton Festival and Fair the most successful in history.

"Any success in the promotion of cotton as a cash crop and in its manufactured products accomplished by this yearly observance will encourage a greater production in future years of this show," he added.

Youth Gets Solitary For Crime Wave

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) —A 16-year-old boy who admitted a long string of crimes was sentenced Friday to 45 days of solitary confinement on a bread and water diet.

In addition he was placed on five years probation by a judge who is the father of nine children and who warned the youth he faced 15 years imprisonment if he broke probation.

Circuit Judge Alfonso A. Magnotta, who declared "it is high time we attempt to institute new ideas in punishment," meted out the unusual penalty to Richard Lee Babic. He also summoned the boy's parents to the bench and sternly lectured them to "amend your ways of living and look after your home."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Peter Babic, who have four other children, work. Judge Magnotta suggested one of them give up work and told them they were "partly responsible" for their son's crimes.

Richard, over whom Juvenile authorities waived jurisdiction, was convicted of breaking and entering at night. He admitted at least five other break-ins, three auto thefts, three larcenies from cars and an attempted break-in. When arrested he was on parole from juvenile court.

He will serve his 45 days in the Calhoun County Jail. Judge Magnotta ordered that he be allowed no visitors, except a clergyman, an attorney or a physician, and be allowed no reading material except religious literature and the Bible. He specifically added: "No comic books."

How To Keep Well

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

USELESS WORRY

Worry is a health hazard because it affects the circulatory glandular, and nervous systems. Dr. Charles Mayo once said he never knew a man who died from overwork but he knew many who died from doubt and apprehension. In addition, life is shortened by fear.

Tension is essential to living. It keeps us on guard when our safety well - being, happiness, or self esteem are threatened. In this respect anxiety is normal and can be expected from time to time. No one enjoys tension but it's here to stay.

On the other hand, be on guard when these emotional upsets occur too often, persist, or interfere with everyday living Most of these troublesome reactions concern minor problems and small disappointments. It is surprising how often we worry about something that never happens.

Those bothered most are men and women who are unsatisfied with the ordinary pleasures of life; they are always looking for something out of this world. These people are suspicious and do not get along with others. The majority suffer from self-doubt.

Most worries can be banished by talking them over with someone. It is best to get to the source of trouble. Give in or apologize when wrong instead of acting like a defiant, frustrated child. Go easy with criticism of others; concentrate on their good points and help develop them. Giving the other fellow a break often makes things easier for you.

Those in the habit of responding to frustration by anger should discipline themselves to wait 24 hours before retaliating. Meanwhile, work it off by doing something physical. When tension at the office or plant becomes unbearable, consider what is happening. Unload the unimportant duties and then tackle the more important problems one at a time.

Dr. Van Dellen will send a list of books on mental hygiene, if stamped, addressed envelope accompanies request.

I'M MISQUOTED

F. S. writes: Someone said you were against exercise except walking. Is this a correct statement?

REPLY

No. In my opinion, everyone ought to exercise, within the limits of his physical condition. A young, healthy person should remain active as long as possible in noncompetitive sports such as golf, swimming, tennis, and hiking. It is better for the oldster to avoid strenuous exercise. For him, walking is excellent. What I object to is a 45 year old man who suddenly decides to become a week-end athlete. Perhaps this is what you had in mind.

CANCER RADIATION

Mrs. M. writes: Years ago, when I was a practicing nurse, radium was used freely in cancer. But now you hear only about X-ray. Is radium out of date?

REPLY

No, but it is getting strong competition from high voltage X-ray and radioactive isotopes, including the cobalt bomb.

GURGLING FROM LUNGS

W. P. writes: What causes bubbles in the lungs?

REPLY

The bubbles represent frothy sputum and serum that originate in the lungs. They usually stem from pneumonia or congestion from heart trouble.

HARD WATER

S. L. writes: Can drinking hard water for a number of years cause calcium deposits in the joints?

REPLY

No. The majority of chemicals in hard water are not absorbed.

DAMMED TUBES

L. M. writes: What would cause blocked eustachian tubes, lasting five months?

REPLY

Swelling due to infection.

Apparel Sales Brisk For Week In Many Cities

Children's, juniors' and college departments all shared in the sales upkick enjoyed by department and specialty stores in many cities, a Dun & Bradstreet Inc. survey showed. Dresses, skirts, bulky sweathers and boys' apparel topped the 1st of best sellers.

Liberal discounts on outgoing 1959 models spurred new car sales in some cities but failed to attract buyers in areas hit by the steel strike.

Many retailers benefitted from an extra shopping day. Business in the same week last year was shortened by the Labor Day holiday.

Retail trade around the country for the week ended Wednesday was estimated by Dun & Bradstreet at from 2 to 6 per cent higher than a year ago.

Youth Gets Solitary For Crime Wave

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) —A 16-year-old boy who admitted a long string of crimes was sentenced Friday to 45 days of solitary confinement on a bread and water diet.

He will serve his 45 days in the Calhoun County Jail. Judge Magnotta ordered that he be allowed no visitors, except a clergyman, an attorney or a physician, and be allowed no reading material except religious literature and the Bible. He specifically added: "No comic books."

PAUL MARTIN
LOOKS 'EM OVER

Football is with us again. Meaning that most lauded and most browbeaten of human beings, the football coach, is again putting in long hours, fighting ulcers, eating aspirins, and wondering what it takes to be able to enjoy a decent night's sleep.

The feelings of the football coach have been brought before us more emphatically the past few days, mainly because Paul Dietzel, the LSU boss, has started a series of stories for United Press International; because Bob Henderson did such a good job of lauding Ruston High's 'Hoss' Garrett on the start of his 26th season as a coach; and because we heard Neville High's Bill Ruple speak before a meeting of the Kiwanis Club of West Monroe a little over a week ago.

Dietzel's stories have already been in print, the same as Henderson's report on Garrett, but only the Kiwanians attending that noon luncheon know what Ruple had to say.

We know the Kiwanians were impressed, just as we were. Many left that meeting with new ideas about football, the importance of which has been stressed in the Dietzel series.

Ruple, whose trademark is a countryboy drawl with the wisdom and humor of a Will Rogers, had been expected to deal in his usual wit and give out with some of the "crying" he has been accused of emitting as good as any of the meaning masters.

But this Neville grid boss, who learned a lot about football from ex-Louisiana Tech coach Eddie McLane and a whole lot more from experience, showed a serious touch. He shed not a tear about his "pore 'lil boys,' but did a magnificent job of emphasizing victory, the need of a coach to understand the individualities who are his athletes, and the need of youth to work rather than idle away his time.

About victory: Ruple declared his boys are taught to win, that victory is the goal of every Tiger game. Then he stressed that his boys are taught to be gracious winners and the still harder job of keeping their chins up in defeat.

He likened football to the businesses of many of the Kiwanians hearing him. If the coach doesn't win, he is bankrupt. If the doctor doesn't succeed his patient dies. If the lawyer loses his case, his client goes to jail. It was in such comparisons as this that Ruple instilled the meaning of why a lot of coaches, especially at the bigger schools and colleges, are on the spot unless their athletes are winning, and why teams are urged to fight so hard for victory. The athletes' urge to win fits everybody. It's the goal of all to succeed in life.

About youth and idleness: Ruple hit on a subject on which he'll find lots of support. That the child labor laws are too strict, are as much to blame for many of today's juvenile problems as about anything else you want to mention. Many high school boys capable of playing this bruising game of football that is almost a five-day-a-week business what with these strenuous practice sessions, giving a fast,energy-burning basketball game; or going around three hours in a blazing sun while playing baseball, isn't allowed to jerk soda at the corner drugstore anymore, or at least hold some jobs as simple.

Ruple vows he has boys who beg for work every year. Youth is permitted certain types of work at certain times, but there are a lot of restraints. Idleness, says Ruple, one of the worst things facing youth today. True, youth is usually kept pretty busy during school months, but this nothing-to-do gets in its heaviest licks at juvenile populations during the summer. In fact, the word "juvenile," which is a perfectly good word, has been used so frequently of late in connection with stories of youth violence that respectable youth is beginning to look upon it as a dirty word.

Youth is energy. This energy must be given an outlet. Athletics fills the bill to a great extent, but even this doesn't meet the total need.

About individual athletes: Ruple said a coach must know who he can pat on the back and who can be bawled out in order to get top production. A scolding can't be taken by everybody. A pat on the back makes swelled-heads of others. The coach has to know his boys.

Such was the theory of George Riser when he coached briefly at Ouachita Parish High and carried the Lions to one of their few district championships and on to the first state semi-finals. Few Ouachita team has done better. Even Riser's boys didn't know (until now) that he was working this praise and ridicule business to the hilt. Riser could praise some boys and they'd play harder. Others he could get more from by making them mad under rebuke.

Riser used to write his own pre-game newspaper publicity. Some of them were ditties, lauding some second stringer, or telling about an important tackle or block missed by some "star." The sports editor, aware of Riser's methods of getting the most from his boys, once had to ask him to ease up on the boys after a committee of Lionettes had called to complain about how their heroes were being belittled. But Riser's methods certainly got results.

A Monroe team had never been able to do much with anything from Shreveport. The Lions turned the trick under Riser in their march to their first district crown in 1942. Riser, back home, laughs and tells us: "I wish you had been hidden somewhere on the bus coming back, and could have heard those boys. They were happy. They'd accomplished what should have been impossible. One in the back was yelling, 'wonder what that sports writer is going to say about us now'."

Needless to say, Riser eased up on his newspaper reports. His boys got nothing but praise the rest of the way. Maybe if he had stuck to his prescribed pattern all the way Ouachita would have beaten Jennings in their state semifinal that year.

It certainly pays a coach to know his boys. Some, however, are not as fortunate as others. Many have big student bodies and lots of talent to choose from. Others have to struggle to find enough boys to fill the available uniforms even when they're having to use boys so ignorant of the fundamentals of the game that they think football is some form of stone bruise.

National Race Still Sizzling

Burdette Records No. 20 On Homer

By DAVE O'HARA

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Braves ran their dramatic winning string to seven games in their hot pursuit of the National League pennant by defeating the Cincinnati Reds 4-3 Saturday on Eddie Mathews' two-run homer in the eighth.

Mathews' 37th blast boosted fidgety Lew Burdette to his 20th victory of the campaign and moved the Braves into a tie for second with idle Los Angeles. The Braves and Dodgers are a game back of San Francisco, which beat Philadelphia 9-1.

The Braves collected only five hits off right-hander Don Newcombe but put together two for a run in the fourth and two more for another tally in the sixth. That set the stage for Mathews' sensational clutch drive high over the right field fence.

Newcombe's only walk of the game started his downfall. Pinch hitter Mickey Vernon worked Big Newk for a pass to lead off the eighth. Burdette bunted down the first base line, but pinch runner Johnny DeMerit was forced at second. Billy Bruton fouled to the catcher for the second out and Mathews then teed off on the first pitch.

The Braves appeared headed for defeat after the Reds pushed across a seventh inning run set up by an Alphonse-Gaston act in the outfield.

Willie Jones led off with a single and Eddie Kasko followed with a routine fly to left center. However, rookie Lee May and Bruton got their signals crossed and allowed the ball to fall at their feet for a hit. A sacrifice bunt by Newcombe and a sacrifice fly by Johnny Temple nudged the Reds into a 3-2 lead.

Mathews, hitless in 15 straight times at bat, broke out of his slump with a double off the right field wall and came around on Hank Aaron's single to center in the fourth. In the sixth a double to right by Burdette, an infield out and Aaron's single to deep short accounted for the second run.

The Reds picked up a run in the third on singles by Kasko and Newcombe and Temple's sacrifice fly to left. They added their second tally in the fourth on doubles by Jerry Lynch and Ed Bailey.

Burdette, who has lost 14, struck out five and didn't walk a man. Newcombe struck out eight, all swinging, in losing his eighth game against 13 victories.

Red Schoendienst, back with the Braves after a bout with tuberculosis, made his first appearance at second base since the World Series last fall. He took over in the ninth after Felix Mantilla had been lifted for pinch hitter Vernon. Schoendienst had one chance in the field, an easy grounder ending the game.

Boston Beats Kansas City By 4-3 Count

BOSTON (AP) — Boston rookie Jerry Casale survived a shaky seventh inning and defeated Kansas City 4-3 Saturday for the fourth straight time.

The big, raw-boned right-hander from Brooklyn drew support for his seven-hitter from Jackie Jensen's two-run double in the first inning and two more tallies on singles by Gary Geiger and Gene Stephens in the fifth.

Casale, 4-0 against the A's, registered his 11th American League triumph of 1959. The loss was the 14th in the past 15 starts for Kansas City.

The other two Sox runs came on a double by Pumpsie Green down the right field line, Geiger's single and stolen base, a walk to Pete Runnels and Stephens' safety.

Jones Cops 20th As Phils Fall, 9-1

By ALAN CLINE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— Sam Jones overcame early wildness Saturday and picked up his 20th victory — a 9-1 decision over Philadelphia. That gave his San Francisco Giants a one-game National League lead over Milwaukee and idle Los Angeles.

Giant power—doubles by Daryl Spencer and Hobie Landrith, Jones' single and Ed Bressoud's triple in the sixth inning and Orlando Cepeda's two-run homer in the seventh—provided more than enough cushion for the 33-year old right-hander.

The Giants gathered 12 hits and were handed 9 walks by hurlers.

Jones, as he has done all season, once again proved the Giants' stopper. San Francisco had lost two straight games and its lead was pared from three games to only one-half before Sam righted them.

Sam held the Phils to four singles. Two of them in the fourth by Harry Anderson and George Anderson, with an infield out sandwiched between, produced the Phils' run.

It took the 6-foot Negro, who pitches with a toothpick in his mouth, five National League seasons to hit the 20-victory mark. He's lost 12. Previously he played briefly for Cleveland of the American League in 1951-52.

This season he defeated the defending champion Milwaukee Braves five times and saved two other games against them. He whipped runner-up Los Angeles three times, including two shutouts.

One of his Dodger triumphs was a one-hitter June 30 in the Los Angeles Coliseum that many thought should have been a no-hitter. Some contended a bobbled infield tap off Junior Gilliam's bat in the eighth should have been scored an error instead of a safety.

Big Sam pitched a no-hitter in 1955 against Pittsburgh when he was with the Chicago Cubs.

The Giants got him this season in a trade from the St. Louis Cardinals.

Humberto Robinson, used mostly in relief this season, was the victim of the Giants' bat power, taking his fourth loss against one victory. Cepeda's home run was his 26th and his first since Aug. 19. It brought in Willie Mays, who had singled.

Jones figured also in the first Giant run in the fifth. He sacrificed pinch hitter Jose Pagan to second. Bressoud singled Pagan to third and Willie McCovey's long fly to the left center field fence brought in Jose.

McCovey went hitless for the second game in a row and only the fifth game in 39 since he came to the Giants July 30 from Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League. He hit into a double play and grounded out twice, in three official at bats.

A near capacity crowd of 21,133 saw the Giants tally their three final runs in the eighth. Mays singled in two runs and pitcher Dick Farrell forced in the other with a bases loaded walk to Willie Kirkland.

SHREVEPORTERS

Slack, Bundrick Captain Techmen

RUSTON, La. (Special) — Two Shreveport area gridders who will be leading the Louisiana Tech football machine this fall are co-captains J. W. Slack, Bossier City, and end Billy Bundrick, Shreveport. Both are senior students.

Filling a left halfback slot, Slack is a 5-11, 190 pounder who was recognized for his outstanding work in 1958 by being placed on the All - Gulf States Conference second team. A good man to count on when yardage is needed, the speedy runner gained a total of 329 yards on 69 carries last season for a very good 4.74 average per try.

Bundrick tips the scales at 200 and stands 5-11 and has played end for the Canines since his arrival on the Tech campus in 1957. He was bothered much of last season by injuries.

Graduated by Bossier City High School in 1955, Slack played football there under Coach Bill Maxwell and was captain of the team. He was selected to All - District and All - City grid teams. At Bossier he also lettered in track and baseball. A physical education major, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Slack, 206 Waller Street, Bossier City.

Bundrick is a 1956 graduate of Byrd High School, Shreveport, where he saw grid duty under Coach J. C. Rowan. Before leaving Byrd he captured All-District, All- State and All - Southern football honors and was named to the All - District baseball team. The son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bundrick, 223 East Herndon, Shreveport, he is in the School of Arts and Sciences.

Co - captains Slack and Bundrick and their Tech teammates will raise the curtain on the 1959 season when they travel to Beaumont, Tex., for a contest Saturday night (Sept. 19) with Lamar Tech of the Lone Star Conference. First action for the Techsters on the home field is slated for Sept. 26 when the Bulldogs will take on the Arkansas State College Indians.

DALLAS OPEN

Boros Fires 66 To Take Lead

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

DALLAS (AP) — Julius Boros, the stolid Hungarian from Mid Pines, N.C., carved a 4-under-par [illegible] to move into first place at the halfway mark in the $2[illegible],000 Dallas Open.

Boros ripped over the 6,744-yard Oak Cliff Country Club course on a birdie binge and used only 30 putts to take the lead by two strokes. He had 134 for 36 holes.

Boros shot a 68 in the opening round to tie six others for third place.

Bo Wininger of Odessa, Tex., who deadlocked with Bob Rosburg of Palo Alto, Calif., the PGA champion, for the lead after 18 holes, took a 69 and fell into a second-place tie at 136 with the onrushing Earl Stewart, who had a 6-under-par 64—just one stroke over the course record.

Rosburg went to pieces. He was all over the course, putted badly, hit into a creek for a double bogey 6 on 10 and wound up with a 76 that dropped him far down the list.

Sam Snead, the two-time defending champion, had another over-par round. His 71 with a 74 in the opening round put Snead at 145. He made the cut-off for the final 36 holes.

Boros, the 39-year-old former National Open champion who hasn't won a tournament since 1958 and only $200 since July, was drilling to the green like a rifle and had few long putts to make. On the one he did have—a 40-footer—he rammed it down for a birdie. He had five birdies and one bogey—the latter coming when he hit into some trees on 15.

The red-haired Stewart, once a star member of the PGA tour but now a home professional who plays few tournaments, also was putting well, sinking them from six inches up to 40 feet.

The only touring golfers who failed to make the cutoff were Fred Hawkins of El Paso, Joe Conrad of San Antonio and Hillman Robbins of Memphis, Tenn. All three had 151—missing by one stroke.

Golf Crown To Johnstone

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Mrs. Ann Casey Johnstone, playing "nice and steady golf", defeated Sherry Wheeler 8 and 7 Saturday to win the 29th annual Trans - Mississippi Golf Tournament.

The match closed out on the 29th hole of a scheduled 36-hole match when Miss Wheeler, 18-year old coed from Glasgow, Ky., conceded a putt.

Mrs. Johnstone, a golfing veteran from Mason City, Iowa, led 4-up at the end of the first 18 holes and carded a 37-37—74, one of the best rounds in the week-long tourney at Hot Springs Country Club. Miss Wheeler's first-round score was 41-41—82.

"I'm very, very thrilled and it's been a long tough haul," Mrs. Johnstone said after her victory. "I played nice, steady golf and—for me—my putting was exceptional."

The putts included a 20-footer on the 17th hole where she went 4-up on a par 3.

Miss Wheeler, an Arizona State student who upset National women's Amateur champion Barbara McIntire of Lake Park, Fla., in the semifinals, had trouble with her short putts all the way.

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Louisiana State University Saturday held a game - type scrimmage which left Coach Paul Dietzel unhappy.

"It was a very poor exhibition of football," Dietzel said of the display by the nation's top-ranked team. "We were very, very poor. We have a lot of work to do before the Rice game."

A hard rain caused unsteady footing and a lot of fumbles. The White team, the starting unit, contributed most of the fumbles.

COACHES AREN'T HAPPY

Stiff Slates Commonplace In 12-Team SEC Tussle

By MERCER BAILEY

ATLANTA (AP) — Odds are staggering that not one of the 12 Southeastern Conference football coaches is completely happy with his team's lineup of opponents this fall.

But for sheer, unadulterated gridiron danger, you'd have to look a long time before finding stiffer challenges than those confronting Mississippi State, Kentucky, Tulane and Tennessee.

Considering only conference games and rating teams by preseason polls, Mississippi State seems to have the roughest road. State has been assigned to the No. 11 spot in the 12-team league. But coach Wade Walker's underdog Maroons must knock heads with five of the six top-ranked outfits — Florida and Tennessee as starter and a deadly trio of finishers, Auburn, Louisiana State and Mississippi.

Kentucky's Wildcats also will play five of the top six — the big three, LSU, Auburn and Ole Miss, plus Georgia Tech and Tennessee. Kentucky, though, is rated considerably stronger than Mississippi State so the 'Cats have a better chance of not being skinned alive.

To those who remember the soft Tennessee schedule of bygone days, the Vols' 1959 task must seem truly Herculean. Coach Bowden Wyatt's lads will meet eight conference foes, more than any other SEC team. Among the eight are the big three plus Georgia Tech, ranked fourth in some quarters, and traditional rivals Kentucky and Vanderbilt.

Tulane's task, like Mississippi States, seems near hopeless on the surface. The Greenies, tabbed as usual to finish last, will clash with four of the top six SEC members — LSU, Ole Miss, Florida and Tech. Despite this, coach Andy Pilney manages to maintain an optimistic outlook, pointing to greater depth and size than usual at Tulane.

Aside from those four teams with the frightening schedules, Florida is the only other team which must face at least two of the big three teams. The Gators, tabbed for a fifth place berth, will meet LSU and Auburn on successive Saturdays.

Auburn, hoping to stretch its unbeaten record to 34 games, is the only SEC member that plays neither of the big three. But to keep the unbeaten string stretching, the Plainsmen must get past Tech, Florida and Tennessee, all first division picks.

Although on pre-season estimates, Mississippi's schedule is no killer, if the Rebels win the conference championship no one can say they came through the back door. The Rebels, who get a runaround from some of their SEC brethern when schedule-making time comes, will tackle LSU Oct. 31 and two weeks later square off with Tennessee.

LSU must play two first division choices in addition to Ole Miss. They are Florida, a team the Tigers barely beat last year, and Tennessee.

Alabama seems to have the most neatly arranged schedule. The Crimson Tide has at least one not-so-powerful foe, or an open date, ahead of every tough opponent. But coach Paul (Bear) Bryant probably wishes he had a warmup game Sept. 19 instead of tackling Georgia.

Georgia, incidentally, must get up a strong head of steam to hurdle its last three opponents — Florida, Auburn and arch - rival Tech. October shapes up as the most testing month in conference play for Vanderbilt and Tech. They meet strong foes on successive weekends — Vandy vs Ole Miss and Florida, Tech vs Tennessee and Auburn.

National Race Still Sizzling

PAUL MARTIN LOOKS 'EM OVER

Football is with us again. Meaning that most lauded and most browbeaten of human beings, the football coach, is again putting in long hours, fighting ulcers, eating aspirins, and wondering what it takes to be able to enjoy a decent night's sleep.

The feelings of the football coach have been brought before us more emphatically the past few days, mainly because Paul Dietzel, the LSU boss, has started a series of stories for United Press International; because Bob Henderson did such a good job of lauding Ruston High's 'Hoss' Garrett on the start of his 26th season as a coach; and because we heard Neville High's Bill Ruple speak before a meeting of the Kiwanis Club of West Monroe a little over a week ago.

Dietzel's stories have already been in print, the same as Henderson's report on Garrett, but only the Kiwanians attending that noon luncheon know what Ruple had to say.

We know the Kiwanians were impressed, just as we were. Many left that meeting with new ideas about football, the importance of which has been stressed in the Dietzel series.

Ruple, whose trademark is a countryboy drawl with the wisdom and humor of a Will Rogers, had been expected to deal in his usual wit and give out with some of the "crying" he has been accused of emitting as good as any of the meaning masters.

But this Neville grid boss, who learned a lot about football from ex-Louisiana Tech coach Eddie McLane and a whole lot more from experience, showed a serious touch. He shed not a tear about his "pore 'lil boys,' but did a magnificent job of emphasizing victory, the need of a coach to understand the individualities who are his athletes, and the need of youth to work rather than idle away his time.

About victory: Ruple declared his boys are taught to win, that victory is the goal of every Tiger game. Then he stressed that his boys are taught to be gracious winners and the still harder job of keeping their chins up in defeat.

He likened football to the businesses of many of the Kiwanians hearing him. If the coach doesn't win, he is bankrupt. If the doctor doesn't succeed his patient dies. If the lawyer loses his case, his client goes to jail. It was in such comparisons as this that Ruple instilled the meaning of why a lot of coaches, especially at the bigger schools and colleges, are on the spot unless their athletes are winning, and why teams are urged to fight so hard for victory. The athletes' urge to win fits everybody. It's the goal of all to succeed in life.

About youth and idleness: Ruple hit on a subject on which he'll find lots of support. That the child labor laws are too strict, are as much to blame for many of today's juvenile problems as about anything else you want to mention. Many high school boys capable of playing this bruising game of football that is almost a five-day-a-week business what with these strenuous practice sessions, giving a fast, energy-burning basketball game; or going around three hours in a blazing sun while playing baseball, isn't allowed to jerk soda at the corner drugstore anymore, or at least hold some jobs as simple.

Ruple vows he has boys who beg for work every year. Youth is permitted certain types of work at certain times, but there are a lot of restraints. Idleness, says Ruple, one of the worst things facing youth today. True, youth is usually kept pretty busy during school months, but this nothing-to-do gets in its heaviest licks at juvenile populations during the summer. In fact, the word "juvenile," which is a perfectly good word, has been used so frequently of late in connection with stories of youth violence that respectable youth is beginning to look upon it as a dirty word.

Youth is energy. This energy must be given an outlet. Athletics fills the bill to a great extent, but even this doesn't meet the total need.

About individual athletes: Ruple said a coach must know who he can pat on the back and who can be bawled out in order to get top production. A scolding can't be taken by everybody. A pat on the back makes swelled-heads of others. The coach has to know his boys.

Such was the theory of George Riser when he coached briefly at Ouachita Parish High and carried the Lions to one of their few district championships and on to the first state semi-finals. Few Ouachita team has done better. Even Riser's boys didn't know (until now) that he was working this praise and ridicule business to the hilt. Riser could praise some boys and they'd play harder. Others he could get more from by making them mad under rebuke.

Riser used to write his own pre-game newspaper publicity. Some of them were dillies, lauding some second stringer, or telling about an important tackle or block missed by some "star." The sports editor, aware of Riser's methods of getting the most from his boys, once had to ask him to ease up on the boys after a committee of Lionettes had called to complain about how their heroes were being belittled. But Riser's methods certainly got results.

A Monroe team had never been able to do much with anything from Shreveport. The Lions turned the trick under Riser in their march to their first district crown in 1942. Riser, back home, laughs and tells us: "I wish you had been hidden somewhere on the bus coming back, and could have heard those boys. They were happy. They'd accomplished what should have been impossible. One in the back was yelling, 'wonder what that sports writer is going to say about us now'."

Needless to say, Riser eased up on his newspaper reports. His boys got nothing but praise the rest of the way. Maybe if he had stuck to his prescribed pattern all the way Ouachita would have beaten Jennings in their state semifinal that year.

It certainly pays a coach to know his boys. Some, however, are not as fortunate as others. Many have big student bodies and lots of talent to choose from. Others have to struggle to find enough boys to fill the available uniforms even when they're having to use boys so ignorant of the fundamentals of the game that they think football is some form of stone bruise.

Burdette Records No. 20 On Homer

By DAVE O'HARA

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Braves ran their dramatic winning string to seven games in their hot pursuit of the National League pennant by defeating the Cincinnati Reds 4-3 Saturday on Eddie Mathews' two-run homer in the eighth.

Mathews' 37th blast boosted fidgety Lew Burdette to his 20th victory of the campaign and moved the Braves into a tie for second with idle Los Angeles. The Braves and Dodgers are a game back of San Francisco, which beat Philadelphia 9-1.

The Braves collected only five hits off right-hander Don Newcombe but put together two for a run in the fourth and two more for another tally in the sixth. That set the stage for Mathews' sensational clutch drive high over the right field fence.

Newcombe's only walk of the game started his downfall. Pinch hitter Mickey Vernon worked Big Newk for a pass to lead off the eighth, Burdette bunted down the first base line, but pinch runner Johnny DeMerit was forced at second. Billy Bruton fouled to the catcher for the second out and Mathews then teed off on the first pitch.

The Braves appeared headed for defeat after the Reds pushed across a seventh inning run set up by an Alphonse-Gaston act in the outfield.

Willie Jones led off with a single and Eddie Kasko followed with a routine fly to left center. However, rookie Lee May and Bruton got their signals crossed and allowed the ball to fall at their feet for a hit. A sacrifice bunt by Newcombe and a sacrifice fly by Johnny Temple nudged the Reds into a 3-2 lead.

Mathews, hitless in 15 straight times at bat, broke out of his slump with a double off the right field wall and came around on Hank Aaron's single to center in the fourth. In the sixth a double to right by Burdette, an infield out and Aaron's single to deep short accounted for the second run.

The Reds picked up a run in the third on singles by Kasko and Newcombe and Temple's sacrifice fly to left. They added their second tally in the fourth on doubles by Jerry Lynch and Ed Bailey.

Burdette, who has lost 14, struck out five and didn't walk a man. Newcombe struck out eight, all swinging, in losing his eighth game against 13 victories.

Red Schoendienst, back with the Braves after a bout with tuberculosis, made his first appearance at second base since the World Series last fall. He took over in the ninth after Felix Mantilla had been lifted for pinch hitter Vernon. Schoendienst had one chance in the field, an easy grounder ending the game.

Boston Beats Kansas City By 4-3 Count

BOSTON (AP) — Boston rookie Jerry Casale survived a shaky seventh inning and defeated Kansas City 4-3 Saturday for the fourth straight time.

The big, raw-boned right-hander from Brooklyn drew support for his seven-hitter from Jackie Jensen's two-run double in the first inning and two more tallies on singles by Gary Geiger and Gene Stephens in the fifth.

Casale, 4-0 against the A's, registered his 11th American League triumph of 1959. The loss was the 14th in the past 15 starts for Kansas City.

The other two Sox runs came on a double by Pumpsie Green down the right field line, Geiger's single and stolen base, a walk to Pete Runnels and Stephens' safety.

Boros Fires 66 To Take Lead

By HAROLD V. FATLIFF

DALLAS (AP) — Julius Boros, the stoical Hungarian from Mid Pines, N.C., carved a 4-under-par [illegible] Saturday to move into first place at the halfway mark in the $2[illegible],000 Dallas Open.

Boros ripped over the 6,744-yard Oak Cliff Country Club course on a birdie binge and used only 30 putts to take the lead by two strokes. He had 134 for 36 holes.

Boros shot a 68 in the opening round to tie six others for third place.

Bo Wininger of Odessa, Tex., who deadlocked with Bob Rosburg of Palo Alto, Calif., the PGA champion, for the lead after 18 holes, took a 69 and fell into a second-place tie at 136 with the on-rushing [illegible] Stewart, who had a 6-under-par 64—just one stroke over the course record.

Rosburg went to pieces. He was all over the course, putted badly, hit into a creek for a double bogety 6 on 10 and wound up with a 76 that dropped him far down the list.

Sam Snead, the two-time defending champion, had another over-par round. His 71 with a 74 in the opening round put Snead at 145. He made the cut-off for the final 36 holes.

Boros, the 39-year-old former National Open champion who hasn't won a tournament since 1958 and only $200 since July, was drilling to the green like a rifle and had few long putts to make. On the one he did have—a 40-footer—he rammed it down for a birdie. He had five birdies and one bogey—the latter coming when he hit into some trees on 15.

The red-haired Stewart, once a star member of the PGA tour but now a home professional who plays few tournaments, also was putting well, sinking them from six inches up to 40 feet.

The only touring golfers who failed to make the cutoff were Fred Hawkins of El Paso, Joe Conrad of San Antonio and Hillman Robbins of Memphis, Tenn. All three had 151—missing by one stroke.

Slack, Bundrick Captain Techmen

RUSTON, La. (Special) — Two Shreveport area gridders who will be leading the Louisiana Tech football machine this fall are co-captains J. W. Slack, Bossier City, and end Billy Bundrick, Shreveport. Both are senior students.

Filling a left halfback slot, Slack is a 5-11, 190 pounder who was recognized for his outstanding work in 1958 by being placed on the All - Gulf States Conference second team. A good man to count on when yardage is needed, the speedy runner gained a total of 329 yards on 69 carries last season for a very good 4.74 average per try.

Bundrick tips the scales at 200 and stands 5-11 and has played end for the Canines since his arrival on the Tech campus in 1957. He was bothered much of last season by injuries.

Graduated by Bossier City High School in 1955, Slack played football there under Coach Bill Maxwell and was captain of the team. He was selected to All - District and All - City grid teams. At Bossier he also lettered in track and baseball. A physical education major, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Slack, 206 Waller Street, Bossier City.

Bundrick is a 1956 graduate of Byrd High School, Shreveport, where he saw grid duty under Coach J. C. Rowan. Before leaving Byrd he captured All-District, All- State and All - Southern football honors and was named to the All - District baseball team. The son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bundrick, 223 East Herndon, Shreveport, he is in the School of Arts and Sciences.

Co - captains Slack and Bundrick and their Tech teammates will raise the curtain on the 1959 season when they travel to Beaumont, Tex., for a contest Saturday night (Sept. 19) with Lamar Tech of the Lone Star Conference. First action for the Techsters on the home field is slated for Sept. 26 when the Bulldogs will take on the Arkansas State College Indians.

By ALAN CLINE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— Sam Jones overcame early wildness Saturday and picked up his 20th victory — a 9-1 decision over Philadelphia. That gave his San Francisco Giants a one-game National League lead over Milwaukee and idle Los Angeles.

Giant power—doubles by Daryl Spencer and Hobie Landrith, Jones' single and Ed Bressoud's triple in the sixth inning and Orlando Cepeda's two-run homer in the seventh—provided more than enough cushion for the 33-year old right-hander.

The Giants gathered 12 hits and were handed 9 walks by hurlers.

Jones, as he has done all season, once again proved the Giants' stopper. San Francisco had lost two straight games and its lead was pared from three games to only one-half before Sam righted them.

Sam held the Phils to four singles. Two of them in the fourth by Harry Anderson and George Anderson, with an infield out sandwiched between, produced the Phils' run.

It took the 6-foot Negro, who pitches with a toothpick in his mouth, five National League seasons to hit the 20-victory mark. He's lost 12. Previously he played briefly for Cleveland of the American League in 1951-52.

This season he defeated the defending champion Milwaukee Braves five times and saved two other games against them. He whipped runner-up Los Angeles three times, including two shutouts.

One of his Dodger triumphs was a one-hitter June 30 in the Los Angeles Coliseum that many thought should have been a no-hitter. Some contended a bobbled infield tap off Junior Gilliam's bat in the eighth should have been scored an error instead of a safety.

Big Sam pitched a no-hitter in 1955 against Pittsburgh when he was with the Chicago Cubs.

The Giants got him this season in a trade from the St. Louis Cardinals.

Humberto Robinson, used mostly in relief this season, was the victim of the Giants' bat power, taking his fourth loss against one victory. Cepeda's home run was his 26th and his first since Aug. 19. It brought in Willie Mays, who had singled.

Jones figured also in the first Giant run in the fifth. He sacrificed pinch hitter Jose Pagan to second. Bressoud singled Pagan to third and Willie McCovey's long fly to the left center field fence brought in Jose.

McCovey went hitless for the second game in a row and only the fifth game in 39 since he came to the Giants July 30 from Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League. He hit into a double play and grounded out twice, in three official at bats.

A near capacity crowd of 21,133 saw the Giants tally their three final runs in the eighth. Mays singled in two runs and pitcher Dick Farrell forced in the other with a bases loaded walk to Willie Kirkland.

Jacksonville State Defeats La. College, 21-7

JACKSONVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Jacksonville State spotted Louisiana College a seven-point lead, then roared back Saturday night for a season-opening 21-7 victory.

Tommy Whitecloud rammed over from the three to end a 64-yard Louisiana drive in the second quarter. Joe Powell kicked the extra point.

Then Jacksonville drove back from 54 with Bill Nicholls running the last nine. Harold Shankles passed to Nicholls and the half-time score was 8-7.

Jacksonville wrapped it up with two fourth - quarter touchdowns after stopping a LC drive at the four in the third period.

Jacksonville dominated the statistics with 16 first downs to nine, 229 yards rushing to 86 and 70 passing to 30.

Northwestern, S. F. Austin Tie

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Stephen F. Austin of Texas and Northwestern State College settled for a 14-14 deadlock Saturday night.

NSC rallied in the final three minutes to tie it up when Ralph Conrad smashed across from the one and Brooksye Gregg converted.

Dale Hoffpauir opened scoring in the first period for NSC with a seven-yard run. Gregg kicked the extra point.

SFA tied it on a three-yard pass from Harold Stephens to Ottis Hargett and Boyce Shelton converted. In the third quarter, Austin went ahead on a two-yard plunge by Ken Davis and Rural Smith's extra point kick.

Enos Claims Players Won't Heed Stengel

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP)—Veteran outfielder Enos Slaughter said Saturday some New York Yankee players "think Casey Stengel is in his second childhood."

Slaughter, interviewed by Leo Durocher before a nationally televised game between Milwaukee and Cincinnati Saturday, said, "A lot of Yankee players would be better off if they would listen more carefully to Stengel."

The Yankees sold the 43-year-old Slaughter to Milwaukee Friday.

He blamed the demise of the Yankees this year to poor pitching and the early-season injury of first baseman Bill Skowron.

"It just wasn't the Yankees' year," he said.

In New York, Stengel said the loss of the American League pennant was not the fault of any individual.

"We did all wrong things this year," he explained, than added, "I never comment on men who have just been traded."

Whitey Ford, southpaw pitcher who was Slaughter's roommate on Yankee road trips, said, "It is hard to believe that he said such a thing but if he did, he is entirely wrong. The old guys who have been around here 15 years are set in their ways of doing things but if they don't listen to the manager, they go. We all listen to Stengel."

Elston Howard, catcher-infielder-outfielder, and Hank Bauer, veteran outfielder, only smiled when told of Slaughter's remarks, then Howard suggested, "On the first day after a man is traded, he says things."

Grambling To Use Wing-T In Dallas Tilt

GRAMBLING La. (Special) — Grambling College opens its 10-game football frolic against Bishop in Dallas Saturday with a brand new formation and an uneasy feeling.

Bishop, noticeably improved after posting an 8-2 record last fall, is wholly self - sufficient and Coach Dwight Fisher seems ready to continue his reputation as an upsetter of illogical persistence.

Coach Eddie Robinson, a strict conformist as regards coachly attitudes, has labeled the team as inordinately dangerous.

"Fisher has fanned renewed interest in football at Bishop and the school is looking forward to this game with great expectations," Robinson said.

"We think our ball club is better, but the boys must play aggressive football to support this argument," the coach added.

The Tigers will use a brand new wing - T attack. The singleing hasn't been junked completely, but Robinson emphasized that it is no longer the basis of his attack.

Saturday's challenge will determine if the new gimmick has the proper acid - alkaline balance.

Rebels, Lions In 'B' Contest Monday Night

Ouachita's "B" team opens its season 7:30 Monday night at Ouachita Stadium against West Monroe.

The Lions and Rebels meet in a freshman game Tuesday evening, this one to be played at West Monroe Stadium.

Layne Paces Steelers Past Cards, 21-13

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Veteran Bobby Layne rifled touchdown passes of 51 and 41 yards Friday night to pilot the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 21-13 decision over the Chicago Cardinals in a National Football League exhibition game before a Busch Stadium crowd of 30,055.

The victory avenged an earlier 21-10 Steeler loss to the ardinals, who had previously won four of five games, and rubbed the lustre off a 99-yard touchdown run by the losers' Bobby Joe Conrad.

Layne, the durable Texan with 12 NFL seasons under his belt, connected with Gary Glick in the first quarter on a touchdown play good for 51 yards and with Ray Mathews in the fourth for 41 yards and the Steelers' final score.

The Cardinals tied the score at 7-7 in the second period as quarterback King Hill raced 18 yards with a lateral from Ken Hall. Jerry Norton set up the score by stealing a Layne pass and running the ball back 43 yards.

Tom Tracy sent the Steelers ahead for keeps in the third, bulling over from 1 foot out after tearing off 19 yards on a quick opener through the middle.

Conrad took the ensuing kickoff on his own 1 and threaded his way through the entire Steeler defense. But his bid for the conversion and a 14-14 tie was blocked by Ray Fisher.

Tiger Starting Lineup

COLAVITO BELTS 41ST

Bell's Sharp Three-Hitter Lifts Tribe Over Solons, 7-2

WASHINGTON (AP) — Young Garry Bell's magnificent 3-hit pitching eased Cleveland to a 7-2 victory over Washington Saturday and helped the Indians stay four full games behind the pace-setting Chicago White Sox.

However, time is running out on Cleveland, as the White Sox also won, defeating Baltimore, 6-1, and the Sox' magic number now is nine. Chicago has 11 games left to play, and Cleveland 13. Any combination of nine White Sox victories or Indian defeats will clinch the pennant for Chicago.

Jim Lemon's 30th home run in the seventh was the only solid blow off Bell. It came after a walk to Lenny Green and accounted for the Senators' runs.

Bell enjoyed superior home run support, as both Rocky Colavito and Woody Held hit into the bleachers in a four-run Cleveland sixth.

The four-bagger was Colavito's 41st and sent him one ahead of Washington's Harmon Killebrew, who fanned twice on a hitless afternoon.

Kemmerer, who lived uncomfortably through six innings, was charged with the loss. He was tagged for all seven runs and nine of Cleveland's 10 hits. Hal Griggs and Chuck Stobbs kept the revived Indians pretty well in hand through the last three innings.

Cleveland punched over its first run in the third on Held's single and Chuck Tanner's double. The Indians might have registered in the second but for Russ Nixon's lassitude.

Tito Francona had doubled and gone to third on Colavito's fly. Nixon looped one to deep second which rookie John Schaive dropped. Nixon, expecting the ball to be caught, hardly moved toward first and Schaive threw him out, holding Francona at third. Baxes then flied out.

Bad hops and a muff helped Cleveland to a pair in the fourth. Colavito stretched a single to left a two - bagger when the ball jumped over Lemon's head. With two out, catcher Steve Korcheck dropped Baxes' foul pop near the plate. Saved by the error, Baxes ripped a grounder which skipped over Killebrew for a hit, scoring Colavito.

Held's three-bagger, which Dan Dobbek couldn't hold in right, brought in Baxes with the second unearned run of the inning.

Francona walked opening the sixth and loafed home when Colavito, who previously doubled, crashed a 400-foot homer into the left field bleachers. Nixon beat out a roller to first, and Held powered his homer into the same bleacher section after Baxes struck out.

Cleveland loaded the bases against Griggs in the seventh but couldn't exploit the opportunity as Nixon grounded into a double play.

EXTENDS STREAK

Boyer Paces 6-4 Win Over Bruins

CHICAGO (AP) — Ken Boyer used his 28th homer and a stand up triple to extend his consecutive hitting streak to 29 games Saturday as the St. Louis Cardinals rode rookie Bob Gibson's six-hit pitching to a 6-4 conquest of the Chicago Cubs.

Boyer waited no longer than his first turn at bat to drive losing lefty Art Ceccarelli's third pitch into the left field seats behind a two-out walk to Joe Cunningham to give St. Louis a 2-0 lead.

The Cardinal captain opened the fourth with his triple, a drive into the right field corner. After Gene Oliver popped out and Gene Green was intentionally walked, Boyer scored when Tony Taylor drew an error after failing to make a baseline tag of Oliver on Duke Carmel's grounder.

Thus the 22-year-old Cardinal rookie from New York City received credit for his first major league run batted in. Two innings later Carmel used his first major league hit, a single, to account for a second RBI.

The 23-year-old Gibson, using only fast balls and curves, posted his second major league victory by turning his ninth start into a second route-going performance. Gibson walked four, and fanned 10 along with powering one of the Cardinals' four doubles as St. Louis collected 11 hits off a threesome of Chicago itchers.

Moose Moryn's 13th homer powered three of the Cubs' four runs.

Series Ducats Go On Sale In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Veeck, president of the Chicago White Sox, said Saturday that tickets for World Series games in Comiskey Park will go on sale Monday.

Season ticket holders and old time White Sox fans will come first in the matter of purchasing them.

"We're going to sell them one game at a time," Veeck said, "so as many as possible can see a World Series game. Sixty per cent of the tickets will be allotted to Chicagoans, 20 per cent to the suburbs and surrounding areas, and 20 per cent to out of towners."

Veeck emphasized the tickets for the World Series in Chicago, assuming the White Sox win the American League pennant, will not be sold in four game blocks which has been a series tradition. Instead, they'll be sold for individual games Nos. 1, 2, 6 and 7 slated for Comiskey Park. Games 6 and 7 necessarily are tentatively scheduled, since the Series could be decided in the first four or five games.

Veeck said the distribution plan was arrived at after a study of where the heaviest ticket order originated throughout the season.

Box seat and reserved grandstand ticket holders will be notified by mail how to get their tickets.

Fans should address applications to Post Office Box 5454, Chicago, 77, Illinois. Applications must be postmarked no later than midnight Wednesday, Sept. 16. Not more than two tickets for one game may be ordered by one person.

Ticket prices are $14.40 for a set of two tickets for reserved seats and $20.60 for a set of two for box seats, plus a 30 cent charge per ticket to cover mail and handling costs.

The World Series will open in the American League park Wednesday Sept. 30.

Racing Slated Again Today At Speedway

Racing resumes at Twin City Speedway this afternoon after a layoff of several weeks with most of the area's top drivers expected to take part.

Starting with the time trials at 1:30, a full slate of events in two divisions — stock and modified — will be presented at the half-mile oval off the old Natchitoches road in West Monroe.

Track owner Oliver Cloyd said there would probably be "go cart" races also.

Red Futch, Royce Whitlock, Bobby Shoemaker, H. L. Hale, Henry Williams, Joe Mallard, Jerry Smith and Ellis Palasini of Jackson are expected to participate in the events, Cloyd said.

Suggs, White To Co-Captain Maroon Squad

STARKVILLE, Miss. (UPI) — Walter Suggs, a junior tackle, and Lavalle White, a senior end, were named Saturday as co-captains of the 1959 Mississippi State football team.

Varsity squad members elected them to succeed 1958 co-captains Jack Benson and J. E. Logan, both graduated.

Suggs is five-five, weighs 238 pounds and is 20 years old. His home is Hattiesburg. White, 23, of Meridian, is six-four and weighs 195 pounds. Both were starters last year.

"The squad couldn't have made a better choice," said Coach Wade Walker. "Both White and Suggs are excellent leaders, fine football players and wonderful boys."

OKLAHOMA SECOND

LSU Rated No. 1 Again In Pre-Season Grid Poll

By JACK CLARY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Defending national champion Louisiana State is the choice of the nation's sportswriters and broadcasters to keep its title according to the annual Associated Press pre-season football poll released Sunday.

The Bayou Bengals of Coach Paul Dietzel polled 60 first place votes en route to accumulating 1,440, only 70 ahead of Oklahoma which drew 48 first place votes.

The only other contender was Auburn, which polled 1,047 votes, but only 17 for the top spot. Votes were on a basis of 10 for first place, 9 for second, etc.

Southern Methodist, led by quarterback Don Meredith and the big threat in the Southwest Conference, was fourth with 720, but got only six first place votes. Lambert Trophy winner Army was next with 696 and four nominations for the No. 1 spot.

The final poll of the football season will determine the national champion. It will follow games of Sat., Nov. 28.

Wisconsin, which drew 10 first place votes, was sixth with 645 and Big Ten neighbor Ohio State had 548 and a pair of top nominations. Ohio State was last year's pre-season choice, but finished No. 8.

Mississippi, No. 8, had 546 votes, five for first place, with Iowa, defending Rose Bowl and Big Ten champ, getting ninth with 443 votes, four for first place. Northwestern rounded out the top ten with 441, and six first place votes.

LSU, which barely drew a nod in last year's early poll went through its 1958 season undefeated, won the Sugar Bowl and brings back 31 of 35 lettermen, including All America halfback Billy Cannon and his famous three platoon compatriots of the White team, go team and the Chinese Bandits. The Tigers were first in the last six AP polls last year.

Oklahoma, led by fullback Prentice Gautt and quarterback Bobby Boyd, also were picked in the No. 2 pre-season spot in 1958. They finished No. 5, winning the Big Eight conference and the Orange Bowl.

Auburn, unbeated in its last 24 games and the 1957 national campion, has its defensive giants, guard Zeke Smith, a 1958 All-America, and center Jackie Burkett, to prod LSU for national and Southeastern Conference honors.

Army has 1957 All-America halfback Bob Anderson, a second team selection last year, and lonely end Bill Carpenter as its bulwark while Wisconsin's talented quarterback Dale Hackbart leads 23 lettermen.

Mississippi puts quarterback Bobby Franklin and halfback Charley Flowers in the starring roles. Northwestern has back its talented crew of sophs that upended the Big Ten during mid-season last year, only to shot its bolt from lack of experience.

Ohio State, with All-America end Jim Houston and fullback Bob White, have great potential as do Iowa, which lacks a proven quarterback but has halfbacks Ray Jauch and Bob Jeter, and a stout defense.

HUMPHREY RETURNS

Gatto, Champion Clash Monday

Al Gatto, a masked mauler who prefers to keep his true identity unknown, returns to the B&B Arena Monday night after a two weeks absence to meet state heavyweight champion Chris Belkas in the weekly mat headliner.

Gatto, whose flair for words rivals his wrestling prowess, claims Belkas is no match for him. "Just one shot at the title is all I need to become champion," the masked man promises.

But for the time bing Gatto will have to settle for a non-title match since Chris the Greek will enter the ring with his belt safely tucked away.

The main event is scheduled over a one-hour time limit with two falls to win.

Big Humphrey, the Missouri giant who appeared here last week, tangles with Carlos Mendoza off Mexico City in the second bout which draws semi-final billing. Humphrey, a reproduction of the comic strip character by the same name, used his 300-plus pounds to good advantage in beating Duke Scarbo here last week.

Mendoza learned his mat tactics with a Latin spice and has proved he can mix with the best of 'em—big or middle-sized.

Humphrey and Carlos will wrestle within a 45-minute limit with two falls required to win.

Cook-Dupas Welter Bout Postponed

ALEXANDRIA, La. (Special) — Intermittent showers forced postponement of the Clarence Cook - Ralph Dupas welterweight fight scheduled here last nigrt.

It was announced that Dupas, world's fourth - ranked welter, would take on the unranked Cook of Bastrop here Thursday night at Bringhurst Field.

Rain fell off and on for an hour preceeding the bout at the outdoor arena and a final downpour just at fight time forced promoter Art Visconte to call off the ring program.

Besides the Cook - Dupas bout, Thursday's card will also feature a 10-round heavyweight match between J. D. Marshall and Charley Scott and four - rounders pitting middleweight Henry "Kid" Burton of Monroe against Columbus Marshall and middleweight Walden Henegan against Sherman Roberts, Winnfield.

Southern Assn. Playoffs Set Back By Rain

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Steady showers forced postponement of Saturday night's Birmingham and Mobile baseball game in their best-of-7 series for the Southern Assn. pennant.

It was the second straight delay.

The three games at Mobile now are scheduled for Sunday, Monday night and Tuesday night. A previous conflict over use of the field Monday night was settled.

The teams—each winner of one half of the Southern's split season—are tied at one game each in the playoff.

Enos Claims Players Won't Heed Stengel

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP)—Veteran outfielder Enos Slaughter said Saturday some New York Yankee players "think Casey Stengel is in his second childhood."

Slaughter, interviewed by Leo Durocher before a nationally televised game between Milwaukee and Cincinnati Saturday, said, "A lot of Yankee players would be better off if they would listen more carefully to Stengel."

The Yankees sold the 43-year-old Slaughter to Milwaukee Friday.

He blamed the demise of the Yankees this year to poor pitching and the early-season injury of first baseman Bill Skowron.

"It just wasn't the Yankees' year," he said.

In New York, Stengel said the loss of the American League pennant was not the fault of any individual.

"We did all wrong things this year," he explained, than added, "I never comment on men who have just been traded."

Whitey Ford, southpaw pitcher who was Slaughter's roommate on Yankee road trips, said, "It is hard to believe that he said such a thing but if he did, he is entirely wrong. The old guys who have been around here 15 years are set in their ways of doing things but if they don't listen to the manager, they go. We all listen to Stengel."

Elston Howard, catcher-infielder-outfielder, and Hank Bauer, veteran outfielder, only smiled when told of Slaughter's remarks, then Howard suggested, "On the first day after a man is traded, he says things."

Grambling To Use Wing-T In Dallas Tilt

GRAMBLING La. (Special) — Grambling College opens its 10-game football frolic against Bishop in Dallas Saturday with a brand new formation and an uneasy feeling.

Bishop, noticeably improved after posting an 8-2 record last fall, is wholly self - sufficient and Coach Dwight Fisher seems ready to continue his reputation as an upsetter of illogical persistence.

"Fisher has fanned renewed interest in football at Bishop and the school is looking forward to this game with great expectations," Robinson said.

"We think our ball club is better, but the boys must play aggressive football to support this argument," the coach added.

The Tigers will use a brand new wing - T attack. The single-ing hasn't been junked completely, but Robinson emphasized that it is no longer the basis of his attack.

Saturday's challenge will determine if the new gimmick has the proper acid - alkaline balance.

Rebels, Lions In 'B' Contest Monday Night

Ouachita's "B" team opens its season 7:30 Monday night at Ouachita Stadium against West Monroe.

Layne Paces Steelers Past Cards, 21-13

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Veteran Bobby Layne rifled touchdown passes of 51 and 41 yards Friday night to pilot the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 21-13 decision over the Chicago Cardinals in a National Football League exhibition game before a Busch Stadium crowd of 30,055.

The victory avenged an earlier 21-10 Steeler loss to the ardinals, who had previously won four of five games, and rubbed the lustre off a 99-yard touchdown run by the losers' Bobby Joe Conrad.

Layne, the durable Texan with 12 NFL seasons under his belt, connected with Gary Glick in the first quarter on a touchdown play good for 51 yards and with Ray Mathews in the fourth for 41 yards and the Steelers' final score.

The Cardinals tied the score at 7-7 in the second period as quarterback King Hill raced 18 yards with a lateral from Ken Hall. Jerry Norton set up the score by stealing a Layne pass and running the ball back 43 yards.

Tom Tracy sent the Steelers ahead for keeps in the third, bulling over from 1 foot out after tearing off 19 yards on a quick opener through the middle.

Conrad took the ensuing kickoff on his own 1 and threaded his way through the entire Steeler defense. But his bid for the conversion and a 14-14 tie was blocked by Ray Fisher.

Tiger Starting Lineup

COLAVITO BELTS 41ST

Bell's Sharp Three-Hitter Lifts Tribe Over Solons, 7-2

WASHINGTON (AP) — Young Garry Bell's magnificent 3-hit pitching eased Cleveland to a 7-2 victory over Washington Saturday and helped the Indians stay four full games behind the pace-setting Chicago White Sox.

However, time is running out on Cleveland, as the White Sox also won, defeating Baltimore, 6-1, and the Sox' magic number now is nine. Chicago has 11 games left to play, and Cleveland 13. Any combination of nine White Sox victories or Indian defeats will clinch the pennant for Chicago.

Jim Lemon's 30th home run in the seventh was the only solid blow off Bell. It came after a walk to Lenny Green and accounted for the Senators' runs.

Bell enjoyed superior home run support, as Rocky Colavito and Woody Held hit into the bleachers in a four-run Cleveland sixth.

The four-bagger was Colavito's 41st and sent him one ahead of Washington's Harmon Killebrew, who fanned twice on a hitless afternoon.

Kemmerer, who lived uncomfortably through six innings, was charged with the loss. He was tagged for all seven runs and nine of Cleveland's 10 hits. Hal Griggs and Chuck Stobbs kept the revived Indians pretty well in hand through the last three innings.

Cleveland punched over its first run in the third on Held's single and Chuck Tanner's double. The Indians might have registered in the second but for Russ Nixon's lassitude.

Tito Francona had doubled and gone to third on Colavito's fly. Nixon looped one to deep second which rookie John Schaive dropped. Nixon, expecting the ball to be caught, hardly moved toward first and Schaive threw him out, holding Francona at third. Baxes then flied out.

Bad hops and a muff helped Cleveland to a pair in the fourth. Colavito stretched a single to left a two - bagger when the ball jumped over Lemon's head. With two out, catcher Steve Korcheck dropped Baxes' foul pop near the plate. Saved by the error, Baxes ripped a grounder which skipped over Killebrew for a single, scoring Colavito.

Francona walked opening the sixth and loafed home when Colavito, who previously doubled, crashed a 400-foot homer into the left field bleachers. Nixon beat out a roller to first, and Held powered his homer into the same bleacher section after Baxes struck out.

Cleveland loaded the bases against Griggs in the seventh but couldn't exploit the opportunity as Nixon grounded into a double play.

EXTENDS STREAK

Boyer Paces 6-4 Win Over Bruins

CHICAGO (AP) — Ken Boyer used his 28th homer and a stand up triple to extend his consecutive hitting streak to 29 games Saturday as the St. Louis Cardinals rode rookie Bob Gibson's six-hit pitching to a 6-4 conquest of the Chicago Cubs.

Boyer waited no longer than his first turn at bat to drive losing lefty Art Ceccarelli's third pitch into the left field seats behind a two-out walk to Joe Cunningham to give St. Louis a 2-0 lead.

The Cardinal captain opened the fourth with his triple, a drive into the right field corner. After Gene Oliver popped out and Gene Green was intentionally walked, Boyer scored when Tony Taylor threw an error after failing to make a baseline tag of Oliver on Duke Carmel's grounder.

Thus the 22-year-old Cardinal rookie from New York City received credit for his first major league run batted in. Two innings later Carmel used his first major league hit, a single, to account for a second RBI.

The 23-year-old Gibson, using only fast balls and curves, posted his second major league victory by turning his ninth start into a second route-going performance. Gibson walked four, and fanned 10 along with powering one of the Cardinals' four doubles as St. Louis collected 11 hits off a threesome of Chicago itchers.

Moose Moryn's 13th homer powered three of the Cubs' four runs.

Series Ducats Go On Sale In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Veeck, president of the Chicago White Sox, said Saturday that tickets for World Series games in Comiskey Park will go on sale Monday.

Season ticket holders and old time White Sox fans will come first in the matter of purchasing them.

"We're going to sell them one game at a time," Veeck said, "so as many as possible can see a World Series game. Sixty per cent of the tickets will be allotted to Chicagoans, 20 per cent to the suburbs and surrounding areas, and 20 per cent to out of towners."

Veeck emphasized the tickets for the World Series in Chicago, assuming the White Sox win the American League pennant, will not be sold in four game blocks which has been a series tradition. Instead, they'll be sold for individual games Nos. 1, 2, 6 and 7 slated for Comiskey Park. Games 6 and 7 necessarily are tentatively scheduled, since the Series could be decided in the first four or five games.

Veeck said the distribution plan was arrived at after a study of where the heaviest ticket order originated throughout the season.

Box seat and reserved grandstand ticket holders will be notified by mail how to get their tickets.

Fans should address applications to Post Office Box 5454, Chicago, 77, Illinois. Applications must be postmarked no later than midnight Wednesday, Sept. 16. Not more than two tickets for one game may be ordered by one person.

Ticket prices are $14.40 for a set of two tickets for reserved seats and $20.60 for a set of two for box seats, plus a 30 cent charge per ticket to cover mail and handling costs.

The World Series will open in the American League park Wednesday Sept. 30.

Racing Slated Again Today At Speedway

Racing resumes at Twin City Speedway this afternoon after a layoff of several weeks with most of the area's top drivers expected to take part.

Starting with the time trials at 1:30, a full slate of events in two divisions — stock and modified — will be presented at the half-mile oval off the old Natchitoches road in West Monroe.

Track owner Oliver Cloyd said there would probably be "go cart" races also.

Red Futch, Royce Whitlock, Bobby Shoemaker, H. L. Hale, Henry Williams, Joe Mallard, Jerry Smith and Ellis Palasini of Jackson are expected to participate in the events, Cloyd said.

Suggs, White To Co-Captain Maroon Squad

STARKVILLE, Miss. (UPI) — Walter Suggs, a junior tackle, and Lavalle White, a senior end, were named Saturday as co-captains of the 1959 Mississippi State football team.

Varsity squad members elected them to succeed 1958 co-captains Jack Benson and J. E. Logan, both graduated.

Suggs is five-five, weighs 238 pounds and is 20 years old. His home is Hattiesburg. White, 23, of Meridian, is six-four and weighs 195 pounds. Both were starters last year.

"The squad couldn't have made a better choice," said Coach Wade Walker. "Both White and Suggs are excellent leaders, fine football players and wonderful boys."

J-H COACH

Gilbert Revives Tiger Fortunes

By TOMMY AYRES
Staff Correspondent

JONESBORO, La. — Head football coach Jimmy Gilbert of the Jonesboro-Hodge Tigers gained more victories in 1958 than the school had won the four previous seasons combined. Upon beating Jena Friday night, the Bengals gave their coach his seventh straight victory, including six games last year.

When asked his formula for a successful grid team, the 33-year old, soft spoken mentor smiled and commented, "player attitude plus coaching assistance."

"A coach must install in the boys a good attitude before he can teach them the fundamentals of winning football," Gilbert explained. "A boy may be big, strong, fast and a quick thinker, but without desire he will not make the grade. The things I look for in my players are attitude, intelligence and size, in that order."

Jonesboro has a past history of fine football squads with the record book showing 66 wins, 42 losses, and three ties during the hay-day of former coach Jack Jaggers; who gave the school its' only state championship grid team back in 1945. Jaggers was the Bengal coach from 1944 until 1953.

JHHS entered a dark period in their football history in '54 and '55 winning only four games while losing 17 during those two years. Gilbert is now well on his way in pulling the team out of its nose dive to position that demands respect from opponents.

When Gilbert took over in '56, J-H was at an all-time low in the pigskin parade. Spectator was a word in "Websters Dictionary", moral support was devoted to the luckless fisherman, and drugstore bets were on how many touchdowns the home team would be beaten Friday night.

That first year he attempted to convert a group of boys who had run the single-wing, into a split-T outfit and met with little success winning only one game while losing nine.

His '57 record did not look much better with the books showing a 3-8 slate. "But," added Gilbert, "this was the squad that beat Ruston, that year's AA champion, and lost a six-pointer to the state's top AAA team, Pineville." By topping Ruston, the Tigers gained their first victory at the Bearcats home field since 1953.

Last year the Gilberites came into their own, compiling nine victories against two losses, while gaining an invitation to participate in the Tidelands Bowl at Morgan City. In 1958 the Tigers shutout six of their 11 opponents including AAA teams West Monroe, 7-0, Ouachita 20-0, and Bastrop, 7-0.

Gilbert gives credit to his coaching staff for much of his success. "With the assistants I have this year, and the desire shown by the boys so far, we could be as good as '58, provided we get the breaks and not the injuries."

Eddie Picked Best Time To Break Slump

Mathews, 0 for 15, cracked a double and a game-winning homer in the Milwaukee Braves' 4-3 triumph over Cincinnati.

"It certainly felt good to see them go some place besides right at a fielder," Mathews said. "It was about time for me to connect, don't you think?"

The slugging third baseman picked out the first pitch for both his big drives to right. His 37th homer with one aboard and two out in the eighth lifted Lew Burdette to his 20th victory.

Burdette, who won 20 in 1958 for the first time in his career, shook off the effects of a wicked line drive which struck him high on the pitching arm in the sixth inning.

Ark. State Hopes To Keep Winning

JONESBORO, Ark., (Special)—Coach Hugh (Bones) Taylor is hoping his Arkansas State Indians can take up where they left off last fall as the Redmen open the 1959 season here Saturday night against the always-tough Northeast Louisiana Indians.

State won four of its final five games in 1958, the only loss in that string to the University of Florida. Northeast, on the other hand, hopes it can do just the opposite — start as they did a year ago. The Monroe team won its first six games, then dropped the final three.

Taylor feels he is fairly set on his "two" starting teams.

"We have two clubs that will see equal action," Bones relates. "Both units have been looking good in practice."

The team that is expected to be on the field when they play the National Anthem will have Tom Perkins of Marked Tree and Gilbert Arnold of Little Rock at ends, Frank Smith of Miami and Jerry Arant of Poplar Bluff, Mo., at tackles, Larry Zabrowski of Chesterton, Ind., and Ronald Minshew of Haines City, Fla., at guards, Tommy Davis of Greensboro, Ala., at center, Billy Caldwell of Jonesboro at quarterback, Don Miller of Morrilton and Roy Nelson of Miami at halfbacks, and Allan Stolt of Pocahontas at fullback.

Sharing the billing as starters will be Sam Austin of Bald Knob and Tot Bentley of Honoraville, Ala., at ends, Doug Burgess of Cabool, Mo., and Turk Gibbs of St. Augustine, Fla., at tackles, Marvin Hagaman of Stuttgart and Jack Everett of Lakeland, Fla., at guards, Buddy Murrah of Live Oak, Fla., at center, Bobby Houge of Senatobia, Miss., at quarterback, Earl Ray Michles of Pocahontas and Julius Head of Greenville, Ala., at halfbacks, and either Bill Nalley of Central, S. C., or George Dean of Hayti, Mo., at fullback.

Touch Football Loops To Meet Tuesday Night

City League and High School League touch football teams will meet at the Monroe Recreation Center Tuesday night at 7 o'clock, assistant director James McKay announced last night.

The two loops, composed of six-man squads, will probably begin play next week if enough teams are entered.

The High School League is for boys in high school 18 and under. The City League will be made up of boys and men over 18. No varsity players will be permitted to play in either circuit.

FOOTBALL BEGINS THIS WEEK

Plenty Of Challengers For LSU's National Champs

By BOB HOOBING
Associated Press Sports Write.

Louisiana State will have to turn back challenges from the Big Ten, Oklahoma and two neighbors to repeat as national champion in the college football scramble which begins this weekend.

Coach Johnny Vaught is opening the throttle on offense at Ole' Miss, including a stepped up passing attack. An impressive roster includes quarterback Bobby Franklin, fullback Charlie Flowers, guard Marv Terrell, center Ken Kirk and tackle Robert Khayat.

Additional offensive fireworks also are promised at Auburn, the nation's top defensive club for two seasons. All-America guard Zeke Smith returns, as does second team All-America center Jackie Burkett.

LSU and Paul Dietzel, 1958's coach of the year, will have 31 of the 35 top players who were unbeaten and untied last season and brought the Tigers their first Sugar Bowl victory in five tries. All-America halfback Billy Cannon tops the list of returnees.

Still, the Tigers are no cinch for a repeat title even in their own Southeastern Conference, which includes vengeance-seeking Mississippi and awesome Auburn, a team unbeaten in 24 games.

The Big Ten Conference has four top contenders for the national title which it hasn't held since Ohio State's 1954 success. Since then, Oklahoma has won the championship twice, followed by Auburn and LSU.

Iowa, Wisconsin, Ohio State and Purdue have considerable holdover talent from clubs which lost only one game apiece in '58. In addition, Northwestern is climbing fast, and Michigan State is being revived.

Nobody but Coach Bud Wilkinson publicly predicts anything short of greatness for Oklahoma as long as fullback Prentice Gautt's knee holds up. In Bobby Boyd the Sooners have found a quarterback in their best tradition, and the line again bears the trademark: "Made by Gomer Jones."

LSU could lose its national status to some big, bad Texans even before entering conference play. The Tigers appear on national television against Rice this Saturday, then face Texas Christian, defending Southwest champion, and Baylor in succession.

Elsewhere, Army, Navy, Penn State and Syracuse look like the cream of the Eastern independents while Dartmouth, Penn and Harvard promise to tussle for the Ivy League crown. North Carolina and Clemson, which open against each other, are the favorites for the Atlantic Coast Conference crown.

Texas Christian, Texas and Southern Methodist top the annual Southwest Conference merry-go-round. UCLA and Southern California are tops in the newly formed Far West Five while Oklahoma has the Big Eight pretty much to itself.

North Texas State and Tulsa top the Missouri Valley with West Virginia and Virginia Tech staging another battle for the Southern Conference title. Wyoming is the class of the Skyline loop.

Among the independents, attention will be focused on Notre Dame and Air Force.

The Fighting Irish take on a typically tough schedule under new coach Joe Kuharich. They'll employ a lonesome twosome version of Army's lonely end attack. It will be up to quarterback George Izo to make it click, with the help of end Monte Stickles and halfback Red Mack.

The Air Force, unbeaten last fall, cannot expect a repeat now that the element of surprise is gone. But Ben Martin's gang again should be exciting with Rich Mayo's slingshot arm and Capt. Howard Bronson heading a spirited line.

And don't forget College of the Pacific, with halfback Dick Bass. He was the country's best in total offense, rushing and scoring a year ago.

SECOND UNIT WINS, 6-0

Northeast Holds Intra-Squad Tilt

The Northeast Indians divided into separate tribes yesterday afternoon for an intra - squad tussle and when the pow wow ended the second - string Comanches walked off with a narrow 6-0 victory over the front-line Apaches.

Piloted by assistants Leon Manley and Jim Coats, the second -stringers turned a 41-yard last quarter march into the loan touchdown of the practice session.

With Malcolm Brewer, Bryan, Tex., junior at the helm, the Comanches' aerial attack began to click after the subs downed a punt on the Apache 41. Brewer tossed a ten - yard pass to end Donnie Brunson, Jonesboro freshman, to start the payoff drive.

Five plays later Brewer hit senior end Robert Earle, Lake Providence, with a 12 - yarder for the touchdown. Another pass from Edwin Thomas, Webb, Miss., to Charlie Boyd for the extra point was incomplete.

George Luffey and Bob DeMoss' first unit Apaches dominated the statistics, gaining a total net yardage of 158 to 127 for the Comanches. But the Comanche defense, led by guards Carrol Brown, Warren, Ark., sophomore, and Larry Rambin, Shreveport freshman, and Earle at end halted several drives deep in their own territory.

Joe Thrailkill, a 180-pound halfback from Ardmore, Okla., who is counted on to be one of Northeast's big guns in the 1959 campaign, turned in several fine runs. Veteran Bob Randel, one of six quarterbacks on the club, showed up well at that position.

The contest was the first game-type workout for the Indians who travel to Jonesboro, Ark., Saturday night for the opener against Arkansas State College. Head coach Jack Rowan and his staff plan to use the scrimmage session as a guide rule for ironing out mistakes before the opener.

MAGIC NUMBER NINE

Wynn Chalks Up 20th Win As Pale Sox Rout Orioles

By GEORGE BOWEN

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Chicago White Sox ended a 26-inning run famine Saturday as pitcher Early Wynn beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-1 to become the American League's first 20-game winner of the season.

The White Sox maintained a four-game American league lead over second-place Cleveland, which defeated Washington 7-2. Chicago has 11 games to play, Cleveland 13. Any combination of nine Chicago victories or Indian defeats will give the pennant to the White Sox.

The White Sox, who went scoreless in 25 innings required for two games against the Orioles Friday night, went down in order to start Saturday afternoon's season finale in Baltimore.

The White Sox broke the monotonous string of goose eggs with a pair of runs in the second off southpaw Billy O'Dell, who hadn't been scored on in 19 innings. O'Dell walked John Romano, who scored on successive singles by Ted Kluszewski and Jim Landis. Right fielder Al Pilarcik lost Bubba Phillips' high fly ball in the sun and it dropped for a double, scoring Kluszewski.

Al Smith's single and Kluszewski's second of three hits scored another Chicago run in the third. A steal of home by Landis capped a crazy eighth inning in which the White Sox doubled their run total to six.

The 39-year-old Wynn, who has lost nine this season, had to bear down hard in the seventh and eighth innings to register the 269th victory of his career.

In the seventh, the Orioles loaded the bases on singles by Willie Tasby and Joe Ginsberg and a walk. Pinch-hitter Gene Woodling tapped back to Wynn, who started an inning-ending double play.

The Orioles cracked the ice in the next inning on consecutive singles by Billy Klaus, Pilarcik and Bob Nieman. With runners on first and third and one out, Wynn struck out Brooks Robinson and Tasby.

Robinson set the stage for Chicago's scoring spree in the eight by making a two-base throwing error in trying to handle Sherman Lollar's grounder. Kluszewski walked and Earl Torgeson ran for him. Landis bunted to fill the bases.

New League Inks Pact For Polo Grounds

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—The newly organized American League announced today it had signed a contract to play pro football in the Polo Grounds in New York City in the 1960-61 season.

The announcement came as league owners opened a two-day meeting.

Use of the Polo Grounds, former home of the New York Giants baseball club, was agreed upon by Harry Wismer, president of the New York football team; Edgar Feeley, representing Horace Stoneham, president of the now San Francisco Giants baseball club; and Jay Coogan, of the famous family which founded the Polo Grounds years ago.

Selection of two other cities to complete an eight-club circuit for the new league was one of the main points on the agenda. Owners of clubs in Dallas, Houston, Denver, Minneapolis - St. Paul, New York and Los Angeles attended the meeting.

CUT DELAYS BOUT

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) —Garnet (Sugar) Hart was forced to postpone Monday's scheduled fight with Charley Scott when he suffered a cut lip during a sparring session Thursday. A new date for the 12-round bout between two top contenders in the welterweight division was set for Oct. 19.

Olmedo Beats Holmberg, Fraser Defeats Bartzen

By WILL GRIMSLEY

FOREST HILLS, N. Y. (AP)—Peruvian Alex Olmedo turned on titantic, breath-taking tennis in a 15-13, 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 victory over darkhorse Ron Holmberg Saturday and qualified for a revenge shot at Australia's Neale Fraser in Sunday's final of the National Tennis Championships.

Fraser, who upset Olmedo in four sets in the recent Davis Cup challenge round, used his dynamic left-handed service as a weapon of destruction in crushing little Bernard (Tut) Bartzen of Dallas 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

This took only 60 minutes, 12 less than the thrill-packed opening set between Olmedo and the 21-year-old Holmberg, both playing brilliant, slashing tennis.

An all-foreign women's final also was set up when Wimbledon champion Maria Bueno of Brazil turned back Darlene Hard of Montebello, Calif., 6-2, 6-4.

She will play the winner of the match between British Wightman Cuppers Christine Truman and Ann Haydon.

This is the first all-foreign last round in the women's division since 1937 when Anita Lizana of Chile beat Jadwiga Jadrzejowska of Poland. It will be the first time ever in this tournament, dating back to 1881, that two outsiders have walked off with both the men's and women's crowns in a single year.

The nearest thing to such an indignity came in 1926 when Rene Lacoste of France won the men's title and the women's crown went to Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, a Norwegian plying as the wife of an American.

The title matches, women first as customary, will start at 1 p.m. EST.

On the basis of performances Saturday, Olmedo and Bueno are favored to repeat their South American sweep at Wimbledon.

The copper-skinned descendant of the Incas was at his best—producing the jungle-cat court movement and phenomenal shot control which marked his amazing Davis Cup triumphs in Brisbane, Australia, in 1958 and his Wimbledon victory.

Olmedo fought off two set points in the opening set while trailing 5-6 and choked off a late surging rally by the blond giant from Brooklyn to survive the marathon.

Holmberg, a senior at Tulane University, was terrific in the early stages but midway lost his phenomenal touch.

After the 10-minute intermission following the third set, Olmedo took charge quickly, winning his first service at love and breaking Holmberg in the second for a lead which the Brooklyn boy never could overcome.

With sharp, angled returns, Holmberg had Olmedo down 30-40 but the Peruvian pulled it out with brilliant services. Holmberg's resistance collapsed when he lost the sixth game on service without winning a point.

Fraser needed exactly 60 minutes to dispose of the 145-pound Bartzen, quarter-final conqueror Friday of third-seeded Barry MacKay. The 31-year-old clay court champion from Dallas made a fight of it only through the first six games. The rest of it was a rout.

Starting with the seventh game of the first set, Fraser won eight of the next nine games and 15 of the last 19 of the match.

His deceptive left-handed service, which kicks high to both the backhand and beforehand just as he chooses to spin it, so baffled the Texan that only once during the match was Bartzen able to come close to breaking it.

In the four games he served in the third set, Fraser lost only four points, two of these in the final game when he hit a loose volley and doublefaulted once.

Most of the time the Australian, who almost single-handedly recovered the Davis Cup two weeks ago for Captain Harry Hopman's forces, won his delivery at love or at 15.

Bartzen's stoutest showing against this tremendous service came in the final game of the second set when he three times had advantage. But he never was able to crack through to the game. Each time Fraser came up with a sizzler in one of the corners to pull out of trouble. He won the set after failing on four set points, then breezed through the third.

Team Beaten Despite Fullback Turned Referee

DAYTON, Idaho (AP) — Fullback Curtis Welter picked up the ball and walked down the field 15 yards, as if he were the referee or something.

The opposition team did nothing. So he marked off another 15 yards. Again the opponents did nothing.

So Welter ran the remaining 20 yards over the goal line.

But the opponents, the West Side High School of Dayton, could not be fooled again and went on to beat Welter and his teammates from nearby Grace High School 26-12 Friday night.

Pilney Pleased With Footballers

NEW ORLEANS, La. (Special) — After two weeks of preparation for the September 18th opener against SEC foe Florida here in Tulane Stadium, Coach Andy Pilney is pleased with progress of his Wave eleven.

"We are further ahead than at this time last year," the Greenie mentor states.

"We have had good weather and the players came in, in good condition. Their spirit and hustle has been good and we have accomplished a lot," he adds.

Tulane aiming for that season lid-lifter with the Gators had reeled off two weeks of two-a-day drills with only two injuries to mar the picture. Guard Charles Ogilvie of Memphis, Tenn., and end Phil Heffington, Shreveport, La., both sustained injuries to knee injuries and are on the shelf for at least two to three weeks. Ogilvie is a hot-shot redshirt guard running on the No. 2 unit, while Heffington is a junior letterman end who was No. 3 on the left side.

Despite those injuries the picture is bright with Tulane scheduled to field its largest starting team in recent years. The current No. 1 line averages 213 pounds across from end to end, while the first back field is rated at an average of 193 pounds per man.

That No. 1 unit has had Leo Young, Ferriday and Bill Brabham, Greensburg, at ends with Pete Abadie, New Orleans splitting with Brabham. At tackles are Joe LeSage, Beaumont, Tex. and Dave Painter, Lake Charles. Guards are John DiVietro, Easton, Pa. and Billy Clements, Shelbyville, Ky. Veteran Neal Jones, Baton Rouge has been at center. In the backfield have been Phil Nugent, Lafayette at quarterback, Tom Mason of Lake Charles and Jeff Bratton, Camden, Ark. at halfbacks and Tom McClellan, New London, Tex. at fullback.

Pilney plans to alternate that unit with a second group throughout the ball game.

"We have the experience and depth to alternate two groups this year. Something we have not been able to do for several years," Pilney says.

He added: "Thus far our passing game looks strong and our running game improved. Nugent and Bob Cornett, (Hattiesburg, Miss.) have both been doing well at quarterback. Our defense is shaping up stronger than the past two years, due not only to increased size, but also the fact that our first two lines have all had some experience and are more mature now."

Another big improvement over recent years is expected in the punting game. The new substitution rule will help get in the good kicker whenever needed and in Cornett, James Magee (Morgan City) and Tom Mason he has at his call some fine booters.

Mossi Blanks Yankees, 4-0, On Four Hits

Mossi held the New Yorkers to four hits to give the Tigers a 14-8 edge in the season's series, and had the situation under control throughout.

The victory also put Detroit within half a game of New York in the battle for third place in the American League.

Ford (14-9) was nicked for 11 hits in the eight innings he worked, and handed the Tigers their first run, in the third inning, by walking Charley Maxwell with the bases full.

It was the sixth victory of the season for Mossi (14-9) over the Yankees. He did not walk a man and only two New Yorkers reached second base. In 195 innings he has issued only 43 walks.

Redbird Wish, Easy Spur Win Michigan Derby

DETROIT (AP)—Redbird Wish and Easy Spur both turned on a burst of speed in the stretch to win their respective divisions of the two-part Michigan Derby at Hazel Park Saturday. Each race was worth $20,000-added.

Redbird Wish, owned by Mrs. M. H. Van Berg, came charging between horses to nose out American Comet at the wire in the first race. Peter The Hermit finished third. Only a neck separated the three horses in the 1 1-16 mile race, run in 1:44 1-5.

In the second division, Jim Norris' Easy Spur came from behind to pass the heavily-favored Little Tytus and win by a length. Bay Harbor was three lengths behind in third place. The time was 1:44 flat.

Redbird Wish paid $14.00, $6.60 and $4.40, American Comet $5.20 and $4.40, and Peter The Hermit $8.00.

Wynn Chalks Up 20th Win As Pale Sox Rout Orioles

By GEORGE BOWEN

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Chicago White Sox ended a 26-inning run famine Saturday as pitcher Early Wynn beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-1 to become the American League's first 20-game winner of the season.

The White Sox maintained a four-game American league lead over second-place Cleveland, which defeated Washington 7-2. Chicago has 11 games to play, Cleveland 13. Any combination of nine Chicago victories or Indian defeats will give the pennant to the White Sox.

The White Sox, who went scoreless in 25 innings required for two games against the Orioles Friday night, went down in order to start Saturday afternoon's season finale in Baltimore.

The White Sox broke the monotonous string of goose eggs with a pair of runs in the second off southpaw Billy O'Dell, who hadn't been scored on in 19 innings. O'Dell walked John Romano, who scored on successive singles by Ted Kluszewski and Jim Landis. Right fielder Al Pilarcik lost Bubba Phillips' high fly ball in the sun and it dropped for a double, scoring Kluszewski.

Al Smith's single and Kluszewski's second of three hits scored another Chicago run in the third. A steal of home by Landis capped a crazy eighth inning in which the White Sox doubled their run total to six.

The 39-year-old Wynn, who has lost nine this season, had to bear down hard in the seventh and eighth innings to register the 269th victory of his career.

In the seventh, the Orioles loaded the bases on singles by Willie Tasby and Joe Ginsberg and a walk. Pinch-hitter Gene Woodling tapped back to Wynn, who started an inning-ending double play.

The Orioles cracked the ice in the next inning on consecutive singles by Billy Klaus, Pilarcik and Bob Nieman. With runners on first and third and one out, Wynn struck out Brooks Robinson and Tasby.

Robinson set the stage for Chicago's scoring spree in the eight by making a two-base throwing error in trying to handle Sherman Lollar's grounder. Kluszewski walked and Earl Torgeson ran for him. Landis bunted to fill the bases.

New League Inks Pact For Polo Grounds

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The newly organized American League announced today it had signed a contract to play pro football in the Polo Grounds in New York City in the 1960-61 season.

The announcement came as league owners opened a two-day meeting.

Use of the Polo Grounds, former home of the New York Giants baseball club, was agreed upon by Harry Wismer, president of the New York football team; Edgar Feeley, representing Horace Stoneham, president of the now San Francisco Giants baseball club; and Jay Coogan, of the famous family which founded the Polo Grounds years ago.

Selection of two other cities to complete an eight-club circuit for the new league was one of the main points on the agenda. Owners of clubs in Dallas, Houston, Denver, Minneapolis - St. Paul, New York and Los Angeles attended the meeting.

CUT DELAYS BOUT

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) —Garnet (Sugar) Hart was forced to postpone Monday's scheduled fight with Charley Scott when he suffered a cut lip during a sparring session Thursday. A new date for the 12-round bout between two top contenders in the welterweight division was set for Oct. 19.

Team Beaten Despite Fullback Turned Referee

DAYTON, Idaho (AP) — Fullback Curtis Welter picked up the ball and walked down the field 15 yards, as if he were the referee or something.

The opposition team did nothing. So he marked off another 15 yards. Again the opponents did nothing.

So Welter ran the remaining 20 yards over the goal line.

But the opponents, the West Side High School of Dayton, could not be fooled again and went on to beat Welter and his teammates from nearby Grace High School 26-12 Friday night.

Mossi Blanks Yankees, 4-0, On Four Hits

Mossi held the New Yorkers to four hits to give the Tigers a 14-8 edge in the season's series, and had the situation under control throughout.

The victory also put Detroit within half a game of New York in the battle for third place in the American League.

Ford (14-9) was nicked for 11 hits in the eight innings he worked, and handed the Tigers their first run, in the third inning, by walking Charley Maxwell with the bases full.

It was the sixth victory of the season for Mossi (14-9) over the Yankees. He did not walk a man and only two New Yorkers reached second base. In 195 innings he has issued only 43 walks.

Redbird Wish, Easy Spur Win Michigan Derby

DETROIT (AP)—Redbird Wish and Easy Spur both turned on a burst of speed in the stretch to win their respective divisions of the two-part Michigan Derby at Hazel Park Saturday. Each race was worth $20,000-added.

Redbird Wish, owned by Mrs. M. H. Van Berg, came charging between horses to nose out American Comet at the wire in the first race. Peter The Hermit finished third. Only a neck separated the three horses in the 1 1-16 mile race, run in 1:44 1-5.

In the second division, Jim Norris' Easy Spur came from behind to pass the heavily-favored Little Tytus and win by a length. Bay Harbor was three lengths behind in third place. The time was 1:44 flat.

Redbird Wish paid $14.00, $6.60 and $4.40, American Comet $5.20 and $4.40, and Peter The Hermit $8.00.

Delta Kappa Gammas Hold Their September Meeting

The September meeting of the Eta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma Society was held at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club on the night of September third. Hostesses for this occasion were Mrs. James A. Noe, Miss Harriet Boyle, Miss Frances Flanders, Miss Mary Hester, Mrs. Alfred Reid, Miss Genevra Washburn, Miss Carrie Dee Drew, Mrs. Wayne Gray, Miss Hazel Mitchell, Miss Ruth Simmons and Miss Kathryn Douciere. A delicious dinner was served on the glassed porch of the club, from which the guests enjoyed the view of the Bayou.

Miss Mable Lann, President welcomed the members and Mrs. W. W. Ward, Program Chairman, introduced the speakers of the evening, whose topic was "Meeting the needs of the exceptional child". Mrs. Evelyn Barnes talked about what was being done for the mentally retarded child and Miss Marianna Johnson discussed opportunities for the gifted child.

Mrs. Barnes said in part: "Mentally retarded children have suffered much in other times and cultures. It was not until the turn of the century that Alfred Binet perfected a scale for measuring intelligence and brought understanding that many children were unable to keep up with the average class. It is difficult to identify the retarded child before school age, but the older the child grows, the greater is the gap between the retarded child and the normal one. In past years the teacher has found that these children presented discipline problems when they were in a classroom with normal learners. It is now determined that about 4 per cent of the school population has an I. Q. between 50 and 80 and it is for these children that the public schools are offering special classes."

Mrs. Barnes explained that in these classes the children can learn to read a little, to write their names, to count money and to become independent members of society. Character training is especially important for this group. She closed her talk with these significant words: "The biggest problem in handling the mentally retarded child is that he grows up."

Miss Johnson presented the brighter side of the picture in a very interesting manner. She said "It has now become socially desirable to have a high I. Q." The mass change of heart about the importance of the mind has come about very suddenly. She told how to identify the gifted child as follows: He has the power of keen observation, he is interested in calenders and clocks, he has a sustained interest in many subjects, he is usually talented in painting or some form of music and he is a good reader. The intellectually gifted child becomes the superior adult. A child is considered a gifted child when he has an I.Q. over 135. She closed by saying "Schools are no longer dedicated to normality, but are seeking to find the gifted child and help him."

Members present in addition to the hostesses and the speakers were: Mrs. Louise M. Brown, Miss Elaine Canady, Miss Eloise Cann, Mrs. Alwine Duncan, Mrs. Paul Fink, Mrs. George Guier, Mrs. W. R. Hammond, Mrs. Sara Hollingsworth, Miss Sallie Humble, Miss Lann, Mrs. Malcolm Lefevre, Mrs. Harry Lemert, Miss Josephine McCraine, Mrs. Violet Washburn, Mrs. Eula Pearl Montgomery, Mrs. B. L. Mulhern, Miss Betty Oxford, Miss Juanita Porter, Mrs. George Riser, Mrs. Nell Sims, Miss Anne Smith, Mrs. A. L. Tatum, Miss Mary Alma Tompkins, Mrs. Marguerite Vincent, Miss Mary Annie Wall, Mrs. Lucile C. Wilkins, Mrs. Howard Willard, Miss Frances Wilson and Miss Annie Windes.

BEAUTY HINTS

Immediately after you have taken your last swim for the day—whether it's in the ocean or a swimming pool — towel dry the ends of your hair and whirl them into pin curls. Then, finish playing around the water while your curls dry. Big generous pin curls are better than none, but their size should be determined by your original coiffure.

So that you will not look like a refugee from a beauty parlor, cover the pin curls with a glamorous scarf, a crazy hat or flowers. Then, when your hair is dry and you are ready to dress, you will be able to comb out your curls and step from the bath house not only with the glamorous look of a star, but also totally prepared for any further social activities.

Bradford-Smith Vows Said In Mid-Afternoon

Miss Lorraine Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Smith of Tallulah and Ben L. Bradford Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben L. Bradford of Monroe, were united in marriage at the Willow Bayou Baptist church on August 30 at 3 p.m. The Rev. Jon F. Meek officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Vows were exchanged before a white arch entwined with ivy and on either side a floor basket filled with white gladioli and fern. Cathedral candles in tall candelabra completed the setting.

Nuptial music was played by Miss Merle Sullivan who accomppanied Bob Crosby who sang "Because." The traditional marches were used.

Miss Mary Kathryn Smith, sister of the bride who served as maid of honor and Miss Betty Speed, bridesmaid, wore identical street length dresses of blue chiffon over taffeta, styled with scoop necklines, fitted bodices and cap sleeves. They wore small matching blue hats of veiling and velvet bows and carried bouquets of white carnations on a blue background.

Escorted by her father who gave her in marriage, the bride wore a waltz length bridal gown of Chantilly lace over taffeta, fashioned with molded bodice, three quarter length sleeves, and scalloped scoop neckline. The bouffant skirt had a scalloped hemline and was trimmed with tiers of net ruffles from waist to hem in the back. The finger tip veil of illusion was attached to a crown of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of white carnations.

Vernon Cottrell of this city served as best man and the ushers were Wesley Wilcher and Dalton Wilcher of Delhi, cousins of the bride.

Mrs. Smith chose for her daughter's wedding a navy sheath with navy and white accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother was attired in a navy print sheath worn with black accessories and a white carnation corsage.

A reception followed at the home of the bride which was decorated with white gladioli and sprays of clematis and ivy. The refreshment table with its lace cover over pale green was centered with white caranations and white tapers in crystal holders. Miss Faye Yee presided at the punch service, and Miss Bonnie Holt served the wedding cake. Miss Virginia Singuefield had charge of the guest book.

When the couple left for a bridal trip the bride was wearing a navy and white suit with navy accessories and a white carnation corsage. They will reside in this city where Mr. Bradford will be a student at Northeast State College.

The bride is a graduate of Tallulah High School and the bridegroom graduated at Ouachita Parish High School.

Out of town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Bradford, Miss Zelma Bradford and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Adcock all of Monroe; Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bradford of Columbia; Mrs. George Scallans of Alexandria, and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Wilcher of Delhi.

MRS. BOBBIE EUGENE GILLILAND

Miss Matkins Is Bride Of Bobby E. Gilliland

On Saturday, September 12, Miss Sara Frances Matkins and Bobby Eugene Gilliland were united in marriage in the First Baptist Church of Sterlington. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Clark Matkins of Sterlington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otho Clyde Gilliland of Rayville.

Cathedral tapers in wrought iron candelabra before a background of southern smilax, were interwoven to fashion an arch that banked pedestal vases of white gladioli. White satin ribbon bows marked the family pews.

The candles were lighted by Miss Sallye Davis of Lake Charles, cousin of the bride, and William Carter Matkins, brother of the bride, as Robert Oldenburg, of Monroe, began the prenuptial music on the organ. Mrs. Allison Salley, of Jennings, sang "Because," "Through the Years" and "The Wedding Prayer" at the conclusion of the ceremony. The traditional processional and recessional were used.

THE BRIDE

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of candlelight bride's satin accented with imported hand clipped French Chantilly lace and seed pearls. The Empire bodice of satin, appliqued with large lace roses of shimmering pearls was finished with a sweetheart neckline and long tapering sleeves, closed with tiny satin covered buttons, ending in lily points over the hands. Pearl embroidered scalloped lace fell over the satin skirt from the waist to the floor at each side. In the back, below the waist, the satin was tucked into soft pleats in a large sunburst to form a bustle effect. Smaller lace roses with pearls outlined the hem of the flared skirt which terminated in a chapel train.

A tiered circular fingertip veil of imported pure silk illusion fell from a tiara of glowing seed pearls. The bride's only ornament was a single strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom. Her bridal bouquet was a cascade arrangement of feathered chrysanthemums and tube roses centered with a purple orchid. It was accented by satin leaves overlaid with lace to match her gown and was placed on a small white Bible.

ATTENDANTS

Miss Carolyn Freeman, of Monroe, served the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Miss Sandra Gilliland of Rayville, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Clark Matkins, of Shreveport, and Mrs. Lytle Matkins, of New Orleans, sisters-in-law of the bride. Miss Sallye Davis of Lake Charles, cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid.

The attendants' gowns were of pale pink tulle over American Beauty taffeta. Wide streamers from a large soft flat bow at the back neckline fell to the hem of the full ballerina length skirt. all wore headdresses of matching taffeta and tulle, with circular nose veils. They wore white wrist length gloves and slippers to match their gowns. Each attendant wore a single strand of pearls, a gift of the bride. They carried nosegays of shaded pink gladioli and blush pink feathered chrysanthemums nestled in double rows of pale pink tulle.

Miss Kay Carter Matkins served her sister as flower girl. Her floor length magnolia pink gown of tulle over taffeta was identical in style to the bridesmaids' and her accessories, bandeau and nosegay were miniatures of the other attendants.

Ring bearer was Charles Carter of Monroe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund H. Carter, and cousin of the bride.

Hugh Ronald Gilliland of Rolla, Missouri, served his brother as best man. Groomsmen and ushers were Clark Matkins of Shreveport, Lytel Matkins of New Orleans, William Carter Matkins, all brothers of the bride, John Wesley Lolly Cooper of West Monroe and William Cooper of Rayville.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Matkins chose a Dior blue sheath of silk lace over matching taffeta. It featured a bateau neckline and three quarter length sleeves. She wore a small cloche of blue feathers, and matching acessories. Mrs. Gilliland, mother of the bridegroom, was attired in a fitted dress of mauve cotton satin overlaid with matching silk lace. Her ensemble was complemented by navy accessories. Each wore a glamelia corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Matkins were hosts at a reception in their home on Davis Street in Sterlington immediately following the ceremony. Guests were received in the living room lighted by white tapers in two branched candelabras entwined with southern smilax. Polished magnolia leaves and white candles were used on the piano. In the reception room Mrs. Edmund H. Carter, of Monroe, presided over the bride's book.

In the dining room the bride's table, covered with a white lace cloth, was centered with the wedding cake. White tapers in silver candle holders with southern smilax and maiden hair fern at their base were placed at each end. The bridesmaids nosegays lay on the table. The tiers of the round wedding cake were separated by white swans and columns entwined with pink roses and green leaves. It was topped by a miniature bride and groom, and encircled by maiden hair fern, southern smilax and white chrysanthemums. Mrs. W. O. Davis of Lake Charles, aunt of the bride, served the cake.

Southern smilax and tapers in a tree candelabra and a large white basket filled with white chrysanthemums and magnolia leaves were placed in the den where guests were served punch. Mrs. James Beam of Rayville, cousin of the bride, and Mrs. William Norris Gaines, of Rayville, alternated serving from a crystal punch bowl at a round table encircled with polished magnolia leaves and others of the bridesmaids' nosegays.

Miss Joan Blondine of Ruston, Loette Stedman, and Mrs. Robert Oldenburg, of Monroe, also assisted in the courtesies. All members of the house party wore pink feathered chrysanthemum corsages.

WEDDING TRIP

Later in the evening the bride changed into a black and toast crepe suit. She wore a black velet cloche with a small veil. A black velvet bag, black shoes and white gloves and an orchid completed her going away ensemble.

The young couple will visit points of interest on a wedding trip through the Smoky Mountains, the Blue Ridge Mountain Park, Washington, D. C., and Baltimore, Maryland. After September 21 they will be at home at Fdgewood, Maryland, where the bridegroom will be stationed as a Second Lieutenant with the Army Chemical central of Maryland.

The bride is a graduate of Ouachita Parish High School and Northeast Louisiana State College where she received a B. S. degree in Medical Technology. She is now a member of the American Society of Clinical Pathologists. While in college she was a member of the Beta Sigma Bilogical Science Society. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Carter of Sterlington.

Yes, Women Are Safer Drivers

TORONTO — She won't say whether women are better drivers than men, but Mrs. Ethel McLlellan — director of the women's activities division of the Ontario Transport Department — says 25 per cent of all Ontario drivers are women, and they are involved in less than 9 per cent of accidents.

"I do feel that women are, by their nature, very cautious and this tends to annoy men," she says. "Women look before they move, and that is what gives them a bad name."

She feels that this sense of precaution is the result of the hazardous conditions under which women drive. Most men travel the same route each day when driving to work. They are familiar with all the street signs and are usually driving at a time when there are few children on the street.

A great number of women drive in suburbs crowded with small children, which tends to produce extra caution.

"However, on the highway, tests have shown that women are faster drivers than men," Mrs. McLlellan says.

She urges women to wear comfortable clothing for driving. She keeps an old pair of shoes in her own car to slip into when she's on a trip, explaining:

"It's not only more comfortable, it saves the wear and tear on my good shoes."

Women drivers should not wear white cotton or nylon gloves pretty though they are.

"Leather gloves afford better control of the steering wheel," she says.

MRS. BOBBIE EUGENE GILLILAND

MRS. LAVERN BURKHALTER

Miss Matkins Is Bride Of Bobby E. Gilliland

On Saturday, September 12, Miss Sara Frances Matkins and Bobby Eugene Gilliland were united in marriage in the First Baptist Church of Sterlington. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Clark Matkins of Sterlington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otho Clyde Gilliland of Rayville.

Cathedral tapers in wrought iron candelabra before a background of southern smilax, were interwoven to fashion an arch that banked pedestal vases of white gladioli. White satin ribbon bows marked the family pews.

The candles were lighted by Miss Sallye Davis of Lake Charles, cousin of the bride, and William Carter Matkins, brother of the bride, as Robert Oldenburg, of Monroe, began the prenuptial music on the organ. Mrs. Allison Salley, of Jennings, sang "Because," "Through the Years" and "The Wedding Prayer" at the conclusion of the ceremony. The traditional processional and recessional were used.

THE BRIDE

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of candlelight bride's satin accented with imported hand clipped French Chantilly lace and seed pearls. The Empire bodice of satin, appliqued with large lace roses of shimmering pearls was finished with a sweetheart neckline and long tapering sleeves, closed with tiny satin covered buttons, ending in lily points over the hands. Pearl embroidered scalloped lace fell over the satin skirt from the waist to the floor at each side. In the back, below the waist, the satin was tucked into soft pleats in a large sunburst to form a bustle effect. Smaller lace roses with pearls outlined the hem of the flared skirt which terminated in a chapel train.

A tiered circular fingertip veil of imported pure silk illusion fell from a tiara of glowing seed pearls. The bride's only ornament was a single strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom. Her bridal bouquet was a cascade arrangement of feathered chrysanthemums and tube roses centered with a purple orchid. It was accented by satin leaves overlaid with lace to match her gown and was placed on a small white Bible.

ATTENDANTS

Miss Carolyn Freeman, of Monroe, served the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Miss Sandra Gilliland of Rayville, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Clark Matkins, of Shreveport, and Mrs. Lytle Matkins, of New Orleans, sisters-in-law of the bride. Miss Sallye Davis of Lake Charles, cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid.

The attendants' gowns were of pale pink tulle over American Beauty taffeta. Wide streamers from a large soft flat bow at the back neckline fell to the hem of the full ballerina length skirt. all wore headdresses of matching taffeta and tulle, with circular nose veils. They wore white wrist length gloves and slippers to match their gowns. Each attendant wore a single strand of pearls, a gift of the bride. They carried nosegays of shaded pink gladioli and blush pink feathered chrysanthemums nestled in double rows of pale pink tulle.

Miss Kay Carter Matkins served her sister as flower girl. Her floor length magnolia pink gown of tulle over taffeta was identical in style to the bridesmaids' and her accessories, bandeau and nosegay were miniatures of the other attendants.

Ring bearer was Charles Carter of Monroe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund H. Carter, and cousin of the bride.

Hugh Ronald Gilliland of Rolla, Missouri, served his brother as best man. Groomsmen and ushers were Clark Matkins of Shreveport, Lytel Matkins of New Orleans, William Carter Matkins, all brothers of the bride, John Wesley Lolly Cooper of West Monroe and William Cooper of Rayville.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Matkins chose a Dior blue sheath of silk lace over matching taffeta. It featured a bateau neckline and three quarter length sleeves. She wore a small cloche of blue feathers, and matching acessories. Mrs. Gilliland, mother of the bridegroom, was attired in a fitted dress of mauve cotton satin overlaid with matching silk lace. Her ensemble was complemented by navy accessories. Each wore a glamelia corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Matkins were hosts at a reception in their home on Davis Street in Sterlington immediately following the ceremony. Guests were received in the living room lighted by white tapers in two branched candelabras entwined with southern smilax. Polished magnolia leaves and white candles were used on the piano. In the reception room Mrs. Edmund H. Carter, of Monroe, presided over the bride's book.

In the dining room the bride's table, covered with a white lace cloth, was centered with the wedding cake. White tapers in silver candle holders with southern smilax and maiden hair fern at their base were placed at each end. The bridesmaids nosegays lay on the table. The tiers of the round wedding cake were separated by white swans and columns entwined with pink roses and green leaves. It was topped by a miniature bride and groom, and encircled by maiden hair fern, southern smilax and white chrysanthemums. Mrs. W. O. Davis of Lake Charles, aunt of the bride, served the cake.

Southern smilax and tapers in a tree candelabra and a large white basket filled with white chrysanthemums and magnolia leaves were placed in the den where guests were served punch. Mrs. James Beam of Rayville, cousin of the bride, and Mrs. William Norris Gaines, of Rayville, alternated serving from a crystal punch bowl at a round table encircled with polished magnolia leaves and others of the bridesmaids' nosegays.

Miss Joan Blondine of Ruston, Loette Stedman, and Mrs. Robert Oldenburg, of Monroe, also assisted in the courtesies. All members of the house party wore pink feathered chrysanthemum corsages.

WEDDING TRIP

Later in the evening the bride changed into a black and toast crepe suit. She wore a black velet cloche with a small veil. A black velvet bag, black shoes and white gloves and an orchid completed her going away ensemble.

The young couple will visit points of interest on a wedding trip through the Smoky Mountains, the Blue Ridge Mountain Park, Washington, D. C., and Baltimore, Maryland. After September 21 they will be at home at Fdgewood, Maryland, where the bridegroom will be stationed as a Second Lieutenant with the Army Chemical central of Maryland.

The bride is a graduate of Ouachita Parish High School and Northeast Louisiana State College where she received a B. S. degree in Medical Technology. She is now a member of the American Society of Clinical Pathologists. While in college she was a member of the Beta Sigma Bilogical Science Society. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Carter of Sterlington.

The bridegroom graduated from Rayville High School and Louisiana Polytechnic Institute with a B. S. degree in chemical engineering. He is now a member of the American Institute of cemical engineers. While in college he was an active member of Kappa Sigma, a social fraternity. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hollingsworth of Rayville.

Gaines, Mr. and Mrs. William Norris Gaines, Mrs. W. P. Gaines, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hollingsworth, Miss Sandra Gilliland, Mr. and Mrs. James Beam, Jimmy and Betty, all of Rayville. Others were Mrs. N. K. McInnis of Alexandria, Mr. and Mrs. Oren Baker of Alexandria, Miss Hilda West of El Dorado, Arkansas, Miss Barbara Breeland of New Orleans, Miss Elizabeth Williams, of Baton Rouge, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Davis of Lake Charles, Miss Sallye Davis of Lake Charles, Miss Joan Blondine of Ruston, Miss Lillian Blondine of Ruston, Mrs. Allison Sally of Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Matkins of Shreveport, Mr. and Mrs. Lytle Matkins of New Orleans and Hugh Ronald Gilliand of Rolla, Missouri.

Why Do Women Love To Look Ridiculous?

EVERY PROGRESSIVE beauty salon in America should have a Doctor of Good Grooming on tap for consultations with women customers, suggests a male reader.

"The job of this brave individual would be to keep women from making themselves look ridiculous," he says. "He could say, 'Oh, no, ma'am, please don't dye your hair platinum, it'll look terrible on you, and those pointy fingernails will nauseate your husband, believe me,' and why in the world don't you lose a few pounds around your middle?"

American women, among the most intelligent in the world, show complete zaniness and sheep-like acceptance of every foolish fad that people want to foist on them, he says.

"Take the wig fad, for instance," the man writes. "It's fine for bald women, but why would a handsome woman with a perfectly good head of hair cover it over with one of these bilious-looking green or purple wigs? And, how can she (or he) afford it?

"This letter is prompted," he continues, "by [illegible] (cross my heart) abroad. It's the last word in foolish fancies. If it catches on here, it'll drive men crazy. I'm referring to the new trend to white lipstick, an effect that must be seen to be appreciated.

"In semi-darkness, a girl wearing it looks like she has left her chin at the eye doctor because this mouthless, chinless look is emphasized by the big-eyed look — an effect that makes the orbs look as if they'd been inflated with helium and bound with iron prongs that turn out to be false eyelashes. The effect is made even more grotesque if the girl chooses green [illegible] powder to deaden her face even more. Apparently, a girl should be all eyes this year."

The man also takes off on pointy-toed shoes and stiletto-thin heels.

"These heels are lethal weapons," he says, "fine in wartime, maybe, but no good for peaceful existence between the sexes. Many a man wears the battle scar, a bandage over the [illegible], the result of some brief and unexpected contact with a member of the stiletto brigade."

Many women would agree with this man, and would welcome the chance to pour out their beauty problems to a willing listener, and maybe even to tone down their glamor a bit. But, it's the competition, man, that keeps the ladies on the beauty qui vivre. And who creates the competition? Why, men, of course.

MR. & MRS. CHARLES EDWIN COE JR.

Miss Boone, C. E. Coe Jr. Marriage Vows Exchanged

The Parkview Baptist Church was the setting at 11 p.m. on Sept. 4 for the wedding ceremony of Miss Carol Ann Boone of Lakeshore Drive, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. E. H. Boone Jr. of Fuchu Air Base, Tokyo, Japan, and Charles Edwin Coe, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Coe of North 5th St.

Rev. H. L. Sampson officiated for the double ring ceremony.

Altar baskets of white gladioli and fern were used with candelbra of tall white tapers on the altar.

Mrs. William Wilkerson presented the nuptial music.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Capt. E. H. Boone Jr. Her wedding gown of hand embroidered white Japanese georgette had a V shaped neckline and was street length. Her shoes were white embroidered to match, and her only ornament was a strand of imported pearls, a gift of her parents. Her shoulder length veil was attached to a horsehair bandeau and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley on a white Bible.

Serving as maid of honor was Miss Ann Joyce Greene of Meridian, Miss., a cousin of the bridegroom. She wore a white gown of embroidered lace over mint green taffeta, with a matching wide brimmed hat of green taffeta and green slippers of matching shade. She carried a nosegay of pink sweetheart roses.

Charles E. Coe served as best man and the usher was V. E. Moore of Memphis. Candlelighter was Anthony Middlebrook of Meridian, Miss.

The bride's grandmother, Mrs. E. H. Boone was dressed in a pink, pure silk shirtwaist dress, accented with pink jewelry, hat and slippers and a corsage of pink carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore brown crepe trimmed in re-embroidered white lace with matching brown accessories. Her corsage was of bronze chrysanthemums.

RECEPTION

The reception was held in the home of the bride's grandparents on Lakeshore Drive.

An antique cutglass basket held an arrangement of white stock, white chrysanthemums and maidenhair fern in the reception room where the gifts were displayed. A memory candle was encircled by a ring of white chrysanthemums, lily of the valley and fern. This was surrounded on the table by white net rice bags tied with satin ribbons.

The bride's table covered with a white linen cloth had two white wedding bells and lily of the valley over the centerpiece of white stock and chrysanthemums in a silver eperge flanked by tapers. The wedding cake placed on one end of the table was served by Mrs. George M. Baber and the cutglass punch bowl at the other end of the table was presided over by Mrs. J. H. Womack. For their wedding trip to Vicksburg, Miss. the bride chose an emerald green sheath with matching box jacket and a bandeau of multi-colored pheasant feathers and accessories of black.

The bride is a graduate of Tokyo American High School and she attended Northeast La. State College. Her sorority is Phi Mu.

The groom attended Neville High School and attended Louisiana Polytechnic Institute and Northeast State College.

Out-of-town guests were Capt. E. H. Boone, Jr., Tokyo, Japan; Mrs. M. A. Boone, great-grandmother of bride, Cherokee, Texas; Mrs. J. W. Reese, Dallas, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Moore Memphis, Tennessee; Mrs. Frank Maxwell and daughter, Darlinda, Vicksburg, Miss.; Mrs. Leon Middlebrook, daughters, Patricia and Judy, Vicksburg, Miss.; Mrs. P. B. Greene and daughter, Ann Joyce, Meridian, Miss.; Mr. K. G. Middlebrook and son Anthony, Meridian, Miss.

Glimpse Of The Future

Said the actress, "It gave me a pretty good idea what I'll look like a couple of decades from now."

Why Do Women Love To Look Ridiculous?

EVERY PROGRESSIVE beauty salon in America should have a Doctor of Good Grooming on tap for consultations with women customers, suggests a male reader.

"The job of this brave individual would be to keep women from making themselves look ridiculous," he says. "He could say, 'Oh, no, ma'am, please don't dye your hair platinum, it'll look terrible on you, and those pointy fingernails will nauseate your husband, believe me,' and' why in the world don't you lose a few pounds around your middle?"

American women, among the most intelligent in the world, show complete zaniness and sheep-like acceptance of every foolish fad that people want to foist on them, he says.

"Take the wig fad, for instance," the man writes. "It's fine for bald women, but why would a handsome woman with a perfectly good head of hair cover it over with one of those bilious-looking green or purple wigs? And, how can she (or he) afford it?

"This letter is prompted," he continues, "by [illegible] (cross my heart) abroad. It's the last word in foolish fancies. If it catches on here, it'll drive men crazy. I'm referring to the new trend to white lipstick, an effect that must be seen to be appreciated.

"In semi-darkness, a girl wearing it looks like she has left her chin at the eye doctor because this mouthless, chinless look is emphasized by the big-eyed look — an effect that makes the orbs look as if they'd been inflated with helium and bound with iron prongs that turn out to be false eyelashes. The effect is made even more grotesque if the girl chooses green [illegible] powder to deaden her face even more. Apparently, a girl should be all eyes this year."

The man also takes off on pointy-toed shoes and stiletto-thin heels.

"Those heels are lethal weapons," he says, "fine in wartime, maybe, but no good for peaceful existence between the sexes. Many a man wears the battle scar, a bandage over the [illegible], the result of some brief and unexpected contact with a member of the stiletto brigade."

Many women would agree with this man, and would welcome the chance to pour out their beauty problems to a willing listener, and maybe even to tone down their glamor a bit. But, it's the competition, man, that keeps the ladies on the beauty qui vivre. And who creates the competition? Why, men, of course.

And a happy new year to you, too! For of course we have started a new year. School is underway; club work is beginning; vacations are over; college students are leaving daily; World Series fever is in the air; and football season has started.

The nip in the air in the early mornings gives one the feeling of "things are picking up".

One of the very nicest things about the new year's beginning is the entertainment season which follows close behind. Announcement has been made of the organization of the Northeast State Concert Association by the Community Concert association and the Fine Arts department of Northeast State college. The first program of this group will be a Lyceum speaker in early October, with the Philharmonica Hungarica scheduled as the first musical program on October 21. The Juilliard String Quartet will be heard in November.

The group plans to present about ten attractions, including a nationally known military band, and a Broadway play. The membership drive opens a week from today, though advance memberships are being accepted by mail at the Fine Arts department at the college.

Another concert association which draws a wide membership from the Twin Cities is the Louisiana Tech series, whose programs are presented at Howard auditorium in Ruston. This year marks the fifteenth anniversary of the series, and an outstanding list of ten attractions has been scheduled. Included will be the Robert Shaw chorale; Bette Davis and Gary Merrill with an evening of poetry; Patricia Morrison with the Hollywood Bowl Pops orchestra; the National Ballet of Canada; "The Taming of the Shrew"; and the U. S. Air Force band.

This new year will be a big one for Monroe's Little Theatre. Construction of the new playhouse is scheduled to begin on or about October 15, according to plans announced by BOB EVANS, chairman of the building committee.

The first plays of the year will be presented at the Selman field playhouse, where tryouts were held Thursday night for "Janus." Mid - October will be opening date for this gay modern comedy which will be followed by the "Caine Mutiny Court Martial" . . . "Sabrina Fair" and "Remains to be Seen" are the other two "straight" plays on the schedule. The annual musical will be the final performance of the season, and will be presented in the new, air - conditioned building. The final selection of the musical has not been made, though the choice has been narrowed to "Damn Yankees" or "Guys and Dolls" . . . The membership drive of the Little Theatre is underway now, with MYRTLE CARTER and JEAN HAMILTON serving as chairmen.

The new yearbook of the Monroe Garden club is a work of art in shades of brown, carrying out the theme "Harvest of Twenty Five Years", honoring the club's silver anniversary. Biblical quotations about fields and harvests are scattered throughout the book. These range from "Ye shall know them by their fruits" to "The harvest is past, the summer is ended and we are not saved." . . ."After the Harvest" is the subject for the first meeting of the year, scheduled for tomorrow in the Fine Arts building at Northeast State college. MILDRED SWIFT will speak on care of gardens in the winter.

The overlapping of the seasons was seen at the party at Highland Park country club last night. A water ballet by PATSY COOPER, DIANE La GRANGE, and BRENDA COBB marked the farewell to swimming for the year, and the dinner dance opened the fall season at the club.

The program opened with a short skit, followed by a style show of fall clothes, modeled by sixteen club members. The water ballet marked the half-way point of the show. The dinner was served on the patio from a buffet table centered with a dried arrangement in autumnal hues. The Mixmasters played for dancing following supper. In charge of the evening were PEGGY TOLSON, general chairman; ANNETTE MILLIGAN, style show; and FERRIS YOUNGBLOOD, water ballet.

For the new year at the Lotus club, plans are to have music for dancing at the club's candlelight dinners. These extra - special meals are served on Wednesday and Saturday evenings, and dancing will be featured on both days.

Another summer activity which we will soon be giving up for the winter is the boating party. A goodly number of our people took advantage of the long weekend last week to plan this kind of outing. At one point on Sunday afternoon we spied four or five boats stopped at a sand bar for a supper cook-out. Among those present: the JOHNNY SHERROUSES, JR., the ALLEN BARHAMS, the BEN COBBS, the J. W. PERRYS, the H. W. M'SHERRYS, the CLAY WILSONS, the BENNIE HOUSES, the HENRY BIEDENHARNS, JR.

A two-day floating bridge party was the unusual treat enjoyed this week by HELEN WALLACE, JOY M'CUE, MERLE ADAMS, and WANDA HINKLE. It was this way: The L. C. LATHAM boat was in Vicksburg, and had to be returned to its mooring in the Gulf. The girls drove to Vicksburg Tuesday, and rode the boat down the mighty Mississippi to New Orleans, from whence they flew home Thursday night.

Several local couples returned yesterday from Shreveport, where they were guests of the CHARLTON LYONS for the performance of "Kismet" at the Margery Lyons' playhouse Friday night. In the party were MARY and GORDON CUMMINGS, ENOLA and JACK ROGERS, MARIE and HENRY BERSTEIN, HILDA and GYP M'DONALD, SUE and KING STUBBS, BETTY and BERNARD BIEDENHARN, LOUISE and JOHN THEUS.

The IVY JORDANS and the HAROLD WOODS, SR., are leaving today for Dallas, where they will attend the Neiman Exposition. They plan to return home on Wednesday.

MRS. FRED BILHORN is the guest of her son and his family, the FRED BILHORNS, JR., and JAY, in Cincinnati, Ohio. She will go to Chicago for a visit with MRS. HERMAN DUSSLER before returning home next week.

Here's a poem with a fall feeling, Ella Wilcox's "Friendship After Love":

After the fierce midsummer all ablaze
Has burned itself to ashes and expires
In the intensity of its own fires,
Then come the mellow, mild, St. Martin days
Crowned with the calm of peace but sad with haze.
So after Love has led us till he tires
Of his own throes and torments and desires;
Come large - (eyed) Friendship; with a restful gaze
He beckons us to follow, and across
Cool, verdant vales we wander free from care.
Is it a touch of frost lies in the air?
Why are we haunted with a sense of loss?
We do not wish the pain back, or the heat;
And yet, and yet, these days are incomplete.

Potatoes offer a lot of food value inexpensively: they provide calories, iron and thiamine every month of the year; at some seasons they also provide vitamin C.

TRY IT!

Good flavor: add loads of minced parsley to thte mixture from which you are going to shape meat balls.

FOR DIETERS

Weight - watchers had better add salad dressings made with salad oil carefully. A tablespoon of the oil provides 124 calories!

REMEMBER THIS!

If you need two to three cups of chicken for a salad or some other dish, a 3½ to 4-pound hen (after simmering in water or steaming) will yield this amount.

Vows Read In Church Ceremony

A ceremony in the Mt. Vernon Baptist Church Saturday evening, September 5, at eight o'clock, united Miss Mary Delaine Bratton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bratton of West Monroe, and Raymond Borland, son of Claude Borland and the late Mrs. Bertha Borland of Jonesboro.

Officiating in the double ring ritual was the Rev. W. E. Spencer, pastor of the church.

The vows were exchanged before a background screen of greenery and floor standards which held burning cathedral tapers. Floral arrangements in floor baskets were at each side and at floor level.

Pews for relatives and close friends of the couple were marked by white satin bows.

Candlelighters were Dennis Bratton and Tommy Chandler.

Miss Mary Lutrell, pianist, played a program of pre-nuptial music and accompanied Reggie Guice as he sang prior to the ceremony, "Because" by De'Harlot and "The Lord's Prayer," by Mallotte, as the young couple knelt for the benediction.

The traditional wedding marches were used as the processional and recessional.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a wedding gown of original design of Chantilly lace over bridal satin. The fitted bodice had a softly scalloped neckline edged with hand clipped lace re-embroidered with tiny seed pearls. The very full skirt was enhanced by an inset of lace, sweeping into a full chapel train. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell in soft folds from a Juliet cap.

The maid - of - honor was the bride's sister, Miss Gloria Bratton, and bridesmaids were Miss Frances Bratton of Columbia, Miss Patsy Thomas and Miss Mary Allen, both of West Monroe. The bridal attendants were attired in different shades of blue. Their headdresses were bandeaus holding short veils and they wore white gloves and white pumps.

Miss Donna Gail Morris was flower girl. Her brother, Michael Morris was ring bearer. Both are cousins of the bride.

Milton Dale Sowers of Jonesboro served the groom as best man. Groomsmen were Lloyd Sowers, and Robert Robinson, both of Jonesboro and Troy Lynch of West Monroe.

For the wedding the mother of the bride wore a gown of blue. Her accessories were of white and she wore a corsage of pink Fuji mums.

The bride's table covered with a white cloth, was centered by the tiered wedding cake, decorated with bride's roses and topped by a miniature bridal couple. At either end of the table was a punch bowl and a five branched candelabrum.

Serving the cake was Mrs. W. E. Spencer. Presiding at the punch services were Miss Sue Caples and Miss Charlotte Allen. Assistants were Misses Dot Frost, Jeanette Parker, Becky Cobb, and Patsy Allen.

For traveling the bride wore a white sheath dress. Her accessories were black patent and as a corsage she wore the single orchid from her wedding bouquet.

Upon their return from a wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Jonesboro.

Washing By Hand

Stemware should not be washed in quantity as glasses may bump against each other and become nicked or cracked. To protect glassware in the sink, use a rubber mat or dish towel on the bottom. Water should be comfortably hot and sudsy. A few drops of bluing in the water will give added lustre to the glasses. Have a soft cloth spread over the drainboard ready for draining the washed glasses. Rinse water should be of the same temperature as the water in which the glass has been washed. Sharp changes in temperature put a strain on glassware. If iced drinks have been served, the remains should be poured out and the glasses filled with barely lukewarm water to take the chill off before sudsing. Milk and wine glasses should be rinsed out in clear cool water before they are washed. A long-handled dish mop or bottle brush is useful for cleaning tall glasses and cut or etched glassware.

Dry glassware with a lint-free dish towels or allow it to dry naturally, giving a gentle wipe to remove any water spots.

Candlelight Ceremony Held In Tallulah

Tall cathedral candles in wrought iron candelabra, white gladioli and fern in tall baskets with glossy magnolia foliage formed the decorations within the chancel for the wedding in the Tallulah Methodist Church on Saturday evening, Sept. 5 at 7 o'clock of Miss Martha Jean Eaker and James Moore Mitchell.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus B. Eaker and he the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Paul Mitchell of Bolivar, Tenn.

The bride had as her only attendant, her aunt, Mrs. Bill Eaker, who wore a pale pink crystaline waltz length frock with short sleeves, pleated bodice and full skirt. She had a matching headdress and carried a French bouquet of rose - pink carnations.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a soft pink satin brocade dress designed on princess lines with V shaped neckline, cap sleeves and bouffant skirt. She wore matching lace mitts and a small antique heirloom cameo pendant. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a pink satin headdress and her bridal flowers were white carnations in a French bouquet.

Michael Mitchell of Bolivar, Tenn., served his brother as best man and the ushers were Robert Speed and Russell Holt.

Mrs. Eaker chose for her daughter's wedding a teal blue sheer wool crepe sheath style dress with black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Mitchell, the groom's mother, wore beige with matching accessories and she too had a pink cornation corsage.

HONEY ADVICE

The flowers from which bees gather nectar largely determine the color, flavor and aroma of honey. If a jar of honey does not have the flower source on the label, the sweet is probably a blend of different floral honeys.

IN NEAR FUTURE

U.S. Preparing For Lunar Shot

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The United States is preparing to launch a lunar probe of its own from this missile test center in the near future.

Reports from Washington have placed the date as early in October, when the moon will be at its closest point to the earth—220,000 miles. The shot reportedly will be an attempt to orbit a 375-pound payload about the moon.

The launching vehicle will be an Atlas-Able IV, a four-stage rocket with an Atlas intercontinental range missile as the booster.

Missile scientists here expressed surprise that the Soviets attempted a lunar shot at this time.

"There are only three or four days during the month when the moon is in a very favorable position, that is, when a rocket has the best chance of sending a payload in the vicinity," commented one.

"The fact that they launched the rocket at a time when the moon is in a least favorable position indicates the Russians are staging a propaganda show prior to Premier Khrushchev's visit to the United States."

He noted the next best period for shooting at the moon is the 3-day period starting Oct. 2.

A source close to the upcoming U.S. lunar project wished the Soviets luck on their venture.

"I hope they will make available some information on the shot," he said. "Maybe it will help us."

Maj. Gen. Donald N. Yates, commander of the Air Force missile test center, said he had no comment to make on the Soviet space shot.

The U.S. lunar satellite will be a sphere with four paddlewheel-shaped devices extending from it. These checkerboard-size vanes are similar to those pioneered by the Explorer VI "paddlewheel" satellite launched successfully here last month.

The paddles contain solar cells to convert sunlight into energy for recharging the satellite batteries.

MRS. JAMES WALTER WHITE JR.

Newlyweds Will Live In Austin, Texas

Memorial Presbyterian church in West Monroe, was the setting September 5th at eight p.m. for a double ring ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Sue Grower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noel Grower of Monroe, and James Walter White Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Walter White Sr. of Minden.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. Hugh E. Bradshaw, pastor of Memorial Church, before members of the two families and a few close friends.

The candles were lighted by Misses Glenda and Pamela Grower, sisters of the bride.

Nuptial music was rendered by Frank Parker, organist.

The bride was attended by two close friends, Miss Lynda Eby and Miss Susan Wilson, both of Monroe.

The groom was attended by Jim Gaye of Gulfport, and Rogers Reeves of Ruston. Groomsmen were Paul Thompson of Gulfport, and Pete Grower, brother of the bride.

Washing By Hand

Stemware should not be washed in quantity as glasses may bump against each other and become nicked or cracked. To protect glassware in the sink, use a rubber mat or dish towel on the bottom. Water should be comfortably hot and sudsy. A few drops of bluing in the water will give added lustre to the glasses. Have a soft cloth spread over the drainboard ready for draining the washed glasses. Rinse water should be of the same temperature as the water in which the glass has been washed. Sharp changes in temperature put a strain on glassware. If iced drinks have been served, the remains should be poured out and the glasses filled with barely lukewarm water to take the chill off before sudsing. Milk and wine glasses should be rinsed out in clear cool water before they are washed. A long-handled dish mop or bottle brush is useful for cleaning tall glasses and cut or etched glassware.

Dry glassware with a lint-free dish towels or allow it to dry naturally, giving a gentle wipe to remove any water spots.

Candlelight Ceremony Held In Tallulah

Tall cathedral candles in wrought iron candelabra, white gladioli and fern in tall baskets with glossy magnolia foliage formed the decorations within the chancel for the wedding in the Tallulah Methodist Church on Saturday evening, Sept. 5 at 7 o'clock of Miss Martha Jean Eaker and James Moore Mitchell.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus B. Eaker and he the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Paul Mitchell of Bolivar, Tenn.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. William F. Mayo.

Mrs. J. C. Sherwin at the organ played appropriate music and accompanied Miss Gail Batchelor who sang, "Through the Years."

The bride had as her only attendant, her aunt, Mrs. Bill Eaker, who wore a pale pink crystaline waltz length frock with short sleeves, pleated bodice and full skirt. She had a matching headdress and carried a French bouquet of rose - pink carnations.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a soft pink satin brocade dress designed on princess lines with V shaped neckline, cap sleeves and bouffant skirt. She wore matching lace mitts and a small antique heirloom cameo pendant. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a pink satin headdress and her bridal flowers were white carnations in a French bouquet.

Michael Mitchell of Bolivar, Tenn., served his brother as best man and the ushers were Robert Speed and Russell Holt.

Mrs. Eaker chose for her daughter's wedding a teal blue sheer wool crepe sheath style dress with black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Mitchell, the groom's mother, wore beige with matching accessories and she too had a pink cornation corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Eaker entertained with a reception in the fellowship hall of the church which was decorated with magnolia blossoms and foliage and arrangements of Guernsey lilies clematis and greenery.

The bride's book was in charge of Mrs. Richard M. Horn. Receiving with the bride and groom were their parents and the matron of honor.

The refreshment table with its white cut work cloth held a crystal punch service at one end and at the opposite end the tiered wedding cake topped with pink wedding bells and lilies of the valley. The cake and punch bowl were encircled with short stemmed pale pink double althea blooms. In the center of the table were placed the wedding bouquets. Mrs. Elmer Dalfiume presided at the punch service and the cake was served by Miss Delores Crosby.

The bride is a graduate of Tallulah High School and Jackson Commercial College of Jackson, Miss. Mr. Mitchell graduated at Central High School of Bolivar, Tenn., and the University of Tennessee. The couple will make treir home in Tallulah.

Out of town guests in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Mitchell, Michael Mitchell of Bolivar, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Painter, Kenner; Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Cohn, Memphis, Tenn. HONEY ADVICE

The flowers from which bees gather nectar largely determine the color, flavor and aroma of honey. If a jar of honey does not have the flower source on the label, the sweet is probably a blend of different floral honeys.

U.S. Preparing For Lunar Shot

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The United States is preparing to launch a lunar probe of its own from this missile test center in the near future.

Reports from Washington have placed the date as early in October, when the moon will be at its closest point to the earth—220,000 miles. The shot reportedly will be an attempt to orbit a 375-pound payload about the moon.

The launching vehicle will be an Atlas-Able IV, a four-stage rocket with an Atlas intercontinental range missile as the booster.

"There are only three or four days during the month when the moon is in a very favorable position, that is, when a rocket has the best chance of sending a payload in the vicinity," commented one.

"The fact that they launched the rocket at a time when the moon is in a least favorable position indicates the Russians are staging a propaganda show prior to Premier Khrushchev's visit to the United States."

Basic Wardrobe Made Easy By Mix, Match Tops

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Homework is fun for the girl who knows how to make a suppiy of gay, colorful tops for her skirts, shorts and slacks.

You can work out your own basic pattern for a simple, kimono-sleeve top that has only two seams, then make it up in different fabrics and colors, with rick-rack or other trim. Directions have been worked out by local sewing center experts, simple enough for the rankest amateur to follow.

To make this basic blouse you need a yard and a half of sailcloth or other fabric 36 inches wide, two packages of jumbo rick - rack braid in contrasting colors and 14 buttons.

Draw your pattern on paper, following these measuresments for a size 10 or 12: About 34 inches straight across the top, measure down eight inches for sleeve opening, in about eight inches, slanting down so that armhole is 10 inches deep, then straight down side from armhole 18 inches.

Place pattern on fabric and cut two identical pieces for back and front, slitting front section from neck to hem, for opening. To assemble, place right sides together and stitch, allowing a half inch for seams and leaving an opening of 11½ inches at the neck.

Add boil - proof rick - rack or other trim, hand hem neck and sleeves, pink seams and blindstitch bottom hem. For larger sizes measure bust and add three inches, adjusting rest of pattern accordingly.

Ladies Sanctuary Society Makes Plans For Bazaar

At the August meeting of the Ladies Sanctuary Society of Good Shepherd Parish, Monroe, Father Dave Dabria announced the organization of a discussion club to be held in conjunction with the Society's activities. Father Dave, who is the Society's spiritual advisor, announced that a leaders' meeting will be held on September 21, at 7:30 p.m., at St. Matthews, and that the booklet for study this year would be "The Mass."

The meeting was held in the home of Mrs. Roy Kelly, 213 Riverside Drive, with Mrs. Paul Goldman presiding. Other business of the meeting included reports by the various circle chairmen, plans for the forthcoming bazaar, September 25 and September 26, and announcement that there would be no sanctuary meeting in September.

Circle No. 1, according to Miss Leona Biggar, plans a rummage sale for September 19, Circle No. 2 a cake sale, Circle No. 3 per Mrs. Fred Schmitz, the sale of religious articles for the Christmas holidays, beginning the first Sunday in October, and Circle No. 4 per Mrs. John Hawkins, plans to present a five - minute period at each meeting devoted to such matters as the lives of the saints, church doctrine and church history. Miss Josephine Cascio offered to continue as assistant sacristan to Mrs. Orrie White, Jr. for the month of September. Mrs. Ben Breard, who had undertaken to prepare frozen gumbo and spaghetti for the bazaar reported that she had sold all her orders in advance. The vice president, Mrs. E. F. Dalton, who is leaving soon for Lafayette, was given a parting gift from the members as a token of their appreciation. The door prize for the meeting, a religious picture brought here from Mexico by Father Dabria, was given to Mrs. Goldman.

Before closing the meeting with a prayer Father Dave made a brief talk. He expressed his gratitude for their help in securing the bag which now holds the solemn set of vestments of Good Shepherd parish and conveyed his thanks to Nicholas Bruno for his assistance. As a final word Father encouraged the women to participate in the discussion groups.

Basic Wardrobe Made Easy By Mix, Match Tops

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Homework is fun for the girl who knows how to make a suppiy of gay, colorful tops for her skirts, shorts and slacks.

You can work out your own basic pattern for a simple, kimono-sleeve top that has only two seams, then make it up in different fabrics and colors, with rick-rack or other trim. Directions have been worked out by local sewing center experts, simple enough for the rankest amateur to follow.

To make this basic blouse you need a yard and a half of sailcloth or other fabric 36 inches wide, two packages of jumbo rick - rack braid in contrasting colors and 14 buttons.

Draw your pattern on paper, following these measuresments for a size 10 or 12: About 34 inches straight across the top, measure down eight inches for sleeve opening, in about eight inches, slanting down so that armhole is 10 inches deep, then straight down side from armhole 18 inches.

Place pattern on fabric and cut two identical pieces for back and front, slitting front section from neck to hem, for opening. To assemble, place right sides together and stitch, allowing a half inch for seams and leaving an opening of 11½ inches at the neck.

Add boil - proof rick - rack or other trim, hand hem neck and sleeves, pink seams and blindstitch bottom hem. For larger sizes measure bust and add three inches, adjusting rest of pattern accordingly.

Ladies Sanctuary Society Makes Plans For Bazaar

At the August meeting of the Ladies Sanctuary Society of Good Shepherd Parish, Monroe, Father Dave Dabria announced the organization of a discussion club to be held in conjunction with the Society's activities. Father Dave, who is the Society's spiritual advisor, announced that a leaders' meeting will be held on September 21, at 7:30 p.m., at St. Matthews, and that the booklet for study this year would be "The Mass."

The meeting was held in the home of Mrs. Roy Kelly, 213 Riverside Drive, with Mrs. Paul Goldman presiding. Other business of the meeting included reports by the various circle chairmen, plans for the forthcoming bazaar, September 25 and September 26, and announcement that there would be no sanctuary meeting in September.

Circle No. 1. according to Miss Leona Biggar, plans a rummage sale for September 19, Circle No. 2 a cake sale, Circle No. 3 per Mrs. Fred Schmitz, the sale of religious articles for the Christmas holidays, beginning the first Sunday in October, and Circle No. 4 per Mrs. John Hawkins, plans to present a five - minute period at each meeting devoted to such matters as the lives of the saints, church doctrine and church history. Miss Josephine Cascio offered to continue as assistant sacristan to Mrs. Orrie White, Jr. for the month of September. Mrs. Ben Breard, who had undertaken to prepare frozen gumbo and spaghetti for the bazaar reported that she had sold all her orders in advance. The vice president, Mrs. E. F. Dalton, who is leaving soon for Lafayette, was given a parting gift from the members as a token of their appreciation. The door prize for the meeting, a religious picture brought here from Mexico by Father Dabria, was given to Mrs. Goldman.

Before closing the meeting with a prayer Father Dave made a brief talk. He expressed his gratitude for their help in securing the bag which now holds the solemn set of vestments of Good Shepherd parish and conveyed his thanks to Nicholas Bruno for his assistance. As a final word Father encouraged the women to participate in the discussion groups.

MRS. WAYNE JORDAN

Girl Scout News

When we wrote about the swimming classes we didn't know about the little pins the Red Cross gives to denote classification. They, too, will be at the office for girls who successfully completed the tests.

One more report on summer activities, this time on the sewing class taught by Mrs. Donn Kurtz. The six - day course, intended for girls who had not sewed before, included use of the sewing machine, cutting by a pattern, basting, hemming, making an apron. Their teacher says the girls did all these things very creditably. One member of the group, Mary Tom Keller, of Troop 2, went further, completing all the requirements of the Seamstress badge. Some of these are to lengthen a dress, darn a sock so that it can be worn, make a useful article for the home, a dress accessory, and other not-so-easy requirements.

Mary Tom took advantage of other opportunities to make a worthwhile summer, earning the Pottery badge in a class early in the summer and taking part in the swimming program. Others in the sewing class were: Sue Spight, Jonna Revex, [illegible] cy Pounds, Donna King, Loretta Jones, Cheryl Montgomery, Mary Jane Allen, Linda Mantrozos, Devon Barlow. The girls and their parents and the council program committee are grateful to Mrs. Kurtz for making the lessons possible.

We hope that the girls in the summer pottery class and others who made pieces in their troops will begin taking them to the office for exhibit at the Caldwell art festival in Columbia on October 17. The council has had an exhibit of the Scouts' work eaih year of the festival, last year's winning eleven ribbons.

With school in full swing, it's time for gerular school year, once-a-week troop meetings. We hope to be able to report soon that all of last year's are starting their fall program and that organization of new ones and reorganization where needed are underway. The neighborhood chairman and the troop organizer, where these volunteens are available, are responsible for organizing and maintaining troops. The office can put any inquirer in touch with the proper person to help. The council furnished organizational material, training for adult volunteers, and program opportunities and materials.

The training schedule will come out in the September bulletin. There will be refresher sessions for experienced leaders and a group leadership course for new leaders, including those who started troops late in the spring. A long - needed piece of equipment, a record player, was acquired during the summer. It proved its usefulness in teaching songs at Pine Wood day camp, and will get still further use in training sessions.

Jordan-Roark Vows Read In West Monroe

Baskets of white gladioli, greenery and white candles formed a background in the Free Methodist church of West Monroe, for the wedding of Miss Bettye Roark and Wayne Jordan, solemnized at 6:30 p.m. August 29, with Rev. H. A. Smith officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Roark, of Olla and Mr. Jordan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jordan of Calhoun.

Traditional wedding music was provided at the organ by Miss Wanda Sue Lenard, who accompanied Miss Marie Jordan, as she sang "I Love You Truly" and "Whither Thou Goest."

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Donald C. Roark. She wore a chapel length gown of Chantilly lace and tulle, designed with a fitted bodice of lace which extended into a panier drape overskirt. The Sabrina neckline was encrusted with iridescent sequins which were repeated on the lace rosette appliques on the bouffant tulle skirt. Her veil cascaded from a pearl tiara and the carried a bouquet of white feathered chrysanthemums and tuberoses on a white Bible.

Mrs. Donald C. Roark, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a pastel blue silk organza frock with matching headdress and short white gloves. Her bouquet was a nosegay of crown asters and pink amaryllis.

Roy Avant served as best man and ushers were Dale Meachum and John Aulds.

Immediately following the exchange of vows a reception was held in the church parlor. The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with an arrangement of crown asters and pink amaryllis. Mrs. Lamar Prisock served the tiered wedding cake, which was topped with a miniature bride and groom and the punch bowl was presided over by Mrs. Jack Gaston. Miss Wanda Jordan, sister of the bridegroom, had charge of the guest book.

When the couple left on a wedding trip to Baton Rouge, the bride was attired in a two-piece ensemble of brown with white accessories and a corsage from her bouquet. The couple will establish a home in Baton Rouge, where Mr. Jordan is a junior student at L. S. U.

NEW YORK (AP) — The player comes ahead of the writer in the Broadway plans of produer Anna Sosenko.

Having obtained the stage rights to "Age Cannot Wither," a book about the romance of actress Eleonara Duse and Gabriele D'Annunzio, Miss Sosenko is first seeking her feminine lead.

After that she will choose an adapter. Her idea is that knowing who will play the role should help the playwright create his scrip.

Japanese is spoken by about 97 million people.

Lafferty-Moss Marriage Held In Columbia

The First Methodist Church in Columbia was the setting for the double ring ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Aimie Lee Moss, daughter of Mrs. Edna Moss of Lafayette, and James Marvin Lafferty, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lafferty of Columbia on August 28.

Rev. S. A. Seegars performed the ceremony assisted by the pastor, Rev. Douglas I. Williams.

The couple stood under an arch entwined with clematis centered with white wedding bells flanked on either side by standard baskets of lilies. Cathedral tapers were used in branched candelabra on the altar.

Mrs. Erby E. Meredith presented the nuptial music and accompanied the soloist, Miss Martha Ann Lafferty of West Monroe, who sang "One Alone," and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was escorted to the altar by the groom's father. Her wedding gown of bridal satin with Chantilly lace trim had long sleeves that came to a petal point. Her fingertip veil was attached to a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of tu[illegible]roses centered with a white orchid.

Mrs. Jimmy B. Rowland, maid of honor, was dressed in a pastel pink crystalline dress with lace bolero and a matching hat of petal points bordered with seed pearls and sequins. Her flowers were white. Jimmy B. Rowland served as best man and Donald Farrow of Ruston and Neil Riser of Columbia were ushers.

RECEPTION

The reception was held in the social room of the church, which was adorned with caladiums, white lilies and greenery.

The bride's table covered with a lace cloth over pink, was centered by the bride's bouquet and the tiered wedding confection embossed in pink roses. Mrs. Fred Lafferty of West Monroe served the cake. Presiding at the punch bowl was Mrs. Sidney Taylor.

Tea girls were Miss Georgia Taylor of Monroe, Mrs. Kenneth Smith of Monroe and Miss Sue Rowland of Columbia. Mrs. Huey Gregory, sister of the groom, presided at the guest book.

For their wedding trip to Biloxi, Mississippi, the bride wore a forest green suit with black trim, white feather hat and black accessories and the orchid from her corsage.

The couple will be at home in Monroe.

The bride is a graduate La-fayette High School an[d] the bridegroom graduated from Columbia High School and Southwestern in Lafayette.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lafferty, Miss Martha Ann Lafferty of West Monroe, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Farrow of Ruston, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Taylor, Miss Georgia Taylor and Mrs. Kenneth Smith of Monroe and E. J. Lafferty of Holum.

BETTER CRUSTS

Many good cooks find it most satisfactory to bake their fruit pies on a low oven rack. This browns the bottom crust rapidly and helps to keep it from being soggy.

Storage

Some lovely glass will not be put away, but will be kept in full view where it can be appreciated. Avoid crowding too many pieces in one location and if handcrafted crystal plates are to be displayed, see that there is a plate rail or groove which will keep them in position or hammer a staple or a couple of thumbtacks into a wooden shelf or mantel to keep the plates from sliding. Glass that is to be displayed deserves frequent soap and water washings to keep it lustrous and sparkling.

Stemware should be stored rim up, if possible. If space is at a premium, set one glass rim up and the next base up and so on. A rubber mat on the shelves will help to cushion glassware from shock. If tumblers or bowls are stacked and two stick together, pour cool water into the inner one and set the outer one in warm water. This will loosen them quickly. Put paper doilies or napkins between stacked plates. This prevents chipping or scratching. Glasses should be stored by type front to back. When stored in this fashion it will not be necessary to reach over tall pieces to get to low ones.

WHEN BROILING LAMB

Don't broil lamb chops until they are dry and grayish-brown throughout! A medium - broiled chop should show a tinge of pink.

Coffee is the leading export of Ethiopa. The word "coffee' is said to have come from the province of Kaffa in Ethiopia.

Crossett Schools Up Registration

CROSSETT (Special) — Enrollment in the Crossett public schools was up by 11 students on opening day. The first day's enrollment was 2,790, compared to 2,779 on the first day of school last year.

One thousand four hundred and ninety-five of these students were enrolled in the elementary schools and 1,295 in the high schools. Elementary school enrollment was lower by 14 pupils and the high school enrollment was up 25 pupils. Total enrollment figures reached 3,005 last year, and is expected to reach or exceed that figure this year.

The new classrooms at the T. W. Daniel School were ready for occupancy. The Calhoun cafetorium will be available at the beginning of next week. These new facilities provide adequate housing for all students except in the case of Crossett High School, which is badly over-crowded.

It will be necessary to conduct classes there in the health room, teachers' lunchroom, and the school store. This condition cannot be relieved until the new high school building, now under construction, is completed later this school term.

When Betsy Ross made the first American flag, it was unfurled for the first time at the Battle of Brandywine, Pa. on Sept. 11, 1777.

Marker Honors Steamboat Era At Columbia

COLUMBIA (Special) — The Caldwell Parish Library Art Festival will be held in Columbia on Oct. 17. The theme of the 1959 festival will be the Ouachita River with tales and scenes of the river as a special category.

In conjunction with the theme, the state will place a marker commemorating the steamboat era at Columbia, which was the only settlement between Monroe and Black River.

The marker will list some of the steamboat captains before and after the Civil War.

Research for the marker was done by Mrs. O.N. Reynolds and Mrs. John W. Crump. Assisting them were Miss Willie Mae Seab, Caldwell Parish librarian and co-chairman of the festival and Mrs. E. R. Whitman.

Theodore Roosevelt, before he became President, bought a couple of ranches in North Dakota. He was promptly named a deputy sheriff of Billings County.

Nehru Takes Tougher Tone Against Reds

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru got tougher Saturday in his talks about Communist Chinese attacks on Indian soil. He called Red China an "aggressor" nation and warned that India would never yield to Chinese claims on large areas of Indian territory.

"It is absurd. It involves a fundamental change of geography," Nehru told a heated session of Parliament.

He said India would not "resort to compulsion of race, whatever may happen," but "what we have to face today is a great and powerful nation which is aggressive. It is aggressive with or without communism."

Nehru said recent maps issued by the Peiping government made it increasingly apparent the Chinese are claiming for the first time large areas belonging to India.

In recent months the Chinese have claimed 35,000 miles of Indian territory along the 1,250-mile border of India and Tibet, most of it is in the Northeast Frontier Agency of India.

There is "no question" of yielding to those claims, Nehru said. "A mile of territory here or there can be adjusted within the framework of the McMahon line," Nehru said, but not much more. India recognizes the 1914 McMahon line drawn by the British as its northern border, but China does not.

Nehru rejected a suggestion that India "bomb" out Chinese troops still occupying Longju, in the Northeast Frontier Agency. He said India's approach to the border dispute should be "peaceful, restrained, controlled, but firm."

He admitted he had been slow in letting Parliament know the seriousness of the border dispute, for he had hoped it might be settled "without much publicity."

But he said there was growing evidence of a 'basic change in the Chinese attitude toward India." He said recently the Chinese had even complained about the passage of a small Indian ship called the "Magar" through Chinese territorial waters.

Mergers Changing Many Brand Names

HOUSTON (AP) — Oilmen probably will record 1959 as a year of mergers.

Business has been pretty good but mergers have been thriving.

Part of the trend toward pooling of resources and efforts is a result of a lesson learned in the recession that followed the early 1957 Suez crisis prosperity boom.

Many operators, some with surprise, learned their purse strings could be tightened in a number of ways without hindering efficiency.

Maneuvers designed to improve competitive positions are a major factor in most merger actions but economy of operations figures prominently in the current parade.

Several years will be needed to complete some of the transactions.

Some of the consolidations will be carried directly to the average motorist. Several old and popular brand names will disappear from service stations across the nation. Several marketers whose names have long meant gasoline to millions of motorists will be dissolved.

The 1959 merger actions include:

1. Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) plans to group all its domestic production and marketing affiliates under one headquarters.

2. Socony Mobil Oil Co. Inc. is placing all its United States holdings under one division.

3. Texaco Inc. plans to acquire Superior Oil Co. of California. The deal could become a record transaction involving nearly 800 million dollars.

4. Skelly Oil Co. and Tidewater Oil Co. are merging. Tidewater's J. Paul Getty holds controlling interests in both companies.

5. Signal Oil & Gas Co. has acquired Eastern States Petroleum & Chemical Co.

The rash of mergers also includes Continental Oil Co. buying San Jacinto Petroleum Co., Ohio Oil acquiring Aurora Gasoline Co. and Texaco Inc. obtaining Paragon Oil Co.

Socony announced its reorganization plans last month. Jersey Standard followed last week.

Mobil Oil Co. is to become Socony's domestic operator. Mobil will absorb such Socony subsidiaries as Magnolia Petroleum Co., General Petroleum Corp., and Mobil Producing Co. The new company will use the name Mobil throughout its operations.

Jersey Standard has not worked out its brand name problem as yet. Jersey first plans to obtain the few outstanding shares—less than 2 per cent—of its huge Texas affiliate, Humble Oil & Refining Co. Then all the domestic producing and marketing operations will be placed under a new Humble firm to be incorporated in Delaware.

Operating under the new Humble will be Esso Standard Oil Co., Carter Oil Co., Oklahoma Oil Co., and Pate Oil Co.

The four probably will operate some while as divisions of Humble but under their current names. Eventually, however, the new Humble is expected to spread its name throughout the nation.

Humble's current exploration and producing operations extend across southern states from Florida to California. It has retail outlets only in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

Small Cars Test Theory On Styling

By JACK VANDENBERG
UPI Automotive Editor

DETROIT (UPI) —The long-standing belief of the auto industry that a car must have sleek, long, low lines to appeal to the American motorist will be given its first real test during 1960.

The compact cars the auto industry will offer to the American public in a few months will have a wide variety of styling, ranging from the low sleek lines of Chevrolet's rear-engine Corvair to the abrupt, high-headroom styling of American Motors' Rambler.

The new "big three" compact cars will base their appeal to the public, in varying degrees, on the attraction of sleek styling.

But the Rambler and Studebaker-Packard's Lark, which got a head start in the field, hope styling built around interior roominess will give them continued leadership in the field.

"We have a different concept of what constitutes good styling," said AM President George Romney. "We have not permitted styling or other objectives to compromise the basic engineering of our product.

"We won't change our styling if it sacrifices comfort. We will change our styling only to improve, not to obsolete last year's model."

He said he felt styling could be modern without having long, low lines.

The 1960 Rambler carries out Romney's ideas on styling. It is not drastically changed from the styling of the 1959 Rambler. However, it looks like a bigger car and feels bigger inside.

The Studebaker-Packard Lark, which surprised many with its interior rominess in its initial year, will have basically the same styling in 1960.

Both the Rambler and the Lark have modern appearances in good taste but neither of them have lon or low lines.

Chevrolet's Corvair will have the lowest lines of any of the new compact cars. Its rear engine eliminated the need for a tunnel on the floor of the car to permit passage of the transmission and drive shaft from the front to the power wheels in the rear.

While elimination of the transmission tunnel gave GM engineers an opportunity to provide additional headroom in the Corvair, they chose touse it largely to give the car sleeker, lower lines.

Ford's Falcon and Chrysler's Valiant, while still containing the transmission tunnel, are designed as much as possible to get long, low lines which have become traditional in styling of larger cars because of the sales appeal these lines and had to buyers of the standard cars.

For years the motoring public has said it wanted more interior room in cars. But, from experience, the auto industry has learned the public doesn't always state its case precisely. The industry felt the public wanted more interior room without the sacrifice of long, low styling lines.

Strike Pay Losses Now $550 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Payroll losses due to the steel strike were reported by the government Saturday to have mounted to 550 million dollars.

In his third semimonthly survey of the effects of the strike which began July 15, Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell placed the number of workers idled by the dispute at 645,000 and said:

"The latest report for the last half of August pointed to heavy employment losses if the strike continues into next month, especially in metal-using industries and in trade and service activities."

Mitchell, who has been acting as President Eisenhower's fact finder in the steel situation, made no mention in his report of union-management negotiations now under way in New York, nor did he make any attempt to forecast settlement prospects.

Instead the report presented a detailed survey of conditions in 31 major steel-producing and steel-consuming areas for the six-week period from July 15-Aug. 31. These areas were described as representing more than four-fifths of the steel industry's total work force, and about half of the nation's employment in major steel-using industries.

The report noted an increase in relief and welfare applications in a number of key areas, particularly in Gary, Ind., and Canton, Cleveland, and Youngstown, Ohio. It said the Pittsburgh area received nearly 7,000 relief applications from strikers through the end of August.

Grain Prices End Week On Lower Note

CHICAGO (AP)—Rallies were brief and few in the grain futures market this week and all contracts on the Board of Trade trended lower.

Net setbacks generally were within the one to two cent range and were fairly well distributed throughout the list.

Stiffest pressure was on the still unharvested corn and soybean contracts as daily reports indicated improved conditions and rapid development of the crops, both maturing earlier than usual and showing promise of yields at least equal to average.

The government's September report on Thursday, however, held some prospects of bolstering soybean prices, and it did for a short time on Friday.

Brokers called the estimated yield of 532½ million bushels at least mildly bullish since the figure was only about a million bushels above the August estimate when the outlook probbabiy was the poorest of the summer.

Dealers bid soybeans prices up a cent or more a bushel at Friday's opening. But prices at the close had slipped about two cents from their highs of the day.

Corn, the only grain which showed any significant bearish effect from the report, went into a decline and all the new crop contracts again slumped to new low prices for the season for the third time in the week.

Oats weakened with corn while wheat eased mainly because of slow commercial demand.

At the end of the week, wheat was ¼ cent a bushel higher to 1⅝ lower, September $1.91; corn 1½-1⅞ lower, September $1.16⅝-¾; oats ⅜-2¾ lower, September new type contract 66¼-⅛; rye unchanged to 1½ cents lower, soybeans ¾-2⅜ lower, September $2.07¾.

Cotton Futures Prices Hold To Narrow Range

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures prices held to a narrow range this week and closed mixed. Changes either way were small.

Active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange finished the holiday-shortened week at prices ranging from 25 cents a bale lower to 35 cents a bale higher than at the close of the week before.

Nearby October was helped by short covering prompted by a continued decline in the certificated stock, and made the best showing.

The more distant deliveries were aided by mill and spot house buying. Offerings were limited for the most part to light hedge selling and liquidation.

The government's second estimate of the new crop outlook, announced on Tuesday, had practically no effect on the market. The figure — 14,678,000 bales—was closely in line with what traders had expected.

There was some concern over the continuing decline in U. S. Cotton exports.

IN OIL INDUSTRY

Mergers Changing Many Brand Names

HOUSTON (AP) — Oilmen probably will record 1959 as a year of mergers.

Business has been pretty good but mergers have been thriving.

Part of the trend toward pooling of resources and efforts is a result of a lesson learned in the recession that followed the early 1957 Suez crisis prosperity boom.

Many operators, some with surprise, learned their purse strings could be tightened in a number of ways without hindering efficiency.

Maneuvers designed to improve competitive positions are a major factor in most merger actions but economy of operations figures prominently in the current parade.

Several years will be needed to complete some of the transactions.

Some of the consolidations will be carried directly to the average motorist. Several old and popular brand names will disappear from service stations across the nation. Several marketers whose names have long meant gasoline to millions of motorists will be dissolved.

The 1959 merger actions include:

1. Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) plans to group all its domestic production and marketing affiliates under one headquarters.

2. Socony Mobil Oil Co. Inc. is placing all its United States holdings under one division.

3. Texaco Inc. plans to acquire Superior Oil Co. of California. The deal could become a record transaction involving nearly 800 million dollars.

4. Skelly Oil Co. and Tidewater Oil Co. are merging. Tidewater's J. Paul Getty holds controlling interests in both companies.

5. Signal Oil & Gas Co. has acquired Eastern States Petroleum & Chemical Co.

The rash of mergers also includes Continental Oil Co. buying San Jacinto Petroleum Co., Ohio Oil acquiring Aurora Gasoline Co. and Texaco Inc. obtaining Paragon Oil Co.

Socony announced its reorganization plans last month. Jersey Standard followed last week.

Mobil Oil Co. is to become Socony's domestic operator. Mobill will absorb such Socony subsidiaries as Magnolia Petroleum Co., General Petroleum Corp., and Mobil Producing Co. The new company will use the name Mobil throughout its operations.

Jersey Standard has not worked out its brand name problem as yet. Jersey first plans to obtain the few outstanding shares—less than 2 per cent—of its huge Texas affiliate, Humble Oil & Refining Co. Then all the domestic producing and marketing operations will be placed under a new Humble firm to be incorporated in Delaware.

Operating under the new Humble will be Esso Standard Oil Co., Carter Oil Co., Oklahoma Oil Co., and Pate Oil Co.

The four probably will operate some while as divisions of Humble but under their current names. Eventually, however, the new Humble is expected to spread its name throughout the nation.

Humble's current exploration and producing operations extend across southern states from Florida to California. It has retail outlets only in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

Strike Pay Losses Now $550 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Payroll losses due to the steel strike were reported by the government Saturday to have mounted to 550 million dollars.

In his third semimonthly survey of the effects of the strike which began July 15, Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell placed the number of workers idled by the dispute at 645,000 and said:

"The latest report for the last half of August pointed to heavy employment losses if the strike continues into next month, especially in metal-using industries and in trade and service activities."

Mitchell, who has been acting as President Eisenhower's fact finder in the steel situation, made no mention in his report of union-management negotiations now under way in New York, nor did he make any attempt to forecast settlement prospects.

Instead the report presented a detailed survey of conditions in 31 major steel-producing and steel-consuming areas for the six-week period from July 15-Aug. 31. These areas were described as representing more than four-fifths of the steel industry's total work force, and about half of the nation's employment in major steel-using industries.

The report noted an increase in relief and welfare applications in a number of key areas, particularly in Gary, Ind., and Canton, Cleveland, and Youngstown, Ohio. It said the Pittsburgh area received nearly 7,000 relief applications from strikers through the end of August.

Small Cars Test Theory On Styling

By JACK VANDENBERG
UPI Automotive Editor

DETROIT (UPI) —The long-standing belief of the auto industry that a car must have sleek, long, low lines to appeal to the American motorist will be given its first real test during 1960.

The compact cars the auto industry will offer to the American public in a few months will have a wide variety of styling, ranging from the low sleek lines of Chevrolet's rear-engine Corvair to the abrupt, high-headroom styling of American Motors' Rambler.

The new "big three" compact cars will base their appeal to the public, in varying degrees, on the attraction of sleek styling.

But the Rambler and Studebaker-Packard's Lark, which got a head start in the field, hope styling built around interior roominess will give them continued leadership in the field.

"We have a different concept of what constitutes good styling," said AM President George Romney. "We have not permitted styling or other objectives to compromise the basic engineering of our product.

"We won't change our styling if it sacrifices comfort. We will change our styling only to improve, not to obsolete last year's model."

He said he felt styling could be modern without having long, low lines.

The 1960 Rambler carries out Romney's ideas on styling. It is not drastically changed from the styling of the 1959 Rambler. However, it looks like a bigger car and feels bigger inside.

The Studebaker-Packard Lark, which surprised many with its interior rominess in its initial year, will have basically the same styling in 1960.

Both the Rambler and the Lark have modern appearances in good taste but neither of them have lon or low lines.

Chevrolet's Corvair will have the lowest lines of any of the new compact cars. Its rear engine eliminated the need for a tunnel on the floor of the car to permit passage of the transmission and drive shaft from the front to the power wheels in the rear.

While elimination of the transmission tunnel gave GM engineers an opportunity to provide additional headroom in the Corvair, they chose touse it largely to give the car sleeker, lower lines.

Ford's Falcon and Chrysler's Valiant, while still containing the transmission tunnel, are designed as much as possible to get long, low lines which have become traditional in styling of larger cars because of the sales appeal these lines and had to buyers of the standard cars.

For years the motoring public has said it wanted more interior room in cars. But, from experience, the auto industry has learned the public doesn't always state its case precisely. The industry felt the public wanted more interior room without the sacrifice of long, low styling lines.

Grain Prices End Week On Lower Note

CHICAGO (AP)—Rallies were brief and few in the grain futures market this week and all contracts on the Board of Trade trended lower.

Net setbacks generally were within the one to two cent range and were fairly well distributed throughout the list.

Stiffest pressure was on the still unharvested corn and soybean contracts as daily reports indicated improved conditions and rapid development of the crops, both maturing earlier than usual and showing promise of yields at least equal to average.

The government's September report on Thursday, however, held some prospects of bolstering soybean prices, and it did for a short time on Friday.

Brokers called the estimated yield of 532½ million bushels at least mildly bullish since the figure was only about a million bushels above the August estimate when the outlook probbably was the poorest of the summer.

Dealers bid soybeans prices up a cent or more a bushel at Friday's opening. But prices at the close had slipped about two cents from their highs of the day.

Corn, the only grain which showed any significant bearish effect from the report, went into a decline and all the new crop contracts again slumped to new low prices for the season for the third time in the week.

Oats weakened with corn while wheat eased mainly because of slow commercial demand.

At the end of the week, wheat was ¼ cent a bushel higher to 1⅝ lower, September $1.91; corn 1½-1⅞ lower, September $1.16⅝-¾; oats ⅜-2¾ lower, September new type contract 66¼-⅛; rye unchanged to 1½ cents lower, soybeans ¾-2⅜ lower, September $2.07¾.

Cotton Futures Prices Hold To Narrow Range

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures prices held to a narrow range this week and closed mixed. Changes either way were small.

Active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange finished the holiday-shortened week at prices ranging from 25 cents a bale lower to 35 cents a bale higher than at the close of the week before.

Nearby October was helped by short covering prompted by a continued decline in the certificated stock, and made the best showing.

The more distant deliveries were aided by mill and spot house buying. Offerings were limited for the most part to light hedge selling and liquidation.

The government's second estimate of the new crop outlook, announced on Tuesday, had practically no effect on the market. The figure — 14,678,000 bales—was closely in line with what traders had expected.

There was some concern over the continuing decline in U. S. Cotton exports.

END PREPARATIONS

Capital In Flurry Over Khrush Visit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's fateful American visit had the capital in a flurry of final preparations Saturday, stirred with a preview of surprises to be expected by the newest Russian moon shot.

Congress was rushing for adjournment by Monday night, partly to avoid any question of the world's top Communist addressing a joint session after his plane touches down at Andrews, Md., Air Force base at 10:3; a.m. EST Tuesday.

State Department planners had a long weekend in store tying up loose ends of airlifting an entourage of more than 500 Russian and United States officials and press corps coast-to-coast, in and out of five hotels and through a schedule ranging from Franklin Roosevelt's grave to Disneyland.

At the White House, press secretary James C. Hagerty shrugged off the propaganda-timed rocket shoot—intended to reach the moon just before Khrushchev arrives—as "no surprise." Hagerty said it was known both the United States and Russia have the capability to make such shots.

Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) sprung a last-minute surprise with announcement he had arranged privately with Soviet Ambassador Mikhail A. Kenshikov for Khrushchev to visit for an hour next Wednesday with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The State Department had not announced the meeting. Fulbright made the offer and the embassy notified him Saturday Khrushchev would be glad to spend an hour at "tea" with committee members who could be present. It will be his only formal congressional contact.

President Eisenhower himself took off for a day of relaxation on the golf course near Gettysburg, Pa., on a cool, sunny day that broke six weeks of the worst summer heat in Washington memory.

Biggest headache of all was that of the State Department security agents and Secret Service who had made elaborate precautions for the safety of the Russian leader and his family that began with putting no-skid substance on the 27 steps of the specially-built wooden ramp on which he will descend from his plane.

There will be 40,000 men guarding Khrushchev, his wife, two daughters and son-in-law on American soil. They include security agents, plainclothes detectives, troops, and police of the cities they visit.

The State Department security section under former FBI agent Elmer Hipsley voiced confidence Khrushchev would be fully protected. But no one was forgetting the consequences that an act of violence, successful or not, could bring—particularly with President Eisenhower returning the visit in October.

One of the biggest imponderables was the reception the American public will give Khrushchev.

President Eisenhower has asked that he be treated with the courtesy and respect due a guest.

It was not likely accidental that Khrushchev will drive into Washington during the noon hour Tuesday, assuring that there will be crowds of thousands of office workers on the streets. Nor that the first chance the public will get to show their disposition toward Khrushchev will be when he is accompanied by Eisenhower. The President will go clear out to a runway at the Andrews base 500 feet from the public area to greet the premier and then walk back with him to a platform for the ceremonials.

Church groups were asking for special prayers during the visit. Richard Cardinal Cushing of Boston called for a special novena (nine days of prayer) beginning when Khrushchev sets foot on American soil.

END PREPARATIONS

Capital In Flurry Over Khrush Visit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's fateful American visit had the capital in a flurry of final preparations Saturday, stirred with a preview of surprises to be expected by the newest Russian moon shot.

Congress was rushing for adjournment by Monday night, partly to avoid any question of the world's top Communist addressing a joint session after his plane touches down at Andrews, Md., Air Force base at 10:3; a.m. EST Tuesday.

State Department planners had a long weekend in store tying up loose ends of airlifting an entourage of more than 500 Russian and United States officials and press corps coast-to-coast, in and out of five hotels and through a schedule ranging from Franklin Roosevelt's grave to Disneyland.

At the White House, press secretary James C. Hagerty shrugged off the propaganda-timed rocket shoot—intended to reach the moon just before Khrushchev arrives—as "no surprise." Hagerty said it was known both the United States and Russia have the capability to make such shots.

Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) sprung a last-minute surprise with announcement he had arranged privately with Soviet Ambassador Mikhail A. Kenshikov for Khrushchev to visit for an hour next Wednesday with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The State Department had not announced the meeting. Fulbright made the offer and the embassy notified him Saturday Khrushchev would be glad to spend an hour at "tea" with committee members who could be present. It will be his only formal congressional contact.

President Eisenhower himself took off for a day of relaxation on the golf course near Gettysburg, Pa., on a cool, sunny day that broke six weeks of the worst summer heat in Washington memory.

Biggest headache of all was that of the State Department security agents and Secret Service who had made elaborate precautions for the safety of the Russian leader and his family that began with putting no-skid substance on the 27 steps of the specially-built wooden ramp on which he will descend from his plane.

There will be 40,000 men guarding Khrushchev, his wife, two daughters and son-in-law on American soil. They include security agents, plainclothes detectives, troops, and police of the cities they visit.

The State Department security section under former FBI agent Elmer Hipsley voiced confidence Khrushchev would be fully protected. But no one was forgetting the consequences that an act of violence, successful or not, could bring—particularly with President Eisenhower returning the visit in October.

One of the biggest imponderables was the reception the American public will give Khrushchev.

President Eisenhower has asked that he be treated with the courtesy and respect due a guest.

It was not likely accidental that Khrushchev will drive into Washington during the noon hour Tuesday, assuring that there will be crowds of thousands of office workers on the streets. Nor that the first chance the public will get to show their disposition toward Khrushchev will be when he is accompanied by Eisenhower. The President will go clear out to a runway at the Andrews base 500 feet from the public area to greet the premier and then walk back with him to a platform for the ceremonials.

Church groups were asking for special prayers during the visit. Richard Cardinal Cushing of Boston called for a special novena (nine days of prayer) beginning when Khrushchev sets foot on American soil.

Receives Tanks

BONN, Germany (UPI) The—West German army is receiving its first postwar German-made tanks, it was reported Thursday. The magazine Soldat and Technik said the tank is the CC2, a modification of the French-made Hotchkiss cargo carrier.

USE YOUR HEAD,

HERE'S ONE THAT CAN'T BE BEAT

It's located on a lovely 100x150 landscaped corner lot across from Lakeshore School. Even the largest family can enjoy "togetherness" in this 18x14 living room. One of the 3 bedrooms is attractively pine-paneled. The sparkling ceramic tile bath has a shower over tub. There'll be no winter "sniffles" or summer colds in this home 'cause it's centrally heated and has large attic fan. Dad will enjoy the double carport with the extra space in the storage room. Location, construction, and arrangement benefits alone make this home worth more than the asking price.

Get the most from Gross! It isn't often that a small home provides so many convenient living features and good traffic circulation. There's no wasted space anywhere. In less than 900 sq. ft., there are 3 good bedrooms, a roomy bath, a homemaker approved kitchen, and large living room. A nice carport and store room rounds out a home that you must see to believe.

On a country, tree-studded lot with all the conveniences of living in town, but without having to pay city taxes.

In the vast selection of plans used by Gross, none offers more house for the money.

We invite your inspection of our newly opened subdivision—all sites are studded with trees.

FENCE SITTER?

Trying to decide to buy or not to buy? Jump off the fence and onto this bargain if you have a family you're proud of and fond of. Here's a 2 bedroom cottage modestly priced. It's separate dining room makes every family meal something special. The entire family will enjoy relaxing on the inviting screened front porch. There'll be no worrying about the children's safety with this deep, fenced back yard (there'll also be shade for them under the large pecan trees). Yes, your family will insist after seeing this home that you get off the fence and become a home owner instead of renter.

FENCE SITTER?

Trying to decide to buy or not to buy? Jump off the fence and onto this bargain if you have a family you're proud of and fond of. Here's a 2 bedroom cottage modestly priced. It's separate dining room makes every family meal something special. The entire family will enjoy relaxing on the inviting screened front porch. There'll be no worrying about the children's safety with this deep, fenced back yard (there'll also be shade for them under the large pecan trees). Yes, your family will insist after seeing this home that you get off the fence and become a home owner instead of renter.

TIM TYLER'S LUCK by Lyman Young and Tom Massey
BUT, PROFESSOR ROBEY, WE CAN'T SEND THE WITCH DOCTOR TO PRISON ! WE MUST KEEP HIM HERE AND COMPEL HIM TO HELP HIS TRIBESMEN TO RETURN TO THEIR NORMAL HEIGHT—
AND BESIDES, HIS MAGIC BREW CAN POSSIBLY REDUCE YOU TO YOUR FORMER NATURAL SIZE !
NO-NO-THE STUFF MIGHT SHRINK ME TO PYGMY SIZE AS IT DID THOSE LOGANO PEOPLE !
AND YET, HOW AM I EVER TO MAKE A LIVING AGAIN ? NO ONE WOULD EMPLOY A GIANT SUCH AS I—
A CARAVAN IS APPROACHING, TYLER ! BRING ITS LEADER TO ME !
MR. SINGLY IS A CIRCUS AGENT LOOKING FOR NEW-ATTRACTIONS, SIR—
THE WORLD'S TALLEST MAN ! I'LL GIVE HIM $25,000 A YEAR STARTING NOW !
IT'S AN OFFER YOU CAN'T REFUSE, MR. GIANT !
BUT, PROFESSOR ! YOU CAN'T WALK OUT ON THE LOGANO TRIBES-MEN UNTIL YOU'VE DISCOVERED HOW TO RESTORE THEM TO THEIR ORIGINAL SIZE !
NO AMOUNT OF GOLD WILL TEMPT ME TO SHIRK MY DUTY, GENTLEMEN ! I SHALL REMAIN !
